THE PREFACE.

IT is a maxim in the science of legislation and government, that Laws are of no avail without manners; or, to explain the sentence more fully, that the best intended legislative provisions would have no beneficial effect even at first, and none at all in a short course of time, unless they were congenial to the disposition and habits, to the religious prejudices, and approved immemorial usages, of the people, for whom they were enacted; especially if that people universally and sincerely believed, that all their ancient usages and established rules of conduct had the sanction of an actual revelation from heaven: the legislature of Britain having shown, in compliance with this maxim, an intention to leave the natives of these Indian provinces in possession of their own Laws, at least on the titles of contracts and inheritances, we may humbly presume, that all future provisions, for the administration of justice and government in India, will be conformable, as far as the natives are affected by them, to the manners and opinions of the natives themselves; an object, which cannot possibly be attained, until those manners and opinions can be fully and accurately known. These considerations, and a few others more immediately within my province, were my principal motives for wishing to know, and have induced me at length to publish, that system of duties, religious and civil, and of law in all its branches, which the Hindus firmly believe to have been promulged in the beginning of time by MENU, son or grandson of BRAHMA, or, in plain language, the first of created beings, and not the oldest only, but the holiest, of legislators; a system so comprehensive and so minutely exact, that it may be considered as the Institutes of Hindu Law, preparatory to the copious Digest, which has lately been compiled by Pandits of eminent learning, and introductory perhaps to a Code, which may supply the many natural defects in the old jurisprudence of this country, and, without any deviation from its principles, accommodate it justly to the improvements of a commercial age.

WE are lost in an inextricable labyrinth of imaginary astronomical cycles, Yugas, Maháyugas, Calpas, and Menwantaras, in attempting to calculate the time, when the first MENU, according to the Bráhmens, governed this world, and became the progenitor of mankind, who from him are called mánaváh; nor can we, so clouded are the old history and chronology of India with fables and allegories, ascertain the precise age, when the work, now presented to the publick, was actually composed; but we are in possession of some evidence, partly extrinsick and partly internal, that it is really one of the oldest compositions existing. From a text of PARA'SARA, discovered by Mr. DAVIS, it appears, that the vernal equinox had gone back from the tenth degree of Bharanì to the first of Aświnì, or twenty-three degrees and twenty minutes, between the days of that Indian philosopher, and the year of our Lord 499, when it coincided with the origin of the Hindu ecliptick; so that PARA'SARA probably flourished near the close of the twelfth century before CHRIST: now PARA'SARA was the grandson of another sage, named VAS'ISHT'HA, who is often mentioned in the Laws of MENU, and once as contemporary with the divine BHRI'GU himself; but the character of BHRI'GU, and the whole dramatical arrangement of the book before us, are clearly fictitious and ornamental, with a design, too common among ancient lawgivers, of stamping authority on the work by the introduction of supernatural personages, though VASISHT'HA may have lived many generations before the actual writer of it; who names him, indeed, in one or two places as a philosopher in an earlier period. The style, however, and metre of this work (which there is not the smallest reason to think affectedly obsolete) are widely different from the language and metrical rules of CA'LIDA'S, who unquestionably wrote before the beginning of our era; and the dialect of MENU is even observed in many passages to resemble that of the Véda, particularly in a departure from the more modern grammatical forms; whence it must at first view seem very probable, that the laws, now brought to light, were considerably older than those of SOLON or even of LYCURGUS, although the promulgation of them, before they were reduced to writing, might have been coeval with the first monarchies established in Egypt or Asia: but, having had the singular good fortune to procure ancient copies of eleven Upanishads with a very perspicuous comment, I am enabled to fix with more exactness the probable age of the work before us, and even to limit its highest possible age, by a mode of reasoning, which may be thought new, but will be found, I persuade myself, satisfactory; if the publick shall on this occasion give me credit for a few very curious facts, which, though capable of strict proof, can at present be only asserted. The Sanſcrit of the three first Védas (I need not here speak of the fourth), that of the Mánava Dherma Sástra, and that of the Puránas, differ from each other in pretty exact proportion to the Latin of NUMA, from whose laws entire sentences are preserved, that of APPIUS, which we see in the fragments of the Twelve Tables, and that of CICERO, or of LUCRETIUS, where he has not affected an obsolete style: if the several changes, therefore, of Sanſcrit and Latin took place, as we may fairly assume, in times very nearly proportional, the Védas must have been written about 300 years before these Institutes, and about 600 before the Puránas and Itihásas, which, I am fully convinced, were not the productions of VYA'SA; so that, if the son of PARA'SARA committed the traditional Védas to writing in the Sanſcrit of his father's time, the original of this book must have received its present form about 880 years before CHRIST's birth. If the texts, indeed, which VYA'SA collected, had been actually written, in a much older dialect, by the sages preceding him, we must inquire into the greatest possible age of the Védas themselves: now one of the longest and finest Upanishads in the second Véda contains three lists, in a regular series upwards, of at most forty-two pupils and preceptors, who successively received and transmitted (probably by oral tradition) the doctrines contained in that Upanishad; and, as the old Indian priests were students at fifteen, and instructors at twenty-five, we cannot allow more than ten years on an average for each interval between the respective traditions; whence, as there are forty such intervals, in two of the lists, between VYA'SA, who arranged the whole work, and AYA'SYA, who is extolled at the beginning of it, and just as many, in the third list, between the compiler and YA'JNYAWALCYA, who makes the principal figure in it, we find the highest age of the Yajur Véda to be 1580 years before the birth of our Saviour, (which would make it older than the five books of MOSES) and that of our Indian lawtract about 1280 years before the same epoch.

The former date, however, seems the more probable of the two, because the Hindu sages are said to have delivered their knowledge orally, and the very word Sruta, which we often see used for the Véda itself, means what was heard; not to insist, that CULLÚCA expressly declares the sense of the Véda to be conveyed in the language of VYA'SA. Whether MENU, or MENUS in the nominative and MENO'S in an oblique case, was the same personage with MINOS, let others determine; but he must indubitably have been far older than the work, which contains his laws, and, though perhaps he was never in Crete, yet some of his institutes may well have been adopted in that island, whence LYCURGUS a century or two afterwards may have imported them to Sparta.

THERE is certainly a strong resemblance, though obscured and faded by time, between our MENU with his divine Bull, whom he names as DHERMA himself, or the genius of abstract Justice, and the MNEUES of Egypt with his companion or symbol, Apis; and, though we should be constantly on our guard against the delusion of etymological conjecture, yet we cannot but admit, that MINOS and MNEUES, or Mneuis, have only Greek terminations, but that the crude noun is composed of the same radical letters both in Greek and in Sanscrit. ‘ That APIS and MNEUIS, ‘ says the Analyst of ancient Mythology, were ‘ both representations of some personage, appears from the testimony of LYCOPHRON and ‘ his scholiast; and that personage was the same, ‘ who in Crete was styled MINOS, and who was ‘ also represented under the emblem of the Minotaur: DIODORUS, who confines him to Egypt, ‘ speaks of him, by the title of the bull Mneuis, ‘ as the first lawgiver, and says, “ that he lived “ after the age of the gods and heroes, when a “ change was made in the manner of life among “ men; that he was a man of a most exalted “ soul, and a great promoter of civil society, “ which he benefited by his laws; that those “ laws were unwritten, and received by him “ from the chief Egyptian deity HERMES, who “ conferred them on the world as a gift of the “ highest importance.” He was the same, adds ‘ my learned friend, with MENES, whom the ‘ Egyptians represented as their first king and ‘ principal benefactor, who first sacrificed to the ‘ gods, and brought about a great change in ‘ diet.’ If MINOS, the son of JUPITER, whom the Cretans, from national vanity, might have made a native of their own island, was really the same person with MENU, the son of BRAHMA, we have the good fortune to restore, by means of Indian literature, the most celebrated system of heathen jurisprudence, and this work might have been entitled the Laws of MINOS; but the paradox is too singular to be confidently asserted, and the geographical part of the book, with most of the allusions to natural history, must indubitably have been written after the Hindu race had settled to the south of Himálaya. We cannot but remark, that the word MENU has no relation whatever to the Moon; and that it was the seventh, not the first, of that name, whom the Bráhmens believe to have been preserved in an ark from the general deluge: him they call the Child of the Sun, to distinguish him from our legislator; but they assign to his brother YAMA the office (which the Greeks were pleased to confer on MINOS) of judge in the shades below.

THE name of MENU is clearly derived (like menes, mens, and mind) from the root men to understand; and it signifies, as all the Pandits agree, intelligent, particularly in the doctrines of the Véda, which the composer of our Dherma Sástra must have studied very diligently; since great numbers of its texts, changed only in a few syllables for the sake of the measure, are interspersed through the work and cited at length in the commentaries: the publick may, therefore, assure themselves, that they now possess a considerable part of the Hindu scripture, without the dullness of its profane ritual or much of its mystical jargon. DA'RA-SHUCU'H was persuaded, and not without sound reason, that the first MENU of the Bráhmens could be no other person than the progenitor of mankind, to whom Jews, Christians, and Muselmáns unite in giving the name of ADAM; but, whoever he might have been, he is highly honoured by name in the Véda itself, where it is declared, that ' whatever MENU pronounced, was a medicine for the soul;' and the sage VRIHASPETI, now supposed to preside over the planet Jupiter, says in his own lawtract, that ' MENU held the first rank among legislators, because he had expressed in his code the whole sense of the Véda; that no code was approved, which contradicted MENU; that other Sástras, and treatises on grammar or logick, retained splendour so long only, as MENU, who taught the way to just wealth, to virtue, and to final happiness, was not seen in competition with them:' VYA'SA too, the son of

PARA'SARA before mentioned, has decided, that
 ' the Véda with its Angas, or the fix composi-
 ' tions deduced from it, the revealed system of ' medicine, the Puránas, or sacred histories,
 ' and the code of MENU, were four works of su-
 ' preme authority, which ought never to be sha-
 ' ken by arguments merely human.'

It is the general opinion of Pandits, that BRAHMA taught his laws to MENU in a hundred thousand verses, which MENU explained to the primitive world in the very words of the book now translated, where he names himself, after the manner of ancient sages, in the third person; but, in a short preface to the lawtract of NA'RED, it is asserted, that ' MENU, having written the laws
 ' of BRAHMA in a hundred thousand ślócas or
 ' couplets, arranged under twenty-four heads in
 ' a thousand chapters, delivered the work to NA-
 ' RED, the sage among gods, who abridged it,
 ' for the use of mankind, in twelve thousand verses,
 ' and gave them to a son of BHRĪGU, named SU-
 ' MATI, who, for greater ease to the human race,
 ' reduced them to four thousand; that mortals
 ' read only the second abridgment by SUMATI,
 ' while the gods of the lower heaven, and the band
 ' of celestial musicians, are engaged in studying

‘ the primary code, beginning with the fifth ‘ verse, a little varied, of the work now extant
 ‘ on earth; but that nothing remains of NA´RED’S ‘ abridgement, except an elegant epitome of the ‘ ninth original title on the administration of justice.’
 Now, since these institutes consist only of two thousand six hundred and eighty-five verses, they cannot be the whole work ascribed to SUMATI, which is probably distinguished by the name of the Vriddha, or ancient, Mánava, and cannot be found entire; though several passages from it, which have been preserved by tradition, are occasionally cited in the new digest.

A NUMBER of glosses or comments on MENU were composed by the Munis, or old philosophers, whose treatises, together with that before us, constitute the Dhermasástra, in a collective sense, or Body of Law; among the more modern commentaries, that called Médhátit’hi, that by GO´VINDARAJA, and that by DHARANI-DHERA, were once in the greatest repute; but the first was reckoned prolix and unequal; the second, concise but obscure; and the third, often erroneous. At length appeared CULLU´CA BHATTA; who, after a painful course of study, and the collation of numerous manuscripts, produced a work, of which it may, perhaps, be said very truly, that it is the shortest, yet the most luminous, the least ostentatious, yet the most learned, the deepest yet the most agreeable, commentary ever composed on any author ancient or modern, European or Asiatick. The Pandits care so little for genuine chronology, that none of them can tell me the age of CULLU'CA, whom they always name with applause; but he informs us himself, that he was a Bráhmén of the Váréndra tribe, whose family had been long settled in Gaur or Bengal, but that he had chosen his residence among the learned on the banks of the holy river at Cáfi. His text and interpretation I have almost implicitly followed, though I had myself collated many copies of MENU, and among them a manuscript of a very ancient date: his gloss is here printed in Italicks; and any reader, who may choose to pass it over as if unprinted, will have in Roman letters an exact version of the original, and may form some idea of its character and structure, as well as of the Sanscrit idiom, which must necessarily be preserved in a verbal translation; and a translation, not scrupulously verbal, would have been highly improper in a work on so delicate and momentous a subject as private and criminal jurisprudence.

SHOULD a series of Bráhmens omit, for three generations, the reading of MENU, their sacerdotal class, as all the Pandits assure me, would in strictness be forfeited; but they must explain it only to their pupils of the three highest classes; and the Bráhmen, who read it with me, requested most earnestly, that his name might be concealed; nor would he have read it for any consideration on a forbidden day of the moon, or without the ceremonies prescribed in the second and fourth chapters for a lecture on the Véda: so great, indeed, is the idea of sanctity annexed to this book, that, when the chief native magistrate at Banares endeavoured, at my request, to procure a Persian translation of it, before I had a hope of being at any time able to understand the original, the Pandits of his court unanimously and positively refused to assist in the work; nor should I have procured it at all, if a wealthy Hindu at Gayà had not caused the version to be made by some of his dependants, at the desire of my friend Mr. LAW. The Persian translation of MENU, like all others from the Sanscrit into that language, is a rude inter-mixture of the text, loosely rendered, with some old or new comment, and often with the crude notions of the translator; and, though it expresses the general sense of the original, yet it swarms with errors imputable partly to haste, and partly to ignorance: thus where MENU says, that emissaries are the eyes of a prince, the Persian phrase makes him ascribe four eyes to the person of a king; for the word chár, which means an emissary in Sanscrit, signifies four in the popular dialect.

THE work, now presented to the European world, contains abundance of curious matter extremely interesting both to speculative lawyers and antiquaries, with many beauties, which need not be pointed out, and with many blemishes, which cannot be justified or palliated. It is a system of despotism and priestcraft, both indeed limited by law, but artfully conspiring to give mutual support, though with mutual checks; it is filled with strange conceits in metaphysics and natural philosophy, with idle superstitions, and with a scheme of theology most obscurely figurative, and consequently liable to dangerous misconception; it abounds with minute and childish formalities, with ceremonies generally absurd and often ridiculous; the punishments are partial and fanciful, for some crimes dreadfully cruel, for others reprehensibly slight; and the very morals, though rigid enough on the whole, are in one or two instances (as in the case of light oaths and of pious perjury) unaccountably relaxed: nevertheless, a spirit of sublime devotion, of benevolence to mankind, and of amiable tenderness to all sentient creatures, pervades the whole work; the style of it has a certain austere majesty, that sounds like the language of legislation and extorts a respectful awe; the sentiments of independence on all beings but GOD, and the harsh admonitions even to kings are truly noble; and the many panegyrics on the Gáyatrì, the Mother, as it is called, of the Véda, prove the author to have adored (not the visible material sun, but) that divine and incomparably greater light, to use the words of the most venerable text in the Indian scripture, which illumines all, delights all, from which all proceed, to which all must return, and which alone can irradiate (not our visual organs merely, but our souls and) our intellects. Whatever opinion in short may be formed of MENU and his laws, in a country happily enlightened by sound philosophy and the only true revelation, it must be remembered, that those laws are actually revered, as the word of the Most High, by nations of great importance to the political and commercial interests of Europe, and particularly by many millions of Hindu subjects, whose well directed industry would add largely to the wealth of Britain, and who ask no more in return than protection for their persons and places of abode, justice in their temporal concerns, indulgence to the prejudices of their old religion, and the benefit of those laws, which they have been taught to believe sacred, and which alone they can possibly comprehend.

THE LAWS OF MENU,

SON OF BRAHMĀ.

CHAPTER THE FIRST.

ON THE CREATION; WITH A SUMMARY OF THE CONTENTS.

1 MENU sat reclined, with his attention fixed on one object, the Supreme God; when the divine Sages approached him, and, after mutual salutations in due form, delivered the following address:

2 ‘ Deign, sovereign ruler, to apprise us of the sacred laws in their order, as they must be followed by all the four classes, and by each of them, in their several degrees, together with the duties of every mixed class;

3 ‘ For thou, Lord, and thou only among mortals, knowest the true sense, the first principle, and the prescribed ceremonies; of this universal, supernatural Véda, unlimited in extent and unequalled in authority.’

4 HE, whose powers were measureless, being thus requested by the great Sages, whose thoughts were profound, saluted them all with reverence, and gave them a comprehensive answer, saying: ‘ Be it heard !

5 ‘ THIS universe existed only in the first divine idea yet unexpanded, as if involved in darkness, imperceptible, unde-

‘ finable, undiscoverable by reason, and undiscovered by revelation, as if it were wholly immerfed in fleep :

6 ‘ Then the fole felf-exifting power, himfelf undifcerned, but making this world difcernible, with five elements and other principles of nature, appeared with undiminifhed glory, expanding his idea, or difpelling the gloom.

7 ‘ HE, whom the mind alone can perceive, whose effence eludes the external organs, who has no vifible parts, who exifts from eternity, even HE, the foul of all beings, whom no being can comprehend, fhone forth in perfon.

8 ‘ HE, having willed to produce various beings from his own divine fubftance, firft with a thought created the waters, and placed in them a productive feed :

9 ‘ That feed became an egg bright as gold, blazing like the luminary with a thoufand beams; and in that egg he was born himfelf, in the form of BRAHMA, the great forefather of all fpirits.

10 ‘ The waters are called nára, because they were the production of NARA, or the fpirit of GOD; and, fince they were his firft ayana, or place of motion, he thence is named NA’RA’YANA, or moving on the waters.

11 ‘ From THAT WHICH IS, the firft caufe, not the object of fenfe, exifting every where in fubftance, not exifting to our perception, without beginning or end, was produced the divine male, famed in all worlds under the appellation of BRAHMA’.

12 ‘ In that egg the great power fat inactive a whole year of the Creator, at the clofe of which by his thought alone he caufed the egg to divide itfelf;

13 ‘ And from its two divisions he framed the heaven
‘ above and the earth beneath: in the midst he placed the sub-‘ til ether, the eight regions, and the permanent receptacle ‘ of waters.

14 ‘ From the supreme soul he drew forth Mind, ex‘ isting substantially though unperceived by sense, immateri‘ al; and, before mind, or the reasoning power, he produced ‘ consciousness, the internal monitor, the ruler;

15 ‘ And, before them both, he produced the great prin- ‘ ciple of the soul, or first expansion of the divine idea; and all ‘ vital forms endued with the three qualities of goodness, pas- ‘ sion, and darkness; and the five perceptions of sense, and ‘ the five organs of sensation.

16 ‘ Thus, having at once pervaded, with emanations
‘ from the Supreme Spirit, the minutest portions of six prin‘ ciples immensely operative, consciousness and the five percep- ‘ tions, He framed all creatures;

17 ‘ And since the minutest particles of visible na‘ ture have a dependence on those six emanations from God, ‘ the wise have accordingly given the name of śārīra, or de- ‘ pending on six, that is, the ten organs on consciousness, and the ‘ five elements on as many perceptions, to His image or ap‘ pearance in visible nature:

18 ‘ Thence proceed the great elements, endued with ‘ peculiar powers, and Mind with operations infinitely sub-‘ til, the unperishable cause of all apparent forms.

19 ‘ This universe, therefore, is compacted from the ‘ minute portions of those seven divine and active princi‘ ples, the great Soul, or first emanation, consciousness, and five ‘ perceptions; a mutable universe from immutable ideas.

20 ‘ Among them each succeeding element acquires ‘ the quality of the preceding; and, in as many degrees as ‘ each of them is advanced, with so many properties is it ‘ said to be endued.

21 ‘ HE too first assigned to all creatures distinct names, ‘ distinct acts, and distinct occupations; as they had been ‘ revealed in the pre-existing Véda:

22 ‘ HE, the supreme ruler, created an assemblage of ‘ inferior Deities, with divine attributes and pure souls; and ‘ a number of Genii exquisitely delicate; and he prescribed
 ‘ the sacrifice ordained from the beginning.

23 ‘ From fire, from air, and from the sun he milked
 ‘ out, as it were, the three primordial Védas, named Rīch, Ya- ‘ jush, and Sáman, for the due performance of the sacrifice.

24 ‘ He gave being to time and the divisions of time, ‘ to the stars also, and to the planets, to rivers, oceans, and ‘ mountains, to level plains, and uneven valleys,

25 ‘ To devotion, speech, complacency, desire, and ‘ wrath, and to the creation, which shall presently be men‘ tioned; for He willed the existence of all those created ‘ things.

26 ‘ For the sake of distinguishing actions, He made ‘ a total difference between right and wrong, and enured ‘ these sentient creatures to pleasure and pain, cold and heat,
 ‘ and other opposite pairs.

27 ‘ With very minute transformable portions, cal‘ led mátrás, of the five elements, all this perceptible world
 ‘ was composed in fit order;

28 ‘ And in whatever occupation the supreme Lord
 ‘ first employed any vital soul, to that occupation the same

‘ soul attaches itself spontaneously, when it receives a new ‘ body again and again :

29 ‘ Whatever quality, noxious or innocent, harsh or ‘ mild, unjust or just, false or true, He conferred on any be‘ ing at its creation, the same quality enters it of course on ‘ its future births ;

30 ‘ As the six seasons of the year attain respectively ‘ their peculiar marks in due time and of their own ac‘ cord, even so the several acts of each embodied spirit at- ‘ tend it naturally.

31 ‘ That the human race might be multiplied, he ‘ caused the Bráhmén, the Cshatriya, the Vaisya, and the Sú- ‘ dra (so named from the scripture, protection, wealth, and la- ‘ bour) to proceed from his mouth, his arm, his thigh, and ‘ his foot.

32 ‘ Having divided his own substance, the mighty ‘ power became half male, half female, or nature active and ‘ passive ; and from that female he produced VIRÁJ :

33 ‘ Know Me, O most excellent of Bráhméns, to be ‘ that person, whom the male power VIRÁJ, having per‘ formed austere devotion, produced by himself ; Me, the ‘ secondary framer of all this visible world.

34 ‘ It was I, who, desirous of giving birth to a race ‘ of men, performed very difficult religious duties, and first ‘ produced ten Lords of created beings, eminent in holi‘ nefs,

35 ‘ MARÍCHI, ATRI, ANGIRAS, PULASTYA, PULAHA, ‘ CRATU, PRACHE´TAS, or DACSHA, VASISHT´HA, BHRĪGU,
‘ and NA´RADA :

36 ‘ They, abundant in glory, produced seven other

‘ Menus, together with deities, and the mansions of deities,
 ‘ and Maharshis, or great Sages, unlimited in power ;

37 ‘ Benevolent genii, and fierce giants, blood-thirsty ‘ savages, heavenly quiriters, nymphs and demons, huge ser‘ pents and snakes of smaller size, birds of mighty wing, and ‘ separate companies of Pitrīs, or progenitors of mankind ;

38 ‘ Lightnings and thunder-bolts, clouds and co‘ loured bows of INDRA, falling meteors, earth-rending ‘ vapours, comets, and luminaries of various degrees ;

39 ‘ Horse-faced sylvans, apes, fish, and a variety of ‘ birds, tame cattle, deer, men, and ravenous beasts with two ‘ rows of teeth ;

40 ‘ Small and large reptiles, moths, lice, fleas, and ‘ common flies, with every biting gnat, and immoveable ‘ substances of distinct sorts.

41 ‘ Thus was this whole assemblage of stationary and ‘ moveable bodies framed by those high-minded beings, ‘ through the force of their own devotion, and at my ‘ command, with separate actions allotted to each.

42 ‘ Whatever act is ordained for each of those crea‘ tures here below, that I will now declare to you, toge‘ ther with their order in respect of birth.

43 ‘ Cattle and deer, and wild beasts with two rows ‘ of teeth, giants, and blood-thirsty savages, and the race of ‘ men, are born from a secundine :

44 ‘ Birds are hatched from eggs ; so are snakes, cro‘ codiles, fish without shells, and tortoises, with other ani‘ mal kinds, terrestrial, as chameleons, and aquatick, as shell- ‘ fish :

45 ‘ From hot moisture are born biting gnats, lice,

‘ fleas, and common flies; these, and whatever is of the ‘ same class, are produced by heat.

46 ‘ All vegetables, propagated by seed or by slips, ‘ grow from shoots: some herbs, abounding in flowers and ‘ fruit, perish when their fruit is mature;

47 ‘ Other plants, called lords of the forest, have ‘ no flowers, but produce fruit; and, whether they have ‘ flowers also, or fruit only, large woody plants of both sorts ‘ are named trees.

48 ‘ There are shrubs with many stalks from the ‘ root upwards, and reeds with single roots but united stems, ‘ all of different kinds, and grasses, and vines or climbers,
‘ and creepers, which spring from a seed or from a slip.

49 ‘ These animals and vegetables, encircled with mul‘ tiform darkness, by reason of past actions, have internal ‘ conscience, and are sensible of pleasure and pain.

50 ‘ All transmigrations, recorded in sacred books,
‘ from the state of BRAHMA to that of plants, happen con‘ tinually in this tremendous world of beings; a world ‘ always tending to decay.

51 ‘ HE, whose powers are incomprehensible, having ‘ thus created both me and this universe, was again absorbed ‘ in the supreme Spirit, changing the time of energy for the ‘ time of repose.

52 ‘ When that power awakes, (for, though slumber be ‘ not predicable of the sole eternal Mind, infinitely wise and infi- ‘ nitely benevolent, yet it is predicated of BRAHMA figuratively, as ‘ a general property of life) then has this world its full expan‘ sion; but, when he slumbers with a tranquil spirit, then the ‘ whole system fades away;

53 ‘ For, while he repofes, as it were, in calm fleep, ‘ embodied fpirits, endued with principles of action, de‘ part from their feveral acts, and the mind itfelf becomes ‘ inert;

54 ‘ And, when they once are abforbed in that fu‘ preme effence, then the divine foul of all beings withdraws ‘ his energy, and placidly flumbers;

55 ‘ Then too this vital foul of created bodies, with all ‘ the organs of fenfe and of action, remains long immerfed ‘ in the firft idea or in darknefs, and performs not its natural ‘ functions, but migrates from its corporeal frame:

56 ‘ When, being again compofed of minute elemen‘ tary principles, it enters at once into vegetable or animal ‘ feed, it then affumes a new form.

57 ‘ Thus that immutable power, by waking and ‘ repofing alternately, revivifies and deftroys in eternal ‘ fucceffion this whole affemblage of locomotive and im‘ moveable creatures.

58 ‘ HE, having enacted this code of laws, himfelf taught
 ‘ it fully to me in the beginning: afterwards I taught it ‘ MARÍCHI and the nine other holy fages.

59 ‘ This my fon BHRĪGU will repeat the divine code
 ‘ to you without omiffion; for that fage learned from me
 ‘ to recite the whole of it.’

60 BHRĪGU, great and wife, having thus been appointed by MENU to promulge his laws, addreffed all the Riſhis with an affectionate mind, faying: ‘ Hear!

61 ‘ FROM this MENU, named SWA’YAMBHUA, or Sprung
 ‘ from the ſelf-exiſting, came fix deſcendants, other MENUS, ‘ or perfectly underſtanding the ſcripture, each giving birth to ‘ a race of his own, all exalted in dignity, eminent in power; ‘ er;

62 ‘ SWA’RO’CHISHA, AUTTAMI, TA’MASA, RAIVATA like‘ wife and CHA’CSHUSHA, beaming with glory, and VAIVAS-‘ WATA, child of the sun.

63 ‘ The seven MENUS, (or those first created, who are to ‘ be followed by seven more) of whom SWA’YAMBHUYA is the ‘ chief, have produced and supported this world of moving ‘ and stationary beings, each in his own Antara, or the pe- ‘ riod of his reign.

64 ‘ Eighteen niméshas, or twinklings of an eye, are one ‘ cáshṭ’há; thirty cáshṭ’hás, one calá; thirty calás, one muhúrta:
 ‘ and just so many muhúrtas let mankind consider as the dur‘ ation of their day and night.

65 ‘ The sun causes the distribution of day and night ‘ both divine and human; night being intended for the re‘ pose of various beings, and day for their exertion.

66 ‘ A month of mortals is a day and a night of the ‘ Pitris, or patriarchs inhabiting the moon; and the division ‘ of a month being into equal halves, the half beginning from ‘ the full moon is their day for actions, and that begin‘ ning from the new moon is their night for slumber:

67 ‘ A year of mortals is a day and a night of the ‘ Gods, or regents of the universe seated round the north pole; ‘ and again their division is this: their day is the northern,
 ‘ and their night the southern, course of the sun.

68 ‘ Learn now the duration of a day and a night of ‘ BRAHMA’, and of the several ages, which shall be men‘ tioned in order succinctly.

69 ‘ Sages have given the name of Crīta to an age

‘ containing four thousand years of the Gods; the twilight
 ‘ preceding it consists of as many hundreds, and the twilight ‘ following it, of the same number:

70 ‘ In the other three ages, with their twilights pre‘ ceding and following, are thousands and hundreds dimin‘ ished by one.

71 ‘ The divine years, in the four human ages just enu‘ merated, being added together, their sum, or twelve thou‘ sand, is called the age of the Gods;

72 ‘ And, by reckoning a thousand such divine ages, ‘ a day of BRAHMA may be known: his night also has an ‘ equal duration:

73 ‘ Those persons best know the divisions of days
 ‘ and nights, who understand, that the day of BRAHMA, ‘ which endures to the end of a thousand such ages, gives ‘ rise to virtuous exertions; and that his night endures as ‘ long as his day.

74 ‘ At the close of his night, having long reposed, he ‘ awakes, and, awaking, exerts intellect, or reproduces the ‘ great principle of animation, whose property it is to exist ‘ unperceived by sense:

75 ‘ Intellect, called into action by his will to ‘ create worlds, performs again the work of creation; and ‘ thence first emerges the subtil ether, to which philosophers ‘ ascribe the quality of conveying sound;

76 ‘ From ether, effecting a transmutation in form, ‘ springs the pure and potent air, a vehicle of all scents; and ‘ air is held endued with the quality of touch:

77 ‘ Then from air, operating a change, rises light or ‘ fire, making objects visible, dispelling gloom, spreading

‘ bright rays; and it is declared to have the quality of figure; 78 ‘ But from light, a change being effected, comes ‘ water with the quality of taste; and from water is depo- ‘ sited earth with the quality of smell: such were they ‘ created in the beginning.

79 ‘ The beforementioned age of the Gods, or twelve ‘ thousand of their years, being multiplied by seventy-one, ‘ constitutes what is here named a Menwantara, or the reign of ‘ a MENU.

80 ‘ There are numberless Menwantaras; creations al‘ so and destructions of worlds, innumerable: the Being su-‘ premely exalted performs all this, with as much ease as if in ‘ sport, again and again for the sake of conferring happiness.

81 ‘ In the Crīta age the Genius of truth and right, in ‘ the form of a Bull, stands firm on his four feet; nor does ‘ any advantage accrue to men from iniquity;

82 ‘ But in the following ages, by reason of unjust ‘ gains, he is deprived successively of one foot; and even ‘ just emoluments, through the prevalence of theft, falsehood, ‘ and fraud, are gradually diminished by a fourth part.

83 ‘ Men, free from disease, attain all sorts of prospe‘ rity and live four hundred years, in the Crīta age; but, in ‘ the Trétā and the succeeding ages, their life is lessened gra‘ dually by one quarter.

84 ‘ The life of mortals, which is mentioned in the ‘ Véda, the rewards of good works, and the powers of em‘ bodied spirits, are fruits proportioned among men to the ‘ order of the four ages.

85 ‘ Some duties are performed by good men in the ‘ Crīta age; others, in the Trétā; some, in the Dwāpara;

‘ others in the Cali; in proportion as those ages decrease in ‘ length.

86 ‘ In the Crīta the prevailing virtue is declared to ‘ be devotion; in the Trétā, divine knowledge; in the Dwā-
 ‘ para, holy sages call sacrifice the duty chiefly performed; ‘ in the Cali, liberality alone.

87 ‘ FOR the sake of preserving this universe, the Be‘ ing supremely glorious allotted separate duties to those, ‘ who sprang respectively from his mouth, his arm, his ‘ thigh, and his foot.

88 ‘ To Bráhmens he assigned the duties of reading
 ‘ the Véda, of teaching it, of sacrificing, of assisting others to ‘ sacrifice, of giving alms, if they be rich, and, if indigent, of ‘ receiving gifts:

89 ‘ To defend the people, to give alms, to sacri‘ fice, to read the Véda, to shun the allurements of sensual ‘ gratification, are in few words the duties of a Cshatriya:

90 ‘ To keep herds of cattle, to bestow largesses, to ‘ sacrifice, to read the scripture, to carry on trade, to lend ‘ at interest, and to cultivate land, are prescribed or permit- ‘ ted to a Vaisya:

91 ‘ One principal duty the supreme ruler assigned to ‘ a Súdra; namely, to serve the beforementioned classes, ‘ without depreciating their worth.

92 ‘ Man is declared purer above the navel; but the ‘ self-existing power declared the purest part of him to be ‘ the mouth:

93 ‘ Since the Bráhmen sprang from the most excellent ‘ part, since he was the first born, and since he possesses the ‘ Véda, He is by right the chief of this whole creation.

94 ‘ Him the Being, who exists of himself, produced ‘ in the beginning from his own mouth; that, having per‘ formed holy rites, he might present clarified butter to the ‘ Gods, and cakes of rice to the progenitors of mankind, ‘ for the preservation of this world:

95 ‘ What created being then can surpass Him, with ‘ whose mouth the Gods of the firmament continually feast ‘ on clarified butter, and the manes of ancestors, on hallow‘ ed cakes?

96 ‘ Of created things the most excellent are those ‘ which are animated; of the animated, those which subsist ‘ by intelligence; of the intelligent, mankind; and of men,
 ‘ the sacerdotal class;

97 ‘ Of priests, those eminent in learning; of the learn‘ ed, those who know their duty; of those who know it, ‘ such as perform it virtuously; and of the virtuous, those ‘ who seek beatitude from a perfect acquaintance with scrip‘ tural doctrine.

98 ‘ The very birth of Bráhmens is a constant incarna‘ tion of DHERMA, God of Justice; for the Bráhmen is born ‘ to promote justice, and to procure ultimate happiness.

99 ‘ When a Bráhmen springs to light, he is born ‘ above the world, the chief of all creatures, assigned to ‘ guard the treasury of duties religious and civil.

100 ‘ Whatever exists in the universe, is all in effect, ‘ though not in form, the wealth of the Bráhmen; since the ‘ Bráhmen is entitled to it all by his primogeniture and emi‘ nence of birth:

101 ‘ The Bráhmen eats but his own food; wears but ‘ his own apparel; and bestows but his own in alms:

‘ through the benevolence of the Bráhmén, indeed, other ‘ mortals enjoy life.

102 ‘ To declare the sacerdotal duties, and those of ‘ the other classes in due order, the sage MENU, sprung ‘ from the self-existing, promulged this code of laws ;

103 ‘ A code, which must be studied with extreme ‘ care by every learned Bráhmén, and fully explained to his ‘ disciples, but must be taught by no other man of an infe- ‘ rior class.

104 ‘ The Bráhmén, who studies this book, having per‘ formed sacred rites, is perpetually free from offence in ‘ thought, in word, and in deed ;

105 ‘ He confers purity on his living family, on his ‘ ancestors, and on his descendants, as far as the seventh ‘ person ; and He alone deserves to possess this whole earth.

106 ‘ This most excellent code produces every thing ‘ auspicious ; this code increases understanding ; this code ‘ procures fame and long life ; this code leads to supreme ‘ bliss.

107 ‘ In this book appears the system of law in its full ‘ extent, with the good and bad properties of human actions, ‘ and the immemorial customs of the four classes.

108 ‘ Immemorial custom is transcendent law, approv‘ ed in the sacred scripture, and in the codes of divine legif‘ lators : let every man, therefore, of the three principal ‘ classes, who has a due reverence for the supreme spirit
 ‘ which dwells in him, diligently and constantly observe im‘ memorial custom :

109 ‘ A man of the priestly, military, or commercial ‘ class, who deviates from immemorial usage, tastes not the ‘ fruit of the Véda; but, by an exact observance of it, he ‘ gathers that fruit in perfection.

110 ‘ Thus have holy sages, well knowing that law is ‘ grounded on immemorial custom, embraced, as the root
‘ of all piety, good usages long established.

111 ‘ THE creation of this universe; the forms of insti‘ tution and education, with the observances and behaviour
‘ of a student in theology; the best rules for the ceremony ‘ on his return from the mansion of his preceptor;

112 ‘ The law of marriage in general, and of nuptials in ‘ different forms; the regulations for the great sacraments, and ‘ the manner, primevally settled, of performing obsequies;

113 The modes of gaining subsistence, and the rules
‘ to be observed by the master of a family; the allowance ‘ and prohibition of diet, with the purification of men and ‘ utensils;

114 ‘ Laws concerning women; the devotion of her‘ mits, and of anchorets wholly intent on final beatitude, the ‘ whole duty of a king, and the judicial decision of con‘ troversies,

115 ‘ With the law of evidence and examination; laws ‘ concerning husband and wife, canons of inheritance; the ‘ prohibition of gaming, and the punishments of criminals;

116 ‘ Rules ordained for the mercantile and servile ‘ classes, with the origin of those, that are mixed; the ‘ duties and rights of all the classes in a time of distress for ‘ subsistence; and the penances for expiating sins;

117 ‘ The several transmigrations in this universe, caus‘ ed by offences of three kinds, with the ultimate bliss ‘ attending good actions, on the full trial of vice and virtue;

118 ‘ All these titles of law, promulgated by MENU,
‘ and occasionally the customs of different countries, different ‘ tribes, and different families, with rules concerning here-‘ ticks and companies of traders, are discussed in this code.

119 ‘ Even as MENU at my request formerly revealed ‘ this divine Sástra, hear it now from me without any di‘ minution or addition.

CHAPTER THE SECOND.

ON EDUCATION; OR ON THE SACERDOTAL CLASS, AND THE FIRST ORDER.

1 ‘ KNOW that system of duties, which is revered by such as are learned in the Védas, and impressed, ‘ as the means of attaining beatitude, on the hearts of the just,
‘ who are ever exempt from hatred and inordinate affection.

2 ‘ Self-love is no laudable motive, yet an exemption ‘ from self-love is not to be found in this world: on self-love ‘ is grounded the study of scripture, and the practice of ac‘ tions recommended in it.

3 ‘ Eager desire to act has its root in expectation of ‘ some advantage; and with such expectation are sacrifices ‘ performed: the rules of religious austerities and abstinence ‘ from sin are all known to arise from hope of remuneration.

4 ‘ Not a single act here below appears ever to be done ‘ by a man free from self-love: whatever he performs, it is ‘ wrought from his desire of a reward.

5 ‘ He, indeed, who should persist in discharging these ‘ duties without any view to their fruit, would attain here‘ after the state of the immortals, and, even in this life, would ‘ enjoy all the virtuous gratifications, that his fancy could ‘ suggest.

6 ‘ The roots of law are the whole Véda, the ordinan‘ ces and moral practices of such as perfectly understand it, ‘ the immemorial customs of good men, and, in cases quite ‘ indifferent, self-satisfaction.

7 ‘ Whatever law has been ordained for any person by ‘ MENU, that law is fully declared in the Véda: for He was ‘ perfect in divine knowledge :

8 ‘ A man of true learning, who has viewed this com‘ plete system with the eye of sacred wisdom, cannot fail to ‘ perform all those duties, which are ordained on the autho‘ rity of the Véda.

9 ‘ No doubt, that man, who shall follow the rules ‘ prescribed in the Sruti and in the Smṛiti, will acquire fame
‘ in this life, and, in the next, inexpressible happiness:

10 ‘ By Sruti, or what was heard from above, is meant ‘ the Véda; and by Smṛiti, or what was remembered from the ‘ beginning, the body of law: those two must not be oppugn-
‘ ed by heterodox arguments; since from those two pro‘ ceeds the whole system of duties.

11 ‘ Whatever man of the three highest classes, having ‘ addicted himself to heretical books, shall treat with con‘ tempt those two roots of law, he must be driven, as an ‘ atheist and a scorner of revelation, from the company of ‘ the virtuous.

12 ‘ The scripture, the codes of law, approved usage, ‘ and, in all indifferent cases, self-satisfaction, the wise have ‘ openly declared to be the quadruple description of the ju‘ ridical system.

13 ‘ A knowledge of right is a sufficient incentive for ‘ men unattached to wealth or to sensuality; and to those ‘ who seek a knowledge of right, the supreme authority is ‘ divine revelation;

14 ‘ But, when there are two sacred texts apparently in- ‘ consistent, both are held to be law; for both are pronounc‘ ed by the wise to be valid and reconcilable;

15 ‘ Thus in the Véda are these texts: “let the sacri‘ fice be when the sun has risen,” and, “before it has risen,”
 ‘ and, “when neither sun nor stars can be seen:” the sacrifice, ‘ therefore, may be performed at any or all of those times.

16 ‘ He, whose life is regulated by holy texts, from his ‘ conception even to his funeral pile, has a decided right
 ‘ to study this code; but no other man whatsoever.

17 ‘ BETWEEN the two divine rivers Sarasvatí and ‘ Dhrīshadwatí lies the tract of land, which the sages have ‘ named Brahmāvarta, because it was frequented by Gods:

18 ‘ The custom, preserved by immemorial tradition ‘ in that country, among the four pure classes, and among ‘ those which are mixed, is called approved usage.

19 ‘ Curucshétra, Matśya, Panchála, or Cányacubja, and ‘ Súraséna, or Mat’hurà, form the region, called Brahmarshi, ‘ distinguished from Brahmāvarta:

20 ‘ From a Bráhmen, who was born in that country, ‘ let all men on earth learn their several usages.

21 ‘ That country, which lies between Himavat and ‘ Vindhya, to the east of Vinasána, and to the west of Prayága, ‘ is celebrated by the title of Medhya-désa, or the central region.

22 ‘ As far as the eastern, and as far as the western, ‘ oceans between the two mountains just mentioned, lies the ‘ tract, which the wise have named ‘Ariáverta, or inhabited

 ‘ by respectable men.

23 ‘ That land, on which the black antelope naturally ‘ grazes, is held fit for the performance of sacrifices; but ‘ the land of Mléch’has, or those who speak barbarously, differs ‘ widely from it.

24 ‘ Let the three first classes invariably dwell in those ‘ beforementioned countries; but a Súdra, distressed for ‘ subsistence, may sojourn wherever he chuses.

25 ‘ Thus has the origin of law been succinctly declar‘ ed to you, together with the formation of this universe:
 ‘ now learn the laws of the several classes.

26 ‘ WITH auspicious acts prescribed by the Véda, must ‘ ceremonies on conception and so forth be duly performed, ‘ which purify the bodies of the three classes in this life,
 ‘ and qualify them for the next.

27 ‘ By oblations to fire during the mother’s pregnan‘ cy, by holy rites on the birth of the child, by the tonsure
 ‘ of his head with a lock of hair left on it, by the ligation ‘ of the sacrificial cord, are the seminal and uterine taints of ‘ the three classes wholly removed:

28 ‘ By studying the Véda, by religious observances, by ‘ oblations to fire, by the ceremony of Traividia, by offering ‘ to the Gods and Manes, by the procreation of children, ‘ by the five great sacraments, and by solemn sacrifices, this ‘ human body is rendered fit for a divine state.

29 ‘ Before the section of the navel string a ceremony ‘ is ordained on the birth of a male: he must be made, ‘ while sacred texts are pronounced, to taste a little honey
 ‘ and clarified butter from a golden spoon.

30 ‘ Let the father perform or, if absent, cause to be ‘ performed, on the tenth or twelfth day after the birth, the ‘ ceremony of giving a name ; or on some fortunate day of ‘ the moon, at a lucky hour, and under the influence of a ‘ star with good qualities.

31 ‘ The first part of a Bráhmén’s compound name ‘ should indicate holiness; of a Cshatriya’s, power; of a Vais- ‘ ya’s, wealth ; and of a Súdra’s, contempt :

32 ‘ Let the second part of the priest’s name imply ‘ prosperity ; of the soldier’s, preservation ; of the merchant’s, ‘ nourishment ; of the servant’s, humble attendance.

33 ‘ The names of women should be agreeable, soft, ‘ clear, captivating the fancy, auspicious, ending in long ‘ vowels, resembling words of benediction.

34 ‘ In the fourth month the child should be carried ‘ out of the house to see the sun : in the sixth month, he ‘ should be fed with rice ; or that may be done, which, by ‘ the custom of the family, is thought most propitious.

35 ‘ By the command of the Véda, the ceremony of ‘ tonsure should be legally performed by the three first ‘ classes in the first or third year after birth.

36 ‘ In the eighth year from the conception of a Bráhmén, ‘ in the eleventh from that of a Cshatriya, and in the twelfth ‘ from that of a Vaisya, let the father invest the child with ‘ the mark of his class :

37 ‘ Should a Bráhmén, or his father for him, be desir‘ ous of his advancement in sacred knowledge, a Cshatriya
 ‘ of extending his power, or a Vaisya of engaging in mercan‘ tile business, the investiture may be made in the fifth, sixth, ‘ or eighth years respectively.

38 ‘ The ceremony of investiture hallowed by the gáyatrí ‘ must not be delayed, in the case of a priest, beyond the ‘ sixteenth year; nor, in that of a soldier, beyond the twenty-‘ second; nor in that of a merchant, beyond the twenty-fourth.

39 ‘ After that, all youths of these three classes, who ‘ have not been invested at the proper time, become vrátyas, ‘ or outcasts, degraded from the gáyatrí, and contemned by ‘ the virtuous :

40 ‘ With such impure men, let no Bráhmen, even in ‘ distress for subsistence, ever form a connexion in law, ei‘ ther by the study of the Véda or by affinity.

41 ‘ Let students in theology wear for their mantles the ‘ hides of black antelopes, of common deer, or of goats, ‘ with lower vests of woven śana, of cshumà, and of wool, in ‘ the direct order of their classes.

42 ‘ The girdle of a priest must be made of munja, in ‘ a triple cord, smooth and soft; that of a warrior must be ‘ a bowstring of múrvá; that of a merchant, a triple thread ‘ of śana.

43 ‘ If the munja be not procurable, their zones must ‘ be formed respectively of the grasses cusa, asmántaca, valvaja, ‘ in triple strings with one, three, or five knots, according to ‘ the family custom.

44 ‘ The sacrificial thread of a Bráhmen must be made
 ‘ of cotton, so as to be put on over his head, in three strings;
 ‘ that of a Cshatriya, of śana thread only; that of a Vaisya
 ‘ of woollen thread..

45 ‘ A priest ought by law to carry a staff of Bilva or ‘ Paláfa; a soldier, of Bata or C’hadira; a merchant of Vénu
 ‘ or Udumbara :

46. ‘ The staff of a priest must be of such a length as ‘ to reach his hair; that of a soldier, to reach his forehead;
 ‘ and that of a merchant, to reach his nose.

47 ‘ Let all the staves be straight, without fracture, of ‘ a handsome appearance, not likely to terrify men, with ‘ their bark perfect, unhurt by fire.

48 ‘ Having taken a legal staff to his liking, and stand‘ ing opposite to the sun, let the student thrice walk round
 ‘ the fire from left to right, and perform according to law
 ‘ the ceremony of asking food:

49 ‘ The most excellent of the three classes, being girt
 ‘ with the sacrificial thread, must ask food with the respectful ‘ word bhavati, at the beginning of the phrase; those of the ‘ second class, with that word in the middle; and those of ‘ the third, with that word at the end.

50 ‘ Let him first beg food of his mother, or of his ‘ sister, or of his mother’s whole sister; and then of some ‘ other female who will not disgrace him.

51 ‘ Having collected as much of the desired food as he ‘ has occasion for, and having presented it without guile to ‘ his preceptor, let him eat some of it, being duly purified, ‘ with his face to the east:

52 ‘ If he seek long life, he should eat with his face to ‘ the east; if exalted fame, to the south; if prosperity, to ‘ the west; if truth and its reward, to the north.

53 ‘ Let the student, having performed his ablution, al‘ ways eat his food without distraction of mind; and, hav‘ ing eaten, let him thrice wash his mouth completely, sprink‘ ling with water the six hollow parts of his head, or his ‘ eyes, ears, and nostrils.

54 ‘ Let him honour all his food, and eat it without ‘ contempt; when he sees it, let him rejoice and be calm,
 ‘ and pray, that he may always obtain it.

55 ‘ Food, eaten constantly with respect, gives muscular ‘ force and generative power; but, eaten irreverently, def‘ troys them both.

56 ‘ He must beware of giving any man what he leaves; ‘ and of eating any thing between morning and evening: he ‘ must also beware of eating too much, and of going any ‘ whither with a remnant of his food unswallowed.

57 ‘ Excessive eating is prejudicial to health, to fame, ‘ and to future bliss in heaven; it is injurious to virtue, and ‘ odious among men: he must, for these reasons, by all ‘ means avoid it.

58 ‘ Let a Bráhmén at all times perform the ablution
 ‘ with the pure part of his hand denominated from the Véda, ‘ or with the part sacred to the Lord of creatures, or with ‘ that dedicated to the Gods; but never with the part nam‘ ed from the Pitrīs:

59 ‘ The pure part under the root of the thumb is cal‘ led Bráhma, that at the root of the little finger, Cáya; that ‘ at the tips of the fingers, Daiva; and the part between the ‘ thumb and index, Pitrya.

60 ‘ Let him first sip water thrice; then twice wipe his ‘ mouth; and lastly touch with water the six before mentioned ‘ cavities, his breast, and his head.

61 ‘ He, who knows the law and seeks purity, will ever ‘ perform his ablution with the pure part of his hand, and ‘ with water neither hot nor frothy, standing in a lonely ‘ place, and turning to the east or the north.

62 ‘ A Bráhmen is purified by water, that reaches his ‘ bosom ; a Cshatriya, by water descending to his throat ; a ‘ Vaisya, by water barely taken into his mouth ; a Súdra, ‘ by water touched with the extremity of his lips.

63 ‘ A youth of the three highest classes is named upa- ‘ vítí, when his right hand is extended for the cord to pass ‘ over his head and be fixed on his left shoulder ; when his left ‘ hand is extended, that the thread may be placed on his right ‘ shoulder, he is called práchínávítí ; and nivítí, when it is ‘ fastened on his neck.

64 ‘ His girdle, his leathern mantle, his staff, his sacri‘ ficial cord, and his ewer, he must throw into the water, ‘ when they are worn out or broken, and receive others hal‘ lowed by mystical texts.

65 ‘ The ceremony of césánta, or cutting off the hair, ‘ is ordained for a priest in the sixteenth year from concep-
 ‘ tion ; for a soldier, in the twenty-second ; for a merchant, ‘ two years later than that.

66 ‘ The same ceremonies, except that of the sacrificial
 ‘ thread, must be duly performed for women at the same ‘ age and in the same order, that the body may be made ‘ perfect ; but without any texts from the Véda :

67 ‘ The nuptial ceremony is considered as the complete ‘ institution of women, ordained for them in the Véda, to‘ gether with reverence to their husbands, dwelling first in ‘ their father’s family, the business of the house, and atten‘ tion to sacred fire.

68 ‘ Such is the revealed law of institution for the ‘ twice born ; an institution, in which their second birth ‘ clearly consists, and which causes their advancement in ho-

‘ lines: now learn to what duties they must afterwards apply themselves.

69 ‘ THE venerable preceptor, having girt his pupil with the thread, must first instruct him in purification, in good customs, in the management of the consecrated fire, and in the holy rites of morning, noon, and evening.

70 ‘ When the student is going to read the Véda, he must perform an ablution, as the law ordains, with his face to the north; and, having paid scriptural homage, he must receive instruction, wearing a clean vest, his members being duly composed:

71 ‘ At the beginning and end of the lecture, he must always clasp both the feet of his preceptor; and he must read with both his hands closed: (this is called scriptural homage)

73 ‘ When he is prepared for the lecture, the preceptor, constantly attentive, must say: “hoa! read;” and, at the close of the lesson, he must say: “take rest.”

74 ‘ A Bráhmén, beginning and ending a lecture on the Véda, must always pronounce to himself the syllable óm; for, unless the syllable óm precede, his learning will slip away from him; and, unless it follow, nothing will be long retained.

‘ 75 ‘ If he have sitten on culms of cus’a with their points toward the east, and be purified by rubbing that holy grafs on both his hands, and be further prepared by three

‘ suppressions of breath, each equal in time to five short vowels, ‘ he then may fitly pronounce óm.

76 ‘ BRAHMA’ milked out, as it were, from the three Vé- ‘ das the letter A, the letter U, and the letter M, which ‘ form by their coalition the trilateral monosyllable, together with ‘ three mysterious words, bhur, bhuvah, swer, or earth, sky, ‘ heaven :

77 ‘ From the three Védas also the lord of creatures, in‘ comprehensibly exalted, successively milked out the three ‘ measures of that ineffable text, beginning with the word ‘ tad, and entitled śávitrí or gáyatrì.

78 ‘ A priest, who shall know the Véda, and shall pro‘ nounce to himself, both morning and evening, that syllable, ‘ and that holy text preceded by the three words, shall ‘ attain the sanctity which the Véda confers ;

79 ‘ And a twice born man, who shall a thousand ‘ times repeat those three (or óm, the vyáhr̥tis, and the ‘ gáyatrí,) apart from the multitude, shall be released in a ‘ month even from a great offence, as a snake from his ‘ slough.

80 ‘ The priest, the soldier, and the merchant, who shall ‘ neglect this mysterious text, and fail to perform in due ‘ season his peculiar acts of piety, shall meet with contempt ‘ among the virtuous.

81 ‘ The three great immutable words, preceded by ‘ the trilateral syllable, and followed by the gáyatrí, which ‘ consists of three measures, must be considered as the ‘ mouth, or principal part, of the Véda :

82 ‘ Whoever shall repeat, day by day for three years ‘ without negligence, that sacred text, shall hereafter ap‘ proach the divine essence, move as freely as air, and assume an ethereal form.

83 ‘ The triliteral monosyllable is an emblem of the Supreme; the suppressions of breath with a mind fixed on God, are the highest devotion; but nothing is more exalted than the gáyatrí: a declaration of truth is more excellent than silence.

84 ‘ All rites ordained in the Véda, oblations to fire, and solemn sacrifices, pass away; but that, which passes not away, is declared to be the syllable óm, thence called acshara; since it is a symbol of God, the Lord of created Beings.

85 ‘ The act of repeating his Holy Name is ten times better than the appointed sacrifice; a hundred times better, when it is heard by no man; and a thousand times better, when it is purely mental:

86 ‘ The four domestick sacraments, which are accompanied with the appointed sacrifice, are not equal, though all be united, to a sixteenth part of the sacrifice performed by a repetition of the gáyatrí:

87 ‘ By the sole repetition of the gáyatrí a priest may indubitably attain beatitude, let him perform, or not perform, any other religious act; if he be Maitra, or a friend to all creatures, he is justly named Bráhména, or united to the Great One.

88 ‘ In restraining the organs, which run wild among ravishing sensualities, a wise man will apply diligent care, like a charioteer in managing restive horses.

89 ‘ Those eleven organs, to which the first Sages gave names, I will comprehensively enumerate, as the law considers them, in due order.

90 ‘ The nose is the fifth, after the ears, the skin, the ‘ eyes, and the tongue; and the organs of speech are rec‘ koned the tenth, after those of excretion and generation, ‘ and the hands and feet:

91 ‘ Five of them, the ear and the rest in succession, ‘ learned men have called organs of sense; and the others, ‘ organs of action:

92 ‘ The heart must be considered as the eleventh; ‘ which, by its natural property, comprises both sense and ‘ action; and which being subdued, the two other sets, with ‘ five in each, are also controlled.

93 ‘ A man, by the attachment of his organs to sensual ‘ pleasure, incurs certain guilt; but, having wholly subdued ‘ them, he thence attains heavenly bliss.

94 ‘ Desire is never satisfied with the enjoyment of de‘ sired objects; as the fire is not appeased with clarified but‘ ter: it only blazes more vehemently.

95 ‘ Whatever man may obtain all those gratifications,
 ‘ or whatever man may resign them completely, the resign-‘ nation of all pleasures is far better than the attainment of ‘ them.

96 ‘ The organs, being strongly attached to sensual de‘ lights, cannot so effectually be restrained by avoiding incen‘ tives to pleasure, as by a constant pursuit of divine know‘ ledge.

97 ‘ To a man contaminated by sensuality neither the ‘ Védas, nor liberality, nor sacrifices, nor strict observances, ‘ nor pious austerities, ever procure felicity.

98 ‘ He must be considered as really triumphant over ‘ his organs, who, on hearing and touching, on seeing and ‘ tasting and smelling, what may please or offend the senses,

 ‘ neither greatly rejoices nor greatly repines:

99 ‘ But, when one among all his organs fails, by that ‘ single failure his knowledge of God passes away, as water ‘ flows through one hole in a leathern bottle.

100 ‘ Having kept all his members of sense and action ‘ under control, and obtained also command over his ‘ heart, he will enjoy every advantage, even though he re‘ duce not his body by religious austerities.

101 ‘ At the morning twilight, let him stand repeat‘ ing the gáyatrí, until he see the sun; and, at evening ‘ twilight, let him repeat it sitting, until the stars distinctly ‘ appear:

102 ‘ He, who stands repeating it at the morning twi‘ light, removes all unknown nocturnal sin; and he, who re‘ peats it sitting at evening twilight, disperses the taint, that ‘ has unknowingly been contracted in the day;

103 ‘ But he, who stands not repeating it in the morn‘ ing, and sits not repeating it in the evening, must be pre‘ cluded, like a Súdra, from every sacred observance of the ‘ twice born classes.

104 ‘ Near pure water, with his organs holden under ‘ control, and retiring with circumspection to some unfre‘ quented place, let him pronounce the gáyatrí, performing ‘ daily ceremonies.

105 ‘ IN reading the Védángas, or grammar, prosody, ‘ mathematicks, and so forth, or even such parts of the Véda, ‘ as ought constantly to be read, there is no prohibition on ‘ particular days; nor in pronouncing the texts appointed ‘ for oblations to fire:

106 ‘ Of that, which must constantly be read, and is ‘ therefore, called Brahmasatra, there can be no such prohibi‘ tion; and the oblation to fire, according to the Véda, pro‘ duces good fruit, though accompanied with the text vashat, ‘ which on other occasions must be intermitted on certain days.

107 ‘ For him, who shall persist a whole year in reading
 ‘ the Véda, his organs being kept in subjection, and his body ‘ pure, there will always rise good fruit from his offerings of ‘ milk and curds, of clarified butter and honey.

108 ‘ LET the twice born youth, who has been girt with ‘ the sacrificial cord, collect wood for the holy fire, beg food ‘ of his relations, sleep on a low bed, and perform such of‘ fices as may please his preceptor, until his return to the ‘ house of his natural father.

109 ‘ Ten persons may legally be instructed in the Véda;
 ‘ the son of a spiritual teacher; a boy, who is assiduous; ‘ one who can impart other knowledge; one who is just;
 ‘ one who is pure; one who is friendly; one who is power‘ ful; one who can bestow wealth; one who is honest; and ‘ one who is related by blood.

110 ‘ Let not a sensible teacher tell any other what he is ‘ not asked, nor what he is asked improperly; but let him, ‘ however intelligent, act in the multitude, as if he were ‘ dumb:

111 ‘ Of the two persons, him, who illegally asks, and ‘ him, who illegally answers, one will die, or incur odium.

112 ‘ Where virtue, and wealth sufficient to secure it, are ‘ not found, or diligent attention at least proportioned to ‘ the holiness of the subject, in that soil divine instruction must ‘ not be sown: it would perish, like fine seed in barren land.

113 ‘ A teacher of the Véda should rather die with his ‘ learning, than sow it in sterile soil, even though he be in ‘ grievous distress for subsistence.

114 ‘ Sacred Learning, having approached a Bráhmen, ‘ said to him: “ I am thy precious gem; preserve me with “ care; deliver me not to a scorners; (so preserved I shall be“ come supremely strong)

115 ‘ But communicate me, as to a vigilant depositary “ of thy gem, to that student, whom thou shalt know to be “ pure, to have subdued his passions, to perform the duties “ of his order.”

116 ‘ He, who shall acquire knowledge of the Véda, with‘ out the assent of his preceptor, incurs the guilt of stealing
 ‘ the scripture, and shall sink to the region of torment.

117 ‘ From whatever teacher a student has received ‘ instruction, either popular, ceremonial, or sacred, let him ‘ first salute his instructor, when they meet.

118 ‘ A Bráhmen, who completely governs his passions, ‘ though he know the gáyatrí only, is more honourable than ‘ he, who governs not his passions, who eats all sorts of food, ‘ and sells all sorts of commodities, even though he know the ‘ three Védas.

119 ‘ When a superiour sits on a couch or bench, let ‘ not an inferiour sit on it with him; and, if an inferi-‘ our be sitting on a couch, let him rise to salute a supe-‘ riour.

120 ‘ The vital spirits of a young man mount upwards
 ‘ to depart from him, when an elder approaches; but, by rising ‘ and salutation, he recovers them.

121 ‘ A youth, who habitually greets and constantly re-

‘ veres the aged, obtains an increafe of four things; life, ‘ knowledge, fame, ftrength.

122 ‘ After the word of falutation, a Bráhmén muft addrefs ‘ an elder, faying: “ I am fuch an one ;” pronouncing his ‘ own name.

123 ‘ If any perfons, through ignorance of the Sanfcrit lan- ‘ guage, underftand not the import of his name, to them ‘ fhould a learned man fay: “ It is I ;” and in that manner ‘ he fhould addrefs all claffes of women.

124 ‘ In the falutation he fhould pronounce, after his own ‘ name, the vocative particle bhós; for the particle bhós is held by ‘ the wife to have the fame property with names fully expreffed.

125 ‘ A Bráhmén fhould thus be faluted in return:
 ‘ “ Mayft thou live long, excellent man ! ” and, at the end ‘ of his name, the vowel and preceding confonant fhould ‘ be lengthened, with an acute accent, to three fyllabick mo-

126 ‘ That Bráhmén, who knows not the form of re‘ turning a falutation, muft not be faluted by a man of learn‘ ing: as a Súdra, even fo is he.

127 ‘ Let a learned man afk a prieft, when he meets ‘ him, if his devotion prospers ; a warrior, if he is unhurt ;
 ‘ a merchant, if his wealth is fecure ; and one of the fervile ‘ clafs, if he enjoys good health; ufing refpectively the words, ‘ cuśalam, anámayam, cśhémam, and árógyam.

128 ‘ He, who has juft performed a folemn facrifice and ‘ ablution, muft not be addreffed by his name, even though ‘ he be a younger man ; but he, who knows the law, fhould ‘ accoft him with the vocative particle, or with bhavat, the ‘ pronoun of refpect.

129 ‘ To the wife of another, and to any woman not ‘ related by blood, he must say “bhavati, and amiable sister.”

130 ‘ To his uncles paternal and maternal, to his wife’s ‘ father, to performers of the sacrifice, and to spiritual tea‘ chers, he must say: “I am such an one”—rising up to sa‘ lute them, even though younger than himself.

131 ‘ The sister of his mother, the wife of his maternal ‘ uncle, his own wife’s mother, and the sister of his father, ‘ must be saluted like the wife of his father or preceptor:
‘ they are equal to his father’s or his preceptor’s wife.

132 ‘ The wife of his brother, if she be of the same ‘ class, must be saluted every day; but his paternal and ma‘ ternal kinswomen need only be greeted on his return from ‘ a journey.

133 ‘ With the sister of his father and of his mother, ‘ and with his own elder sister, let him demean himself as ‘ with his mother; though his mother be more venerable ‘ than they.

134 ‘ Fellow citizens are equal for ten years; dancers ‘ and singers, for five; learned theologians, for less than ‘ three; but persons related by blood, for a short time:
‘ that is, a greater difference of age destroys their equality.

135 ‘ The student must consider a Bráhmen, though ‘ but ten years old, and a Cshatriya, though aged a hundred ‘ years, as father and son; as between those two, the young ‘ Bráhmen is to be respected as the father.

136 ‘ Wealth, kindred, age, moral conduct, and, fifth-‘ ly, divine knowledge, entitle men to respect; but that, which ‘ is last mentioned in order, is the most respectable:

137 ‘ Whatever man of the three highest classes possesses

‘ the most of those five, both in number and degree, that man ‘ is entitled to most respect; even a Súdra, if he have en‘ tered the tenth decad of his age.

138 ‘ Way must be made for a man in a wheeled car‘ riage, or above ninety years old, or afflicted with disease, ‘ or carrying a burden; for a woman; for a priest just re‘ turned from the mansion of his preceptor; for a prince, ‘ and for a bridegroom:

139 ‘ Among all those, if they be met at one time, the ‘ priest just returned home and the prince are most to be ho‘ noured; and of those two, the priest just returned should ‘ be treated with more respect than the prince.

140 ‘ That priest, who girds his pupil with the sacrifici‘ al cord, and afterwards instructs him in the whole Véda, ‘ with the law of sacrifice and the sacred Upanishads, holy ‘ sages call an áchárya:

141 ‘ But he, who, for his livelihood, gives instruction ‘ in a part only of the Véda, or in grammar, and other Vé-‘ dāngas, is called an upádhyáya, or sublecturer.

142 ‘ The father, who performs the ceremonies on ‘ conception and the like, according to law, and who nou‘ rishes the child with his first rice, has the epithet of guru, ‘ or venerable.

143 ‘ He, who receives a stipend for preparing the ‘ holy fire, for conducting the páca and agnishtóma, and for ‘ performing other sacrifices, is called in this code the rīt-‘ wij of his employer.

144 ‘ He, who truly and faithfully fills both ears with ‘ the Véda, must be considered as equal to a mother; He must ‘ be revered as a father; Him the pupil must never grieve.

145 ‘ A mere áchárya, or a teacher of the gáyatrí only, ‘ surpasses ten upádhyáyas; a father, a hundred such ácháryas;
 ‘ and a mother, a thousand natural fathers.

146 ‘ Of him, who gives natural birth, and him, who ‘ gives knowledge of the whole Véda, the giver of sacred know‘ ledge is the more venerable father; since the second or ‘ divine birth ensures life to the twice born both in this ‘ world and hereafter eternally.

147 ‘ Let a man consider that as a mere human birth, ‘ which his parents gave him for their mutual gratification,
 ‘ and which he receives after lying in the womb;

148 ‘ But that birth, which his principal áchárya, who ‘ knows the whole Véda, procures for him by his divine mo- ‘ ther the Gáyatrí, is a true birth: that birth is exempt from ‘ age and from death.

149 ‘ Him, who confers on a man the benefit of sacred ‘ learning, whether it be little or much, let him know to be ‘ here named guru, or venerable father, in consequence of ‘ that heavenly benefit.

150 ‘ A Bráhmen, who is the giver of spiritual birth, the ‘ teacher of prescribed duty, is by right called the father of ‘ an old man, though himself be a child.

151 ‘ CAVI, or the learned, child of ANGIRAS, taught his ‘ paternal uncles and cousins to read the Véda, and, excel‘ ling them in divine knowledge, said to them “little sons:”

152 ‘ They, moved with resentment, asked the Gods
 ‘ the meaning of that expression; and the Gods, being assem‘ bled, answered them: “The child has addressed you “ properly;

153 “ For an unlearned man is in truth a child; and

‘ he, who teaches him the Véda, is his father: holy sages ‘ have always said child to an ignorant man, and father to ‘ a teacher of scripture.”

154 ‘ Greatness is not conferred by years, not by gray ‘ hairs, not by wealth, not by powerful kindred: the divine ‘ sages have established this rule: “Whoever has read the ‘ “Védas and their Angas, He among us is great.”

155 ‘ The seniority of priests is from sacred learning; ‘ of warriors, from valour; of merchants, from abundance
 ‘ of grain; of the servile class, only from priority of birth.

156 ‘ A man is not therefore aged, because his head is ‘ gray: him, surely, the Gods considered as aged, who, ‘ though young in years, has read and understands the Véda.

157 ‘ As an elephant made of wood, as an antelope ‘ made of leather, such is an unlearned Bráhmén: those three ‘ have nothing but names.

158 ‘ As an eunuch is unproductive with women, as a ‘ cow with a cow is unprolific, as liberality to a fool is fruit‘ less, so is a Bráhmén useless, if he read not the holy texts.

159 ‘ Good instruction must be given without pain to ‘ the instructed; and sweet gentle speech must be used by ‘ a preceptor, who cherishes virtue.

160 ‘ He, whose discourse and heart are pure, and ever ‘ perfectly guarded, attains all the fruit arising from his ‘ complete course of studying the Véda.

161 ‘ Let not a man be querulous, even though in pain; ‘ let him not injure another in deed or in thought; let him ‘ not even utter a word, by which his fellow creature may ‘ suffer uneasiness; since that will obstruct his own progress
 ‘ to future beatitude.

162 ‘ A Bráhmén should constantly shun worldly honour, as he would shun poison ; and rather constantly seek disrespect, as he would seek nectar ;

163 ‘ For though scorned, he may sleep with pleasure ; with pleasure may he awake ; with pleasure may he pass through this life : but the scorner utterly perishes.

164 ‘ Let the twice-born youth, whose soul has been formed by this regular succession of prescribed acts, collect by degrees, while he dwells with his preceptor, the devout habits proceeding from the study of scripture.

165 ‘ With various modes of devotion, and with austerities ordained by the law, must the whole Véda be read, and above all the sacred Upanishads, by him, who has received a new birth.

166 ‘ Let the best of the twice born classes, intending to practise devotion, continually repeat the reading of scripture ; since a repetition of reading the scripture is here styled the highest devotion of a Bráhmén :

167 ‘ Yes verily ; that student in theology performs the highest act of devotion with his whole body to the extremities of his nails, even though he be so far sensual as to wear a chaplet of sweet flowers, who to the utmost of his ability daily reads the Véda.

168 ‘ A twice born man, who, not having studied the Véda, applies diligent attention to a different and worldly study, soon falls, even when living, to the condition of a Súdra ; and his descendants after him.

169 ‘ The first birth is from a natural mother ; the second, from the ligation of the zone : the third, from the due performance of the sacrifice : such are the births of ‘ him, who is usually called twice born, according to a text

 ‘ of the Véda :

170 ‘ Among them his divine birth is that, which is ‘ distinguished by the ligation of the zone and sacrificial cord ;
 ‘ and in that birth the Gáyatri is his mother, and the Achá- ‘ rya, his father.

171 ‘ Sages call the Achárya father from his giving in‘ struction in the Véda : nor can any holy rite be perform‘ ed by a young man before his investiture.

172 ‘ Till he be invested with the signs of his class, he must ‘ not pronounce any sacred text, except what ought to be us‘ ed in obsequies to an ancestor ; since he is on a level with ‘ a Súdra before his new birth from the revealed scripture :

173 ‘ From him, who has been duly invested, are re‘ quired both the performance of devout acts, and the study ‘ of the Véda in order, preceded by stated ceremonies.

174 ‘ Whatever sort of leathern mantle, sacrificial thread, ‘ and zone, whatever staff, and whatever under-apparel are ‘ ordained, as before mentioned, for a youth of each class, the ‘ like must also be used in his religious acts.

175 ‘ These following rules must a Brahmachári, or stu‘ dent in theology, observe, while he dwells with his precep‘ tor ; keeping all his members under control, for the sake ‘ of increasing his habitual devotion.

176 ‘ Day by day, having bathed and being purified, ‘ let him offer fresh water to the gods, the sages, and the ‘ manes ; let him show respect to the images of the deities,
 ‘ and bring wood for the oblation to fire.

177 ‘ Let him abstain from honey, from flesh meat, from ‘ perfumes, from chaplets of flowers, from sweet vegetable

‘ juices, from women, from all sweet substances turned acid,
 ‘ and from injury to animated beings ;

178 ‘ From unguents for his limbs, and from black pow‘ der for his eyes, from wearing sandals and carrying an ‘ umbrella, from sensual desire, from wrath, from covetous‘ nefs, from dancing, and from vocal and instrumental mufick;

179 ‘ From gaming, from difputes, from detraction, and ‘ from falfehood, from embracing or wantonly looking at ‘ women, and from differvice to other men.

180 ‘ Let him constantly fleep alone: let him never ‘ wafte his own manhood ; for he, who voluntarily wafte ‘ his manhood, violates the rule of his order, and becomes ‘ an avacírni :

181 ‘ A twice born youth, who has involuntarily wafte
 ‘ his manly ftrength during fleep, muft repeat with reve‘ rence, having bathed and paid homage to the fun, this text
 ‘ of fcripture : “ Again let my ftrength return to me.”

182 ‘ Let him carry water-pots, flowers, cowdung, frefh ‘ earth, and cus’a-grafs, as much as may be ufeful to his pre‘ ceptor ; and let him perform every day the duty of a re‘ ligious mendicant.

183 ‘ Each day muft a Bráhmén ftudent receive his food ‘ by begging, with due care, from the houfes of perfons re‘ nowned for difcharging their duties, and not deficient in ‘ performing the facrifices, which the Véda ordains.

184 ‘ Let him not beg from the coufins of his preceptor; ‘ nor, from his own coufins; nor from other kinfmen by the ‘ father’s fide, or by the mother’s; but, if other houfes be ‘ not acceffible, let him begin with the laft of thofe in ‘ order, avoiding the firft ;

185 ‘ Or, if none of those houses just mentioned can be ‘ found, let him go begging through the whole district ‘ round the village, keeping his organs in subjection, and re‘ maining silent: but let him turn away from such, as have ‘ committed any deadly sin.

186 ‘ Having brought logs of wood from a distance, let ‘ him place them in the open air; and with them let him ‘ make an oblation to fire, without remissness, both evening ‘ and morning.

187 ‘ He, who for seven successive days omits the cere‘ mony of begging food, and offers not wood to the sacred ‘ fire, must perform the penance of an avacírnì, unless he be ‘ afflicted with illness.

188 ‘ Let the student persist constantly in such begging, ‘ but let him not eat the food of one person only: the sub‘ sistence of a student by begging is held equal to fasting ‘ in religious merit.

189 ‘ Yet, when he is asked on a solemn act in honour ‘ of the Gods or the Manes, he may eat at his pleasure the ‘ food of a single person; observing, however, the laws of ‘ abstinence and the austerity of an anchorite: thus the rule of ‘ his order is kept inviolate.

190 ‘ This duty of a mendicant is ordained by the wife
 ‘ for a Bráhmén only; but no such act is appointed for a ‘ warrior or for a merchant.

191 ‘ Let the scholar, when commanded by his precep‘ tor, and even when he has received no command, always ‘ exert himself in reading, and in all acts useful to his ‘ teacher.

192 ‘ Keeping in due subjection his body, his speech, his

‘ organs of sense, and his heart, let him stand, with the palms
 ‘ of his hands joined, looking at the face of his preceptor.

193 ‘ Let him always keep his right arm uncovered, be ‘ always decently apparelled, and properly composed ; and, ‘ when his instructor says “ be seated,” let him sit opposite ‘ to his venerable guide.

194 ‘ In the presence of his preceptor let him always ‘ eat less, and wear a coarser mantle with worse appendages :
 ‘ let him rise before, and go to rest after, his tutor.

195 ‘ Let him not answer his teacher’s orders, or con‘ verse with him, reclining on a bed ; nor sitting, nor eating, ‘ nor standing, nor with an averted face :

196 ‘ But let him both answer and converse, if his pre‘ ceptor sit, standing up ; if he stand, advancing toward him ; ‘ if he advance, meeting him ; if he run, hastening after ‘ him ;

197 ‘ If his face be averted, going round to front him,
 ‘ from left to right ; if he be at a little distance, approaching ‘ him ; if reclined, bending to him ; and, if he stand ever so ‘ far off, running toward him.

198 ‘ When his teacher is nigh, let his couch or his ‘ bench be always placed low : when his preceptor’s eye ‘ can observe him, let him not sit carelessly at ease.

199 ‘ Let him never pronounce the mere name of his ‘ tutor, even in his absence ; nor ever mimick his gait, his ‘ speech, or his manner.

200 ‘ In whatever place, either true but censorious, or ‘ false and defamatory, discourse is held concerning his teach‘ er, let him there cover his ears, or remove to another place :

201 ‘ By censuring his preceptor, though justly, he will ‘ be born an ass; by falsely defaming him, a dog; by using ‘ his goods without leave, a small worm; by envying his me‘ rit, a larger insect or reptile.

202 ‘ He must not serve his tutor by the intervention of ‘ another, while himself stands aloof; nor must he attend ‘ him in a passion, nor when a woman is near: from a carri‘ age or raised seat he must descend, to salute his heavenly ‘ director.

203 ‘ Let him not sit with his preceptor to the leeward ‘ or to the windward of him; nor let him say any thing, ‘ which the venerable man cannot hear.

204 ‘ He may sit with his teacher in a carriage drawn ‘ by bulls, horses, or camels; on a terrace, on a pavement ‘ of stones, or on a mat of woven grass; on a rock, on a ‘ wooden bench, or in a boat.

205 ‘ When his tutor’s tutor is near, let him demean ‘ himself as if his own were present; nor let him, unless or‘ dered by his spiritual father, prostrate himself in his presence ‘ before his natural father, or paternal uncle.

206 ‘ This is likewise ordained as his constant behavi‘ our toward his other instructors in science; toward his ‘ elder paternal kinsmen; toward all, who may restrain him ‘ from sin, and all, who give him salutary advice.

207 ‘ Toward men also, who are truly virtuous, let him ‘ always behave as toward his preceptor; and, in like man‘ ner toward the sons of his teacher, who are entitled to res‘ pect as older men, and are not students; and toward the pa‘ ternal kinsmen of his venerable tutor.

208 ‘ The son of his preceptor, whether younger or of ‘ equal age, or a student, if he be capable of teaching the ‘ Véda, deserves the same honour with the preceptor himself, ‘ when he is present at any sacrificial act :

209 ‘ But he must not perform for the son of his teach‘ er the duty of rubbing his limbs, or of bathing him, or of ‘ eating what he leaves, or of washing his feet.

210 ‘ The wives of his preceptor, if they be of the ‘ same class, must receive equal honour with their venerable ‘ husband ; but, if they be of a different class, they must be ‘ honoured only by rising and salutation.

211 ‘ For no wife of his teacher must he perform the ‘ offices of pouring scented oil on them, of attending them ‘ while they bathe, of rubbing their legs and arms, or of ‘ decking their hair ;

212 ‘ Nor must a young wife of his preceptor be ‘ greeted even by the ceremony of touching her feet, if he ‘ have completed his twentieth year, or can distinguish vir‘ tue from vice.

213 ‘ It is the nature of women in this world to cause ‘ the seduction of men ; for which reason the wife are ne‘ ver unguarded in the company of females :

214 ‘ A female, indeed, is able to draw from the right ‘ path in this life not a fool only, but even a sage, and ‘ can lead him in subjection to desire or to wrath:

215 ‘ Let not a man, therefore, sit in a sequestered place
 ‘ with his nearest female relations : the assemblage of corpo‘ real organs is powerful enough to snatch wisdom from ‘ the wife.

216 ‘ A young student may, as the law directs, make ‘ prostration at his pleasure on the ground before a young ‘ wife of his tutor, saying :” I am such an one ;”

217 ‘ And, on his return from a journey, he must once ‘ touch the feet of his preceptor’s aged wife, and salute her ‘ each day by prostration, calling to mind the practice ‘ of virtuous men.

218 ‘ As he, who digs deep with a spade, comes to a ‘ spring of water, so the student, who humbly serves his ‘ teacher, attains the knowledge which lies deep in his ‘ teacher’s mind.

219 ‘ WHETHER his head be shorn, or his hair long, ‘ or one lock be bound above in a knot, let not the ‘ sun ever set or rise, while he lies asleep in the vil‘ lage.

220 ‘ If the sun should rise or set, while he sleeps ‘ through sensual indulgence, and knows it not, he must ‘ fast a whole day repeating the gáyatrí :

221 ‘ He, who has been surprised asleep by the set‘ ting or by the rising sun, and performs not that penance, ‘ incurs great guilt.

222 ‘ Let him adore God both at sunrise and at sun‘ set, as the law ordains, having made his ablution and ‘ keeping his organs controlled ; and, with fixed attention, ‘ let him repeat the text, which he ought to repeat, in a ‘ place free from impurity.

223 ‘ If a woman or a Súdra perform any act lead‘ ing to the chief temporal good, let the student be careful ‘ to emulate it ; and he may do whatever gratifies his ‘ heart, unless it be forbidden by law :

224 ‘ The chief temporal good is by some declared to ‘ consist in virtue and wealth ; by some, in wealth and ‘ lawful pleasure ; by some, in virtue alone ; by others, in ‘ wealth alone ; but the chief good here below is an assem‘ blage of all three : this is a sure decision.

225 ‘ A TEACHER of the Véda is the image of GOD ; a ‘ natural father, the image of BRAHMA ; a mother, the ‘ image of the earth ; an elder whole brother, the image ‘ of the soul :

226 ‘ Therefore, a spiritual and a natural father, a mo‘ ther, and an elder brother, are not to be treated with dis‘ respect, especially by a Bráhmen, though the student be ‘ grievously provoked.

227 ‘ That pain and care, which a mother and father ‘ undergo in producing and rearing children, cannot be ‘ compensated in an hundred years.

228 ‘ Let every man constantly do what may please his ‘ parents, and on all occasions what may please his precep‘ tor : when those three are satisfied, his whole course of ‘ devotion is accomplished.

229 ‘ Due reverence to those three is considered as the ‘ highest devotion ; and without their approbation he must ‘ perform no other duty.

230 ‘ Since they alone are held equal to the three ‘ worlds ; they alone, to the three principal orders ; ‘ they alone, to the three Védas ; they alone, to the three ‘ fires :

231 ‘ The natural father is considered as the gárbhapa- ‘ tya, or nuptial fire ; the mother, as the dacshina, or cere‘ monial ; the spiritual guide, as the áhavaniya, or sacrificial : ‘ this triad of fires is most venerable.

232 ‘ He, who neglects not those three, when he be‘ comes a house-keeper, will ultimately obtain dominion over

‘ the three worlds; and, his body being irradiated like a ‘ God, he will enjoy supreme bliss in heaven.

233 ‘ By honouring his mother he gains this terrestrial ‘ world; by honouring his father, the intermediate, or ethe- ‘ rial; and, by assiduous attention to his preceptor, even ‘ the celestial world of BRAHMA:

234 ‘ All duties are completely performed by that man,
 ‘ by whom those three are completely honoured; but to him, ‘ by whom they are dishonoured, all other acts of duty are ‘ fruitless.

235 ‘ As long as those three live, so long he must perform ‘ no other duty for his own sake; but, delighting in what may ‘ conciliate their affections and gratify their wishes, he must ‘ from day to day assiduously wait on them:

236 ‘ Whatever duty he may perform in thought, word, ‘ or deed, with a view to the next world, without deroga-‘ tion from his respect to them, he must declare to them his ‘ entire performance of it.

237 ‘ By honouring those three, without more, a man ‘ effectually does whatever ought to be done: this is the ‘ highest duty, appearing before us like DHERMA himself, and ‘ every other act is an Upadherma, or subordinate duty.

238 ‘ A believer in scripture may receive pure know‘ ledge even from a Súdra; a lesson of the highest virtue; ‘ even from a Chandála; and a woman bright as a gem; ‘ even from the basest family:

239 ‘ Even from poison may nectar be taken; even from ‘ a child, gentleness of speech; even from a foe, prudent ‘ conduct; and even from an impure substance, gold.

240 ‘ From every quarter, therefore, must be selected

241 ‘ IN case of necessity, a student is required to learn the Véda from one who is not a Bráhmén, and, as long as that instruction continues, to honour his instructor with obsequious assiduity ;

242 ‘ But a pupil, who seeks the incomparable path to heaven, should not live to the end of his days in the dwelling of a preceptor, who is no Bráhmén, or who has not read all the Védas with their Angas.

243 ‘ If he anxiously desire to pass his whole life in the house of a sacerdotal teacher, he must serve him with assiduous care, till he be released from his mortal frame :

244 ‘ That Bráhmén, who has dutifully attended his preceptor till the dissolution of his body, passes directly to the eternal mansion of GOD.

245 ‘ LET not a student, who knows his duty, present any gift to his preceptor before his return home ; but when, by his tutor’s permission, he is going to perform the ceremony on his return, let him give the venerable man some valuable thing to the best of his power ;

246 ‘ A field, or gold, a jewel, a cow, or a horse, an umbrella, a pair of sandals, a stool, corn, cloths, or even any very excellent vegetable : thus will he gain the affectionate remembrance of his instructor.

247 ‘ The student for life must, if his teacher die, attend on his virtuous son, or his widow, or on one of his paternal kinsmen, with the same respect, which he showed to the living :

248 ‘ Should none of those be alive, he must occupy

‘ the station of his preceptor, the seat, and the place of religious exercises; must continually pay due attention to the fires, which he had consecrated; and must prepare his own soul for heaven.

249 ‘ The twice born man, who shall thus without intermission have passed the time of his studentship, shall ascend after death to the most exalted of regions, and no more again spring to birth in this lower world.

CHAPTER THE THIRD.

ON MARRIAGE; OR, ON THE SECOND ORDER.

1 ‘ THE discipline of a student in the three Védas ‘ may be continued for thirty-six years, in ‘ the house of his preceptor; or for half that time, or ‘ for a quarter of it, or until he perfectly comprehend them:

2 ‘ A student, whose rules have not been violated, may ‘ assume the order of a married man, after he has read in ‘ succession a śác’há, or branch, from each of the three, or ‘ from two, or from any one of them.

3 ‘ Being justly applauded for the strict performance of ‘ his duty, and having received from his natural or spiritual ‘ father the sacred gift of the Véda, let him sit on an elegant ‘ bed, decked with a garland of flowers; and let his father ‘ honour him, before his nuptials, with a present of a cow.

4 ‘ Let the twice born man, having obtained the con‘ sent of his venerable guide, and having performed his ab-‘ lution with stated ceremonies on his return home, as the law ‘ directs, espouse a wife of the same class with himself and ‘ endued with the marks of excellence.

5 ‘ She, who is not descended from his paternal or mater‘ nal ancestors within the sixth degree, and who is not ‘ known by her family name to be of the same primitive stock

‘ with his father or mother, is eligible by a twice born man
 ‘ for nuptials and holy union :

6 ‘ In connecting himself with a wife, let him studiously ‘ avoid the ten following families, be they ever so great,
 ‘ or ever so rich in kine, goats, sheep, gold, and grain :

7 ‘ The family, which has omitted prescribed acts of ‘ religion ; that, which has produced no male children ; ‘ that, in which the Véda has not been read; that, which ‘ has thick hair on the body ; and those, which have been ‘ subject to hemorrhoids, to phthisis, to dyspepsia, to epilep‘ sy, to leprosy, and to elephantiasis.

8 ‘ Let him not marry a girl with reddish hair, nor ‘ with any deformed limb ; nor one troubled with habitual ‘ sickness ; nor one either with no hair or with too much ; ‘ nor one immoderately talkative ; nor one with inflamed ‘ eyes ;

9 ‘ Nor one with the name of a constellation, of a tree, ‘ or of a river, of a barbarous nation, or of a mountain, of ‘ a winged creature, a snake, or a slave ; nor with any ‘ name raising an image of terrour.

10 ‘ Let him chuse for his wife a girl, whose form has ‘ no defect ; who has an agreeable name ; who walks grace- ‘ fully like a phenicopteros or like a young elephant ; whose ‘ hair and teeth are moderate respectively in quantity and in ‘ size ; whose body has exquisite softness.

11 ‘ Her, who has no brother, or whose father is not ‘ well known, let no sensible man espouse, through fear lest, ‘ in the former case, her father should take her first son as his ‘ own to perform his obsequies ; or, in the second case, lest an illi‘ cit marriage should be contracted.

12 ‘ For the first marriage of the twice born classes a woman of the same class is recommended; but for such, as are impelled by inclination to marry again, women in the direct order of the classes are to be preferred:

13 ‘ A Súdra woman only must be the wife of a Súdra; she and a Vaisya, of a Vaisya; they two and a Cshatriyá, of a Cshatriya; those two and a Bráhmāni, of a Bráhmen.

14 ‘ A woman of the servile class is not mentioned, even in the recital of any ancient story, as the first wife of a Bráhmen or of a Cshatriya, though in the greatest difficulty to find a suitable match.

15 ‘ Men of the twice born classes, who, through weakness of intellect, irregularly marry women of the lowest class, very soon degrade their families and progeny to the state of Súdras:

16 ‘ According to ATRĪ and to (GO'TAMA) the son of UTAT'HYA, he, who thus marries a woman of the servile class, if he be a priest, is degraded instantly; according to SAUNACA, on the birth of a son, if he be a warrior; and, if he be a merchant, on the birth of a son's son, according to (me) BHRĪGU.

17 ‘ A Bráhmen, if he take a Súdra to his bed, as his first wife, sinks to the regions of torment; if he beget a child by her, he loses even his priestly rank:

18 ‘ His sacrifices to the gods, his oblations to the manes, and his hospitable attentions to strangers, must be supplied principally by her; but the gods and manes will not eat such offerings; nor can heaven be attained by such hospitality.

19 ‘ For the crime of him, who thus illegally drinks the ‘ moisture of a Súdra’s lips, who is tainted by her breath, ‘ and who even begets a child on her body, the law de‘ clares no expiation.

20 ‘ Now learn compendiously the eight forms of the ‘ nuptial ceremony used by the four classes, some good and ‘ some bad in this world and in the next :

21 ‘ The ceremony of BRAHMA, of the Dévas, of the ‘ Rishis, of the Prajápatis, of the Astras, of the Gandharvas, ‘ and of the Racshasas; the eighth and basest is that of the ‘ Pisáchas.

22 ‘ Which of them is permitted by law to each class,
 ‘ and what are the good and bad properties of each ceremo‘ ny, all this I will fully declare to you, together with the ‘ qualities, good and bad, of the offspring.

23 ‘ Let mankind know, that the six first in direct or‘ der are by some held valid in the case of a priest; the four ‘ last in that of a warrior; and the same four, except the ‘ Racshasa marriage, in the cases of a merchant and a man
 ‘ of the servile class :

24 ‘ Some consider the four first only as approved in ‘ the case of a priest; one, that of Racshasas, as peculiar to ‘ a soldier; and, that of Astras, to a mercantile and a ‘ servile man :

25 ‘ But in this code, three of the five last are held ‘ legal, and two illegal: the ceremonies of Pisáchas and ‘ Astras must never be performed.

26 ‘ For a military man the before mentioned marri‘ ages of Gandharvas and Racshasas, whether separate, or ‘ mixed, as when a girl is made captive by her lover after a ‘ victory over her kinsmen, are permitted by law.

27 ‘ The gift of a daughter, clothed only with a single robe, to a man learned in the Véda, whom her father voluntarily invites and respectfully receives, is the nuptial right called Bráhma.

28 ‘ The rite, which sages call Daiva, is the gift of a daughter, whom her father has decked in gay attire, when the sacrifice is already begun, to the officiating priest, who performs that act of religion.

29 ‘ When the father gives his daughter away, after having received from the bridegroom one pair of kine, or two pairs, for uses prescribed by law, that marriage is termed Arsha.

30 ‘ The nuptial rite called Prájápatya is, when the father gives away his daughter with due honour, saying distinctly: “ May both of you perform together your civil and religious duties !”

31 When the bridegroom, having given as much wealth as he can afford to the father and paternal kinsmen, and to the damsel herself, takes her voluntarily as his bride, that marriage is named Asura.

32 ‘ The reciprocal connection of a youth and a damsel, with mutual desire, is the marriage denominated Gándharva, contracted for the purpose of amorous embraces, and proceeding from sensual inclination.

33 ‘ The seizure of a maiden by force from her house, while she weeps and calls for assistance, after her kinsmen and friends have been slain in battle, or wounded, and their houses broken open, is the marriage styled Rácsasa.

34 ‘ When the lover secretly embraces the damsel, either sleeping or flushed with strong liquor, or disor-

35 ‘ The gift of daughters in marriage by the sacerdotal class is most approved, when they previously have poured water into the hands of the bridegroom; but the ceremonies of the other classes may be performed according to their several fancies.

36 ‘ Among these nuptial rites, what quality is ascribed by MENU to each, hear now, ye Bráhmens, hear it all from me, who fully declare it!

37 ‘ The son of a Bráhmī, or wife by the first ceremony, redeems from sin, if he perform virtuous acts, ten ancestors, ten descendants, and himself the twenty-first person.

38 ‘ A son, born of a wife by the Daiwa nuptials, redeems seven and seven in higher and lower degrees; of a wife by the Ārsha three and three; of a wife by the Prájápatya, six and six.

39 ‘ By four marriages, the Bráhma and so forth, in direct order, are born sons illumined by the Véda, learned men, beloved by the learned,

40 ‘ Adorned with beauty, and with the quality of goodness, wealthy, famed, amply gratified with lawful enjoyments, performing all duties, and living a hundred years:

41 ‘ But in the other four base marriages, which remain, are produced sons acting cruelly, speaking falsely, abhorring the Véda, and the duties prescribed in it.

42 ‘ From the blameless nuptial rites of men springs a blameless progeny; from the reprehensible, a reprehensible

43 ‘ The ceremony of joining hands is appointed for those, who marry women of their own class; but, with women of a different class, the following nuptial ceremonies are to be observed :

44 ‘ By a Cshatriyà, on her marriage with a Bráhmén, an arrow must be held in her hand ; by a Vaisya woman, with a bridegroom of the sacerdotal or military class, a whip ; and by a Súdra bride, marrying a priest, a soldier, or a merchant, must be held the skirt of a mantle.

45 ‘ LET the husband approach his wife in due season, that is, at the time fit for pregnancy ; let him be constantly satisfied with her alone ; but, except on the forbidden days of the moon, he may approach her, being affectionately disposed, even out of due season, with a desire of conjugal intercourse.

46 ‘ Sixteen days and nights in each month, with four distinct days neglected by the virtuous, are called the natural season of women :

47 ‘ Of those sixteen, the four first, the eleventh, and the thirteenth, are reprehended : the ten remaining nights are approved.

48 ‘ Some say, that on the even nights are conceived sons ; on the odd nights, daughters : therefore let the man, who wishes for a son, approach his wife in due season on the even nights ;

49 ‘ But a boy is in truth produced by the greater quantity of the male strength ; and a girl, by a greater quantity of the female ; by equality, an hermaphrodite, or a boy and

‘ a girl; by weakness or deficiency, is occasioned a failure of ‘ conception.

50 ‘ He, who avoids conjugal embraces on the six repre-
‘ hended nights and on eight others, is equal in chastity to a ‘ Brahmachári, in whichever of the two next orders he may ‘ live.

51 ‘ LET no father, who knows the law, receive a gra‘ tuity, however small, for giving his daughter in marriage; ‘ since the man, who, through avarice, takes a gratuity for ‘ that purpose, is a feller of his offspring.

52 ‘ Whatever male relations, through delusion of mind, ‘ take possession of a woman’s property, be it only her carri‘ ages or her clothes, such offenders will sink to a region of ‘ torment.

53 ‘ Some say, that the bull and cow given in the nup‘ tial ceremony of the Rishis, are a bribe to the father; but ‘ this is untrue: a bribe indeed, whether large or small,
‘ is an actual sale of the daughter.

54 ‘ When money or goods are given to damsels,
‘ whose kinsmen receive them not for their own use, it is no ‘ sale: it is merely a token of courtesy and affection to the ‘ brides.

55 ‘ Married women must be honoured and adorned ‘ by their fathers and brethren, by their husbands, and by ‘ the brethren of their husbands, if they seek abundant prof-‘ perity:

56 ‘ Where females are honoured, there the deities are ‘ pleased; but where they are dishonoured, there all reli‘ gious acts become fruitless.

57 ‘ Where female relations are made miserable, the fa‘ mily of him, who makes them so, very soon wholly per‘ ishes; but, where they are not unhappy, the family al‘ ways increases.

58 ‘ On whatever houses the women of a family, not ‘ being duly honoured, pronounce an imprecation, those ‘ houses, with all that belong to them, utterly perish, as if ‘ destroyed by a sacrifice for the death of an enemy.

59 ‘ Let those women, therefore, be continually suppli‘ ed with ornaments, apparel, and food, at festivals and at ‘ jubilees, by men desirous of wealth.

60 ‘ In whatever family the husband is contented with ‘ his wife, and the wife with her husband, in that house ‘ will fortune be assuredly permanent.

61 ‘ Certainly, if the wife be not elegantly attired, she ‘ will not exhilarate her husband; and, if her lord want ‘ hilarity, offspring will not be produced.

62 ‘ A wife being gaily adorned, her whole house is ‘ embellished; but, if she be destitute of ornament, all will ‘ be deprived of decoration.

63 ‘ By culpable marriages, by omission of prescribed cere‘ monies, by neglect of reading the Véda, and by irreverence
 ‘ toward a Bráhmén, great families are sunk to a low state:

64 ‘ So they are by practising manual arts, by lending at ‘ interest and other pecuniary transactions, by begetting chil‘ dren on Súdras only, by traffick in kine, horses, and carri‘ ages, by agriculture, and by attendance on a king.

65 ‘ By sacrificing for such, as have no right to sacri‘ fice, and by denying a future compensation for good ‘ works, great families, being deprived of sacred knowledge, ‘ are quickly destroyed;

66 ‘ But families, enriched by a knowledge of the Vé- ‘ da, though possessing little temporal wealth, are number‘ ed among the great, and acquire exalted fame.

67 ‘ LET the house-keeper perform domestick religious ‘ rites, with the nuptial fire, according to law, and the ce‘ remonies of the five great sacraments, and the several acts, ‘ which must day by day be performed.

68 ‘ A house-keeper has five places of slaughter, or ‘ where small living creatures may be slain, his kitchen-hearth, ‘ his grind-stone, his broom, his pestle and mortar, his water ‘ pot; by using which, he becomes in bondage to sin:

69 ‘ For the sake of expiating offences committed ignorantly
 ‘ in those places mentioned in order, the five great sacraments ‘ were appointed by eminent sages to be performed each day
 ‘ by such as keep house.

70 ‘ Teaching and studying the scripture is the sacra‘ ment of the Véda; offering cakes and water, the sacrament ‘ of the Manes; an oblation to fire, the sacrament of the ‘ deities; giving rice or other food to living creatures, the sa‘ crament of spirits; receiving guests with honour, the sa‘ crament of men:

71 ‘ Whoever omits not those five great ceremonies, ‘ if he have ability to perform them, is untainted by the ‘ sins of the five slaughtering places, even though he con‘ stantly reside at home;

72 ‘ But whoever cherishes not five orders of beings, ‘ namely, the deities; those, who demand hospitality; those,
 ‘ whom he ought by law to maintain; his departed fore-fa‘ thers; and himself; that man lives not, even though he ‘ breathe.

73 ‘ Some call the five sacraments ahuta and huta, prahuta, bráhmia-huta, and prásita :

74 ‘ Ahuta, or unoffered, is divine study; huta, or offered, is the oblation to fire; prahuta, or well offered, is the food given to spirits; bráhmia-huta is respect shown to twiceborn guests; and prásita, or well eaten, is the offering of rice or water to the manes of ancestors.

75 ‘ Let every man in this second order employ himself daily in reading the scripture, and in performing the sacrament of the gods; for, being employed in the sacrament of deities, he supports this whole animal and vegetable world;

76 ‘ Since his oblation of clarified butter, duly cast into the flame, ascends in smoke to the sun; from the sun it falls in rain; from rain comes vegetable food; and from such food animals derive their subsistence.

77 ‘ As all creatures subsist by receiving support from air, thus all orders of men exist by receiving support from housekeepers;

78 ‘ And, since men of the three other orders are each day nourished by them with divine learning and with food, a housekeeper is for this reason of the most eminent order:

79 ‘ That order, therefore, must be constantly sustained with great care by the man, who seeks unperishable bliss in heaven, and in this world pleasurable sensations; an order, which cannot be sustained by men with uncontrolled organs.

80 ‘ The divine sages, the manes, the gods, the spirits, and guests, pray for benefits to masters of families; let these

‘ honours, therefore, be done to them by the housekeeper, ‘ who knows his duty :

81 ‘ Let him honour the sages by studying the Véda ;
 ‘ the gods, by oblations to fire ordained by law ; the manes,
 ‘ by pious obsequies ; men, by supplying them with food ;
 ‘ and spirits, by gifts to all animated creatures.

82 ‘ Each day let him perform a śráddha with boiled ‘ rice and the like, or with water, or with milk, roots, and ‘ fruit ; for thus he obtains favour from departed progenitors.

83 ‘ He may entertain one Bráhmen in that sacrament ‘ among the five, which is performed for the Pitri's ; but, at ‘ the oblation to all the Gods, let him not invite even a sin‘ gle priest.

84 ‘ In his domestick fire for dressing the food of all
 ‘ the Gods, after the prescribed ceremony, let a Bráhmen
 ‘ make an oblation each day to these following divinities ;

85 ‘ First to AGNI, god of fire, and to the Lunar God, ‘ severally ; then, to both of them at once ; next, to the assem‘ bled Gods ; and afterwards, to DHANWANTARI, God of ‘ Medicine ;

86 ‘ To CUHU´, goddess of the day, when the new ‘ moon is discernible ; to ANUMATI, goddess of the day af‘ ter the opposition ; to PRAJA´PATI, or the Lord of Creatures ; ‘ to DYA´VA´ and PRITHIVI´, goddesses of sky and earth ; and ‘ lastly, to the fire of the good sacrifice.

87 ‘ Having thus, with fixed attention, offered clarified
 ‘ butter in all quarters, proceeding from the east in a south‘ ern direction, to INDRA, YAMA, VARUNA, and the god ‘ SOMA, let him offer his gift to animated creatures :

88 ‘ Saying, “ I salute the Maruts,” or Winds, let him

‘ throw dressed rice near the door ; saying, “ I salute the water “ gods,” in water ; and on his pestle and mortar, saying, “ I “ salute the gods of large trees.”

89 ‘ Let him do the like in the north east, or near his ‘ pillow, to SRR, the goddess of Abundance ; in the south west,
 ‘ or at the foot of his bed, to the propitious goddess
 ‘ BHADRACÁLÍ ; in the centre of his mansion, to BRAHMA
 ‘ and his household God ;

90 ‘ To all the Gods assembled let him throw up his ‘ oblation in open air ; by day to the spirits, who walk in ‘ light ; and by night to those, who walk in darkness :

91 ‘ In the building on his housetop, or behind his back,
 ‘ let him cast his oblation for the welfare of all creatures ;
 ‘ , and what remains let him give to the Pitrís with his face ‘ toward the south :

92 ‘ The share of dogs, of outcasts, of dogfeeders, of ‘ sinful men punished with elephantiasis or consumption, of ‘ crows, and of reptiles, let him drop on the ground by lit‘ tle and little.

93 ‘ A Bráhmén, who thus each day shall honour all ‘ beings, will go to the highest region in a straight path, with ‘ an irradiated form.

94 ‘ When he has performed this duty of making ob‘ lations, let him cause his guest to take food before him‘ self ; and let him give a portion of rice, as the law ordains, ‘ to the mendicant, who studies the Véda :

95 ‘ Whatever fruit shall be obtained by that student,
 ‘ as the reward of his virtue, when he shall have given a ‘ cow to his preceptor, according to law, the like reward
 ‘ of virtue shall be obtained by the twiceborn housekeep-

‘ er, when he has given a mouthful of rice to the religious ‘ mendicant.

96 ‘ To a Bráhmén, who knows the true principle of ‘ the Véda, let him present a portion of rice, or a pot of ‘ water garnished with fruit and flowers, due ceremonies ‘ having preceded:

97 ‘ Shares of oblations to the gods, or to the manes, ‘ utterly perish, when presented, through delusion of mind, ‘ by men regardless of duty, to such ignorant Bráhméns, as ‘ are mere ashes;

98 ‘ But an offering in the fire of a sacerdotal mouth, ‘ which richly blazes with true knowledge and piety, will ‘ release the giver from distress and even from deadly sin.

99 ‘ To the guest, who comes of his own accord, let ‘ him offer a seat and water, with such food as he is able ‘ to prepare, after the due rites of courtesy.

100 ‘ A Bráhmén, coming as a guest and not received ‘ with just honour, takes to himself all the reward of the ‘ housekeeper’s former virtue, even though he had been ‘ so temperate as to live on the gleanings of harvests, and ‘ so pious as to make oblations in five distinct fires.

101 ‘ Grass and earth to sit on, water to wash the feet,
‘ and, fourthly, affectionate speech are at no time deficient ‘ in the mansions of the good, although they may be indi- ‘ gent.

102 ‘ A Bráhmén, staying but one night as a guest, is ‘ called an atit’bi; since, continuing so short a time, he is ‘ not even a sojourner for a whole tit’bi, or day of the moon.

103 ‘ The housekeeper must not consider as an atit’bi
‘ a mere visiter of the same town, or a Bráhmén, who at‘ tends him on business, even though he come to the house, ‘ where his wife dwells, and where his fires are kindled.

104 ‘ Should any housekeepers be so senseless, as to seek, ‘ on pretence of being guests, the food of others, they ‘ would fall after death, by reason of that baseness, to the ‘ condition of cattle belonging to the giver of such food.

105 ‘ No guest must be dismissed in the evening by a ‘ housekeeper: he is sent by the retiring sun; and, whe‘ ther he come in fit season or unseasonably, he must not ‘ sojourn in the house without entertainment.

106 ‘ Let not himself eat any delicate food, without ask‘ ing his guest to partake of it: the satisfaction of a guest ‘ will assuredly bring the housekeeper wealth, reputation, ‘ long life, and a place in heaven.

107 ‘ To the highest guests in the best form, to the lowest ‘ in the worst, to the equal, equally, let him offer seats, resting ‘ places, couches; giving them proportionable attendance, ‘ when they depart; and honour, as long as they stay.

108 ‘ Should another guest arrive, when the oblation to ‘ all the Gods is concluded, for him also let the housekeep‘ er prepare food, according to his ability; but let him not ‘ repeat his offerings to animated beings.

109 ‘ Let no Bráhmén guest proclaim his family and an‘ cestry for the sake of an entertainment; since he, who ‘ thus proclaims them, is called by the wise a vántáfi, or ‘ foulfeeding demon.

110 ‘ A military man is not denominated a guest in the ‘ house of a Bráhmén; nor a man of the commercial or ser‘ vile class; nor his familiar friend; nor his paternal kinf‘ man; nor his preceptor:

111 ‘ But, if a warrior come to his house in the form of ‘ a guest, let food be prepared for him, according to his ‘ desire, after the before mentioned Bráhmens have eaten.

112 ‘ Even to a merchant or a labourer, approaching ‘ his house in the manner of guests, let him give food, show‘ ing marks of benevolence, at the same time with his do‘ mesticks :

113 ‘ To others, as familiar friends, and the rest before ‘ named, who come with affection to his place of abode, ‘ let him serve a repast at the same time with his wife and ‘ himself, having amply provided it according to his best ‘ means.

114 ‘ To a bride, and to a damsel, to the sick, and to ‘ pregnant women, let him give food, even before his guests, ‘ without hesitation.

115 ‘ The idiot, who first eats his own melfs, without ‘ having presented food to the persons just enumerated, ‘ knows not, while he crams, that he will himself be food ‘ after death for bandogs and vultures.

116 ‘ After the repast of the Bráhmen guest, of his kinf‘ men, and his domesticks, the married couple may eat what ‘ remains untouched.

117 ‘ The housekeeper, having honoured spirits, holy ‘ fages, men, progenitors, and household gods, may feed on ‘ what remains after those oblations.

118 ‘ He, who eats what has been dressed for himself ‘ only, eats nothing but sin : a repast on what remains, after ‘ the sacraments, is called the banquet of the good.

119 ‘ After a year from the reception of a visiter, let the ‘ housekeeper again honour a king, a sacrificer, a student

‘ returned from his preceptor, a son in law, a father in law,
 ‘ and a maternal uncle, with a madhuperca, or present of ho‘ ney, curds, and fruit.

120 ‘ A king or a Bráhmén, arriving at the celebration ‘ of the sacrament, are to be honoured with a madhuperca ; ‘ but not, if the sacrament be over : this is a settled rule.

121 ‘ In the evening, let the wife make an offering of the ‘ dressed food, but without pronouncing any text of the ‘ Véda : one oblation to the assembled Gods, thence named ‘ Vaiswadéva, is ordained both for evening and morning.

122 ‘ FROM month to month, on the dark day of the ‘ moon, let a twiceborn man having finished the daily sa‘ crament of the Pitr̥is, and his fire being still blazing, per‘ form the solemn śráddha, called pindánwáhárya :

123 ‘ Sages have distinguished the monthly śráddha by ‘ the title of anwáhárya, or after eaten, that is, eaten after the ‘ pinda, or ball of rice ; and it must be performed with ex‘ treme care, and with fleshmeat in the best condition.

124 ‘ What Bráhmens must be entertained at that cere‘ mony, and who must be excepted, how many are to be ‘ fed, and with what sorts of food, on all those articles ‘ without omission, I will fully discourse.

125 ‘ At the śráddha of the gods he may entertain two ‘ Bráhmens ; at that of his father, paternal grandfather, and ‘ paternal great grandfather, three ; or one only at that of ‘ the gods, and one at that for his three paternal ancestors : ‘ though he abound in wealth let him not be solicitous to ‘ entertain a large company.

126 ‘ A large company destroys these five advantages ; ‘ reverence to priests, propriety of time and place, purity,

127 ‘ This act of due honour to departed souls, on the dark day of the moon, is famed by the appellation of pitrya, or ancestral: the legal ceremony, in honour of departed spirits, rewards with continual fruit a man engaged in such obsequies.

128 ‘ Oblations to the gods and to ancestors should be given to a most reverend Bráhmen, perfectly conversant with the Véda; since what is given to him produces the greatest reward.

129 ‘ By entertaining one learned man at the oblation to the gods and at that to ancestors, he gains more exalted fruit, than by feeding a multitude, who know not the holy texts.

130 ‘ Let him inquire into the ancestry, even in a remote degree, of a Bráhmen, who has advanced to the end of the Véda: such a man, if sprung from good men, is a fit partaker of oblations to gods and to ancestors; such a man may justly be called an atit’hi, or guest.

131 ‘ Surely, though a million of men, unlearned in holy texts, were to receive food, yet a single man, learned in scripture, and fully satisfied with his entertainment, would be of more value than all of them together.

132 ‘ Food, consecrated to the gods and the manes, must be presented to a theologian of eminent learning; for certainly, when hands are smeared with blood, they cannot be cleaned with blood only, nor can sin be removed by the company of sinners.

133 ‘ As many mouthfuls as an unlearned man shall

• swallow at an oblation to the gods and to ancestors; so
 • many redhot iron balls must the giver of the śrāddha
 • swallow in the next world.

134 ‘ Some Brāhmins are intent on scriptural knowledge; • others, on austere devotion; some are intent both on religious austerity and on the study of the Véda; others,
 • on the performance of sacred rites:

135 ‘ Oblations to the manes of ancestors ought to be • placed with care before such, as are intent on sacred learn• ing: but offerings to the gods may be presented, with • due ceremonies, to Brāhmins of all the four descrip• tions.

136 ‘ There may be a Brāhmen, whose father had not • studied the scripture, though the son has advanced to the • end of the Véda; or there may be one, whose son has not
 • read the Véda, though the father had travelled to the end
 • of it:

137 ‘ Of those two let mankind consider him as the • superiour, whose father had studied the scripture; yet, for
 • the sake of performing rites with holy texts, the other is • worthy of honour.

138 ‘ Let no man, at the prescribed obsequies, give food
 • to an intimate friend; since advantage to a friend must be • procured by gifts of different property: to that Brāhmen let
 • the performer of a śrāddha give food, whom he considers • neither as a friend nor as a foe.

139 ‘ For him, whose obsequies and offerings of clari-
 • fied butter are provided chiefly through friendship, no
 • fruit is reserved in the next life, on account either of his • obsequies or of his offerings.

140 ‘ The man, who, through delusion of intellect, forms ‘ temporal connexions by obsequies, is excluded from hea‘ venly mansions, as a giver of the śrāddha for the sake of ‘ friendship, and the meanest of twiceborn men :

141 ‘ Such a convivial present, by men of the three ‘ highest classes, is called the gift of Pisāchas, and remains ‘ fixed here below, like a blind cow in one stall.

142 ‘ As a husbandman, having sown seed in a barren ‘ soil, reaps no grain, thus a performer of holy rites, having ‘ given clarified butter to an unlearned Brāhmen, attains ‘ no reward in heaven;

143 ‘ But a present made, as the law ordains, to a learn‘ ed theologian, renders both the giver and the receiver par‘ takers of good fruits in this world and in the next.

144 ‘ If no learned Brāhmen be at hand, he may at his ‘ pleasure invite a friend to the śrāddha, but not a foe, be ‘ he ever so learned; since the oblation, being eaten by a ‘ foe, loses all fruit in the life to come.

145 ‘ With great care let him give food at the śrāddha
 ‘ to a priest, who has gone through the scripture, but has ‘ chiefly studied the Rīgvēda; to one, who has read all the ‘ branches, but principally those of the Yajush; or to one, ‘ who has finished the whole, with particular attention to ‘ the Sāman :

146 ‘ Of that man, whose oblation has been eaten, after ‘ due honours, by any one of those three Brāhmens, the ‘ ancestors are constantly satisfied as high as the seventh ‘ person, or to the sixth degree.

147 ‘ This is the chief rule in offering the śrāddha to ‘ the gods and to ancestors; but the following may be con-

‘ sidered as a subsidiary rule, where no such learned priests ‘ can be found, and is ever observed by good men:

148 ‘ Let him entertain his maternal grandfather, his ‘ maternal uncle, the son of his sister, the father of his wife, ‘ his spiritual guide, the son of his daughter, or her hus‘ band, his maternal cousin, his officiating priest, or the ‘ performer of his sacrifice.

149 ‘ For an oblation to the gods, let not the man, who ‘ knows what is law, scrupulously inquire into the parentage
‘ of a Bráhmén; but for a prepared oblation to ancestors, ‘ let him examine it with strict care.

150 ‘ Those Bráhméns, who have committed any infe‘ rior theft or any of the higher crimes, who are deprived ‘ of virility, or who profess a disbelief in a future state, ‘ MENU has pronounced unworthy of honour at a śráddha to ‘ the gods or to ancestors.

151 ‘ To a student in theology, who has not read the ‘ Véda, to a man punished for past crimes by being born without ‘ a prepuce, to a gamester, and to such, as perform many ‘ sacrifices for other men, let him never give food at the ‘ sacred obsequies.

152 ‘ Physicians, imageworshippers for gain, sellers of ‘ meat, and such as live by low traffick, must be shunned ‘ in oblations both to the deities and to progenitors.

153 ‘ A publick servant of the whole town, or of the ‘ prince, a man with whitlows on his nails, or with black ‘ yellow teeth, an opposer of his preceptor, a deserter of the ‘ sacred fire, and an usurer,

154 ‘ A phthifical man, a feeder of cattle, one omitting
‘ the five great sacraments, a contemner of Bráhméns, a

‘ younger brother married before the elder, an elder brother ‘ not married before the younger, and a man, who subsists ‘ by the wealth of many relations,

155 ‘ A dancer, one who has violated the rule of chas‘ tity in the first or fourth order, the husband of a Súdra, the ‘ son of a twicemarried woman, a man who has lost one ‘ eye, and a husband in whose house an adulterer dwells,

156 ‘ One who teaches the Véda for wages, and one ‘ who gives wages to such a teacher, the pupil of a Súdra, and ‘ the Súdra preceptor, a rude speaker, and the son of an adul‘ terers, born either before or after the death of the husband,

157 ‘ A forsaker, without just cause, of his mother, fa‘ ther, or preceptor, and a man who forms a connexion, ei‘ ther by scriptural or connubial affinity, with great sinners,

158 ‘ A houseburner, a giver of poison, an eater of ‘ food offered by the son of an adulterers, a seller of the ‘ moonplant, a species of mountain rue, a navigator of the ‘ ocean, a poetical encomiast, an oilman, and a suborner of ‘ perjury,

159 ‘ A wrangler with his father, an employer of game‘ sters for his own benefit, a drinker of intoxicating spirits, ‘ a man punished for sin with elephantiasis, one of evil re‘ pute, a cheat, and a seller of liquids,

160 ‘ A maker of bows and arrows, the husband of a ‘ younger sister married before the elder of the whole blood, ‘ an injurer of his friend, the keeper of a gaminghouse,
 ‘ and a father instructed in the Véda by his own son,

161 ‘ An epileptick person, one who has the erysi‘ pelas or the leprosy, a common informer, a lunatick, a blind ‘ man, and a despiser of scripture, must all be shunned.

162 ‘ A tamer of elephants, bulls, horses, or camels, a ‘ man who subsists by astrology, a keeper of birds, and one ‘ who teaches the use of arms,

163 ‘ He, who diverts watercourses, and he, who is ‘ gratified by obstructing them, he, who builds houses for ‘ gain, a messenger, and a planter of trees for pay,

164 ‘ A breeder of sporting dogs, a falconer, a sedu‘ cer of damsels, a man delighting in mischief, a Bráhmén
 ‘ living as a Súdra, a sacrificer to the inferiour gods only,

165 ‘ He, who observes not approved customs, and he,
 ‘ who regards not prescribed duties, a constant importunate ‘ asker of favours, he, who supports himself by tillage, a ‘ clubfooted man, and one despised by the virtuous,

166 ‘ A shepherd, a keeper of buffalos, the husband ‘ of a twicemarried woman, and the remover of dead bodies ‘ for pay, are to be avoided with great care.

167 ‘ Those lowest of Bráhméns, whose manners are ‘ contemptible, who are not admissible into company at a ‘ repast, an exalted and learned priest must avoid at both ‘ fráddhas.

168 ‘ A Bráhmén, unlearned in holy writ, is extinguish‘ ed in an instant like a fire of dry grass: to him the obla‘ tion must not be given; for the clarified butter must not ‘ be poured on ashes.

169 ‘ WHAT retribution is prepared in the next life ‘ for the giver of food to men inadmissible into company, ‘ at the fráddha to the gods and to ancestors, I will now ‘ declare without omission.

170 ‘ On that food, which has been given to Bráhméns, ‘ who have violated the rules of their order, to the young-

‘ er brother married before the elder, and to the rest, who ‘ are not admissibile into company, the Racshases eagerly ‘ feast.

171 ‘ He, who makes a marriage contract with the ‘ connubial fire, while his elder brother continues un‘ married, is called a perivéttri; and the elder brother, a ‘ perivitti:

172 ‘ The perivéttri, the perivitti, the damsel thus wed‘ ded, the giver of her in wedlock, and, fifthly, the perform‘ er of the nuptial sacrifice, all sink to a region of tor-

173 ‘ He, who lasciviously dallies with the widow of ‘ his deceased brother, though she be legally married to ‘ him, is denominated the husband of a didhishú.

174 ‘ Two sons, named a cunda and a gólaca, are born ‘ in adultery; the cunda, while the husband is alive, and ‘ the gólaca, when the husband is dead:

175 ‘ Those animals, begotten by adulterers, destroy, ‘ both in this world and in the next, the food presented to ‘ them by such, as make oblations to the gods or to the ‘ manes.

176 ‘ The foolish giver of a fráddha loses, in a future ‘ life, the fruit of as many admissibile guests, as a thief or the ‘ like person, inadmissibile into company, might be able to ‘ see.

177 ‘ A blind man, placed where one with eyes might ‘ have seen, destroys the reward of ninety; he, who has lost ‘ one eye, of sixty; a leper, of an hundred; one punished ‘ with elephantiasis, of a thousand.

178 ‘ Of the gift at a fráddha to as many Bráhmens, as

‘ a sacrificer for a Súdra might be able to touch on the body, ‘ the fruit is lost to the giver, if he invite such a wretch;

179 ‘ And if a *Bráhma*n, who knows the Véda, receive ‘ through covetousness a present from such a sacrificer, he ‘ speedily sinks to perdition, like a figure of unburned clay ‘ in water.

180 ‘ Food, given to a feller of the moonplant, be‘ comes ordure in another world; to a physician, purulent ‘ blood; and the giver will be a reptile bred in them: if offer‘ ed to an imageworshipper, it is thrown away; if to an ‘ usurer, infamous.

181 ‘ That, which is given to a trader, endures neither ‘ in this life nor in the next, and that bestowed on a Bráh-
 ‘ men, who has married a widow, resembles clarified butter ‘ poured on ashes as an oblation to fire.

182 ‘ That food, which is given to other base inadmissi‘ ble men before mentioned, the wise have pronounced to ‘ be no more than animal oil, blood, flesh, skin, and ‘ bones.

183 ‘ Now learn comprehensively, by what Bráhmens
 ‘ a company may be purified, when it has been defiled by ‘ inadmissible persons; Bráhmens, the chief of their class, the ‘ purifiers of every assembly.

184 ‘ Those priests must be considered as the purifiers
 ‘ of a company, who are most learned in all the Védas
 ‘ and all their Angas, together with their descendants, who ‘ have read the whole scripture:

185 ‘ A priest learned in a principal part of the Yajur- ‘ véda; one, who keeps the five fires constantly burning; ‘ one skilled in a principal part of the Rigvéda; one, who

• explains the fix Védāngas; the son of a Bráhmī, or woman
 • married by the Bráhma ceremony; and one, who chants
 • the principal Sáman;

186 • One, who propounds the sense of the Védas, which • he learnt from his preceptor, a student, who has given a
 • thousand cows for pious uses, and a Bráhmen a hundred • years old, must all be considered as the purifiers of a party
 • at a fráddha.

187 • ON the day before the sacred obsequies, or on
 • the very day when they are prepared, let the performer
 • of them invite, with due honour, such *Bráhmen*s, as have • been mentioned; usually one superiour, who has three
 • inferiour to him.

188 • The Bráhmen, who has been invited to a fráddha
 • for departed ancestors, must be continually abstemious; he • must not even read the Védas; and he, who performs the • ceremony, must act in the same manner.

189 • Departed ancestors, no doubt, are attendant on • such invited *Bráhmen*s; hovering around them like pure
 • spirits, and sitting by them, when they are seated.

190 • The priest, who, having been duly invited to a • fráddha, breaks the appointment, commits a grievous of-
 • fence, and, in his next birth, becomes a hog.

191 • He, who caresses a Súdra woman, after he has been • invited to sacred obsequies, takes on himself all the sin,
 • that has been committed by the giver of the repast.

192 • The Pitrīs, or great progenitors, are free from wrath,
 • intent on purity, ever exempt from sensual passions, endued
 • with exalted qualities: they are primeval divinities, who • have laid arms aside.

193 ' HEAR now completely, from whom they sprang;
' who they are; by whom, and by what ceremonies, they are
' to be honoured.

194 ' The sons of MARÍCHI and of all the other Rīshis,
' who were the offspring of MENU, son of BRAHMA', are
' called the companies of Pitrīs, or forefathers.

195 ' The Sómasads, who sprang from VIRAJ, are declar-
' ed to be the ancestors of the Sádhyas; and the Agnishwát-
' tas, who are famed among created beings as the children
' of MARÍCHI, to be the progenitors of the Dévas.

196 ' Of the Dāityas, the Dánavas, the Yacshas, the Gan-
' dharvas, the Uragas, or Serpents, the Racshases, the Garu-
' das, and the Ginnaras, the ancestors are Barhishads de-
' scended from ATRI;

197 ' Of Bráhmens, those named Sómapas; of Cshatriyas;
' the Havishmats; of Vaisyas, those called Ajyapas; of Súd-
' ras, the Sucálinas :

198 ' The Sómapas descended from Me, BHRĪGU; the ' Havishmats, from ANGIRAS; the Ajyapas, from PULASTYA;
' the Sucálinas, from VASISHT'HA.

199 ' Those who are, and those who are not, consuma-
' ble by fire, called Agnidagdhas, and Anagnidagdhas, the
' Cāvyas, the Barhishads, the Agnishwáttas, and the Sau-
' myas, let mankind consider as the chief progenitors of ' Bráhmens.

200 ' Of those just enumerated, who are generally re-
' puted the principal tribes of Pitrīs, the sons and grandsons
' indefinitely are also in this world considered as great pro-
' genitors.

201 ' From the Rīshis come the Pitrīs, or patriarchs;

‘ from the Pitrīs, both Dévas and Dánavas; from the Dévas, ‘ this whole world of animals and vegetables in due or‘ der.

202 ‘ Mere water, offered with faith to the progenitors ‘ of men, in vessels of silver, or adorned with silver, proves
 ‘ the source of incorruption.

203 ‘ An oblation by Bráhmens to their ancestors tran‘ scends an oblation to the deities; because that to the deities ‘ is considered as the opening and completion of that to an‘ cestors:

204 ‘ As a preservative of the oblation to the patriarchs, ‘ let the housekeeper begin with an offering to the gods;
 ‘ for the Racshases rend in pieces an oblation, which has no ‘ such preservative.

205 ‘ Let an offering to the gods be made at the begin‘ ning and end of the śráddha: it must not begin and end
 ‘ with an offering to ancestors; for he, who begins and ends ‘ it with an oblation to the Pitrīs, quickly perishes with his ‘ progeny.

206 ‘ LET the Bráhmen smear with cowdung a purified ‘ and sequestered piece of ground; and let him with great ‘ care select a place with a declivity toward the south:

207 ‘ The divine manes are always pleased with an ob‘ lation in empty glades, naturally clean, on the banks of ‘ rivers, and in solitary spots.

208 ‘ Having duly made an ablution with water, let him ‘ place the invited Bráhmens, who have also performed ‘ their ablutions, one by one, on allotted seats purified with ‘ cuśa-grafs.

209 ‘ When he has placed them with reverence on ‘ their seats, let him honour them (having first honoured the gods) with fragrant garlands and sweet odours.

210 ‘ Having brought water for them with cuśa-grafs and tila, let the Bráhmen, with the Bráhmens, pour the oblation, as the law directs, on the holy fire.

211 ‘ First, as it is ordained, having satisfied AGNI, SO-MA, and YAMA, with clarified butter, let him proceed to satisfy the manes of his progenitors.

212 ‘ If he have no consecrated fire, as if he be yet unmarried, or his wife be just deceased, let him drop the oblation into the hand of a Bráhmen; since, what fire is, even such is a Bráhmen; as priests, who know the Véda, declare:

213 ‘ Holy sages call the chief of the twiceborn the gods of obsequies, free from wrath, with placid aspects, of a primeval race, employed in the advancement of human creatures.

214 ‘ Having walked in order from east to south, and thrown into the fire all the ingredients of his oblation, let him sprinkle water on the ground with his right hand.

215 ‘ From the remainder of the clarified butter having formed three balls of rice, let him offer them, with fixed attention, in the same manner as the water, his face being turned to the south:

216 ‘ Then, having offered those balls, after due ceremonies and with an attentive mind, to the manes of his father, his paternal grandfather, and great grandfather, let him wipe the same hand with the roots of cuśa, which he had before used, for the sake of his paternal ancestors in the fourth, fifth, and sixth degrees, who are the partakers of the rice and clarified butter thus wiped off.

217 ‘ Having made an ablution, returning toward the ‘ north, and thrice suppressing his breath slowly, let him sa‘ lute the gods of the six seasons, and the Pitrīs also, being ‘ well acquainted with proper texts of the Vēda.

218 ‘ Whatever water remains in his ewer, let him ‘ carry back deliberately near the cakes of rice; and, with ‘ fixed attention, let him smell those cakes, in order as they ‘ were offered:

219 ‘ Then, taking a small portion of the cakes in or‘ der, let him first, as the law directs, cause the Brāhmins
 ‘ to eat of them, while they are seated.

220 ‘ If his father be alive, let him offer the śrāddha to ‘ his ancestors in three higher degrees; or let him cause his ‘ own father to eat, as a Brāhmen, at the obsequies:

221 ‘ Should his father be dead, and his grandfather ‘ living, let him, in celebrating the name of his father, that ‘ is, in performing obsequies to him, celebrate also his paternal ‘ great grandfather;

222 ‘ Either the paternal grandfather may partake of ‘ the śrāddha (so has MENU declared) or the grandson, autho‘ rized by him, may perform the ceremony at his discretion.

223 ‘ Having poured water, with cusā-grās and tīla, in-
 ‘ to the hands of the Brāhmins, let him give them the up‘ per part of the cakes, saying, “Svadhā to the manes!”

224 ‘ Next, having himself brought with both hands a ‘ vessel full of rice, let him, still meditating on the Pitrīs, ‘ place it before the Brāhmins without precipitation.

225 ‘ Rice taken up, but not supported with both hands,
 ‘ the malevolent Aśuras quickly rend in pieces.

226 ‘ Broths, potherbs, and other eatables accompany-

‘ ing the rice, together with milk and curds, clarified butter and honey, let him first place on the ground, after he has made an ablution; and let his mind be intent on no other object:

227 ‘ Let him add spiced puddings, and milky messes of various sorts, roots of herbs and ripe fruits, flavoury meats, and sweetsmelling drinks.

228 ‘ Then being duly purified, and with perfect presence of mind, let him take up all the dishes one by one, and present them in order to the Bráhmens, proclaiming their qualities.

229 ‘ Let him at no time drop a tear; let him on no account be angry; let him say nothing false; let him not touch the eatables with his foot; let him not even shake the dishes:

230 ‘ A tear sends the messes to restless ghosts; anger, to foes; falsehood, to dogs; contact with his foot, to demons; agitation, to sinners.

231 ‘ Whatever is agreeable to the Bráhmens, let him give without envy; and let him discourse on the attributes of GOD: such discourse is expected by the manes.

232 ‘ At the obsequies to ancestors, he must let the Bráhmens hear passages from the Véda, from the codes of law, from moral tales, from heroick poems, from the Puránas, and from theological texts.

233 ‘ Himself being delighted, let him give delight to the Bráhmens, and invite them to eat of the provisions by little and little; attracting them often with the dressed rice and other eatables, and mentioning their good properties.

234 ‘ To the son of his daughter, though a student in ‘ theology, let him carefully give food at the śrāddha; offer‘ ing him a blanket from Népāl as his feat, and sprinkling

 ‘ the ground with tila :

235 ‘ Three things are held pure at such obsequies, the ‘ daughter’s son, the Népāl blanket, and the tila; and three ‘ things are praised in it by the wife, cleanliness, freedom ‘ from wrath, and want of precipitate haste.

236 ‘ Let all the dressed food be very hot; and let the ‘ Bráhmens eat it in silence; nor let them declare the quali‘ ties of the food, even though asked by the giver.

237 ‘ As long as the messes continue warm, as long ‘ as they eat in silence, as long as the qualities of the food
 ‘ are not declared by them, so long the manes feast on it.

238 ‘ What a Bráhmen eats with his head covered, ‘ what he eats with his face to the south, what he eats with ‘ sandals on his feet, the demons assuredly devour.

239 ‘ Let not a Chandála, a townboar, a cock, a dog, ‘ a woman in her courses, or an eunuch, see the Bráhmens
 ‘ eating :

240 ‘ That, which any one of them sees at the oblation
 ‘ to fire, at a solemn donation of cows and gold, at a repast ‘ given to Bráhmens, at holy rites to the gods, and at the ‘ obsequies to ancestors, produces not the intended fruit :

241 ‘ The boar destroys it by his smell; the cock, by ‘ the air of his wings; the dog, by the cast of a look; the ‘ man of the lowest class, by the touch.

242 ‘ If a lame man, or a man with one eye, or a man ‘ with a limb defective or redundant, be even a servant of ‘ the giver, him also let his master remove from the place.

243 ‘ Should another Bráhmen, or a mendicant, come

‘ to his house for food, let him, having obtained permission ‘ from the invited Bráhmens, entertain the stranger to the best ‘ of his power.

244 ‘ Having brought together all the sorts of food, as ‘ dressed rice and the like, and sprinkling them with water, ‘ let him place them before the Bráhmens, who have eaten; ‘ dropping some on the blades of cusa grass, which have been ‘ spread on the ground.

245 ‘ What remains in the dishes, and what has been ‘ dropped on the blades of cusa, must be considered as the ‘ portion of deceased Bráhmens, not girt with the sacrificial ‘ thread, and of such as have deserted unreasonably the ‘ women of their own tribe.

246 ‘ The residue, that has fallen on the ground at the ‘ fráddha to the manes, the wife have decided to be the ‘ share of all the servants, who are not crooked in their ‘ ways, nor lazy and ill disposed.

247 ‘ Before the obsequies to ancestors as far as the ‘ sixth degree, they must be performed to a Bráhmen recent‘ ly deceased; but the performer of them must in that case ‘ give the fráddha without the ceremony to the gods, and ‘ offer only one round cake; and these obsequies for a sin- ‘ gle ancestor should be annually performed on the day of his ‘ death:

248 ‘ When, afterwards, the obsequies to ancestors as far ‘ as the sixth degree, inclusively of him, are performed ac‘ cording to law, then must the offering of cakes be made by ‘ the descendants in the manner before ordained for the ‘ monthly ceremonies.

249 ‘ THAT fool, who, having eaten of the fráddha,

‘ gives the residue of it to a man of the fervile class, falls ‘ headlong down to the hell, named Cálasútra.

250 ‘ Should the eater of a śrāddha enter, on the same ‘ day, the bed of a seducing woman, his ancestors would ‘ sleep for that month on her excrement.

251 ‘ HAVING, by the word śwaditam, asked the Bráhmens
 ‘ if they have eaten well, let him give them, being satisfied, ‘ water for an ablution, and courteously say to them :
 “ Rest either at home or here.”

252 ‘ Then let the Bráhmens address him, saying śwa- ‘ dhá; for, in all ceremonies relating to deceased ancestors, ‘ the word śwadhá is the highest benison.

253 ‘ After that, let him inform those, who have eaten, ‘ of the food which remains ; and, being instructed by the ‘ Bráhmens, let him dispose of it, as they may direct.

254 ‘ At the close of the śrāddha to his ancestors, he ‘ must ask, if the Bráhmens are satisfied, by the word śwa- ‘ dita; after that for his family, by the word śuśruta; af‘ ter that for his own advancement, by the word śampanna; ‘ after that, which has been offered to the gods, by the ‘ word ruchita.

255 ‘ The afternoon, the cūsa grass, the cleansing of the ‘ ground, the tilas, the liberal gifts of food, the due prepa‘ ration for the repast, and the company of most exalted ‘ Bráhmens, are true riches in the obsequies to ancestors.

256 ‘ The blades of cūsa, the holy texts, the forenoon, ‘ all the oblations, which will presently be enumerated, and the ‘ purification before mentioned, are to be considered as ‘ wealth in the śrāddha to the gods :

257 ‘ Such wild grains as are eaten by hermits, milk,

‘ the juice of the moonplant, meat untainted, and salt un‘ prepared by art, are held things fit, in their own nature, ‘ for the last mentioned offering.

258 ‘ Having dismissed the invited Bráhmens, keeping ‘ his mind attentive, and his speech suppressed, let him, after ‘ an ablution, look toward the south, and ask these blessings
 ‘ of the Pitrīs:

259 “ May generous givers abound in our house ! may “ the scriptures be studied, and progeny increase, in it ! may “ faith never depart from us ! and may we have much to “ bestow on the needy !”

260 ‘ Thus, having ended the śráddha, let him cause a ‘ cow, a priest, a kid, or the fire, to devour what remains ‘ of the cakes ; or let him cast them into the waters.

261 ‘ Some make the offering of the round cakes after ‘ the repast of the Bráhmens; some cause the birds to eat ‘ what remains, or cast it into water or fire.

262 ‘ Let a lawful wife, ever dutiful to her lord, and ‘ constantly honouring his ancestors, eat the middlemost of ‘ the three cakes, or that offered to his paternal grandfather, ‘ with due ceremonies, praying for offspring:

263 ‘ So may she bring forth a son, who will be long‘ lived, famed, and strongminded, wealthy, having nume‘ rous descendants, endued with the best of qualities, and ‘ performing all duties religious and civil.

264 ‘ THEN, having washed both his hands and sipped ‘ water, let him prepare some rice for his paternal kinsmen ; ‘ and, having given it them with due reverence, let him ‘ prepare food also for his maternal relations.

265 ‘ Let the residue continue in its place, until the ‘ Bráhmens have been dismissed; and then let him perform ‘ the remaining domestick sacraments.

266 ‘ WHAT sort of oblations, given duly to the manes, ‘ are capable of satisfying them for a long time or for eter‘ nity, I will now declare without omission.

267 ‘ The ancestors of men are satisfied a whole month ‘ with tila, rice, barley, black lentils or vetches, water, ‘ roots, and fruit, given with prescribed ceremonies;

268 ‘ Two months, with fish; three months, with ve‘ nison; four, with mutton; five, with the flesh of such birds, ‘ as the twiceborn may eat;

269 ‘ Six months, with the flesh of kids; seven, with ‘ that of spotted deer; eight, with that of the deer, or ‘ antelope, called éna; nine, with that of the ruru:

270 ‘ Ten months are they satisfied with the flesh of ‘ wild boars and wild buffalos; eleven, with that of rab‘ bits or hares, and of tortoises;

271 ‘ A whole year with the milk of cows, and food ‘ made of that milk; from the flesh of the long-eared ‘ white goat, their satisfaction endures twelve years.

272 ‘ The pot herb cálasáca, the fish mahásalca, or the ‘ diodon, the flesh of a rhinoceros, or of an ironcoloured ‘ kid, honey, and all such forestgrains as are eaten by her‘ mits, are formed for their satisfaction without end.

273 ‘ Whatever pure food, mixed with honey, a man ‘ offers on the thirteenth day of the moon, in the season
 ‘ of rain, and under the lunar asterism Maghà, has likewise ‘ a ceaseless duration.

274 “ Oh! may that man, say the manes, be born in “ our line, who may give us milky food, with honey and “ pure butter, both on the thirteenth of the moon, and “ when the shadow of an elephant falls to the east !”

275 ‘ Whatever a man, endued with strong faith, pi‘ ously offers, as the law has directed, becomes a perpetual un-‘ perishable gratification to his ancestors in the other world :

276 ‘ The tenth and so forth, except the fourteenth, in ‘ the dark half of the month, are the lunar days most ap‘ proved for sacred obsequies: as they are, so are not the others.

277 ‘ He, who does honour to the manes on even ‘ lunar days, and under even lunar stations, enjoys all his ‘ desires ; on odd lunar days, and under odd lunar asterisms, ‘ he procures an illustrious race.

278 ‘ As the latter, or dark, half of the month surpasse, ‘ for the celebration of obsequies, the former, or bright, ‘ half ; so the latter half of the day surpasse, for the same ‘ purpose, the former half of it.

279 ‘ The oblation to ancestors must be duly made, ‘ even to the conclusion of it with the distribution to the servants,
 ‘ (or even to the close of life) in the form prescribed, by a
 ‘ ing from left to right, without remissness, and with cusa
 ‘ grass in his hand.

280 ‘ Obsequies must not be performed by night ; since ‘ the night is called rácshasi or infested by demons ; nor while ‘ the sun is rising or setting, nor when it has just risen.

281 ‘ A housekeeper, unable to give a monthly repast, may ‘ perform obsequies here below, according to the sacred ‘ ordinance, only thrice a year, in the seasons of hémanta, ‘ grishma, and vershá ; but the five sacraments he must per‘ form daily.

282 ‘ The sacrificial oblation, at obsequies to ancestors, ‘ is ordained to be made in no vulgar fire; nor should the ‘ monthly śrāddha of that Brāhman, who keeps a perpetual ‘ fire, be made on any day except on that of the conjunc‘ tion.

283 ‘ When a twiceborn man, having performed his ‘ ablution, offers a satisfaction to the manes with water only, ‘ being unable to give a repast, he gains by that offering all the ‘ fruit of a śrāddha.

284 ‘ The wise call our fathers, Vasus; our paternal grand‘ fathers, Rudras; our paternal great grandfathers, Ādityas; ‘ (that is, all are to be revered as deities) and to this effect there ‘ is a primeval text in the Vēda.

285 ‘ Let a man, who is able, continually feed on vighasa,
 ‘ and continually feed on amṛita: by vighasa is meant the re‘ sidue of a repast at obsequies; and by amṛita, the residue
 ‘ of a sacrifice to the gods.

286 ‘ THIS complete system of rules, for the five sacra‘ ments and the like, has been declared to you: now hear ‘ the law for those means of subsistence, which the chief ‘ of the twiceborn may seek.

CHAPTER THE FOURTH.

ON ECONOMICKS; AND PRIVATE MORALS.

1 ‘ LET a Bráhmén, having dwelt with a preceptor during the first quarter of a man’s life, pass the second quarter of human life in his own house, when he has contracted a legal marriage.

2 ‘ He must live, with no injury, or with the least possible injury, to animated beings, by pursuing those means of gaining subsistence, which are strictly prescribed by law, except in times of distress:

3 ‘ For the sole purpose of supporting life, let him acquire property by those irreproachable occupations, which are peculiar to his class, and unattended with bodily pain.

4 ‘ He may live by rīta and amrīta, or, if necessary, by mrīta, or pramrīta, or even by satyanrīta; but never let him subsist by śwavrītti:

5 ‘ By rīta, must be understood lawful gleaning and gathering; by amrīta, what is given unasked; by mrīta, what is asked as alms; tillage is called pramrīta;

6 ‘ Traffick and moneylending are satyanrīta; even by them, when he is deeply distressed, may he support life; but service for hire is named śwavrītti, or dog-living, and of course he must by all means avoid it.

7 ‘ He may either store up grain for three years; or ‘ garner up enough for one year; or collect what may last ‘ three days; or make no provision for the morrow.

8 ‘ Of the four Bráhmens keeping house, who follow those ‘ four different modes, a preference is given to the last in or‘ der successively; as to him, who most completely by vir‘ tue has vanquished the world:

9 ‘ One of them subsists by all the six means of liveli‘ hood; another by three of them; a third, by two only;
 ‘ and a fourth lives barely on continually teaching the Véda.

10 ‘ He, who sustains himself by picking up grains
 ‘ and ears, must attach himself to some altar of consecra‘ ted fire, but constantly perform those rites only, which end ‘ with the dark and bright fortnights and with the solstices.

11 ‘ Let him never, for the sake of a subsistence, have ‘ recourse to popular conversation; let him live by the ‘ conduct of a priest, neither crooked, nor artful, nor ‘ blended with the manners of the mercantile class.

12 ‘ Let him, if he seek happiness, be firm in perfect ‘ content, and check all desire of acquiring more than he ‘ possesses; for happiness has its root in content, and discon‘ tent is the root of misery.

13 ‘ A Bráhmen keeping house, and supporting himself
 ‘ by any of the legal means before mentioned, must dis‘ charge these following duties, which conduce to fame, ‘ length of life, and beatitude.

14 ‘ Let him daily without sloth perform his peculiar ‘ duty, which the Véda prescribes; for he, who performs ‘ that duty, as well as he is able, attains the highest path to ‘ supreme bliss.

15 ‘ He must not gain wealth by musick or dancing, or by ‘ any art that pleases the sense; nor by any prohibited art; ‘ nor, whether he be rich or poor, must he receive gifts indif‘ criminately.

16 ‘ Let him not, from a selfish appetite, be strongly ‘ addicted to any sensual gratification; let him, by improv‘ ing his intellect, studiously preclude an excessive attach‘ ment to such pleasures, even though lawful.

17 ‘ All kinds of wealth, that may impede his reading
 ‘ the Véda, let him wholly abandon, persisting by all means ‘ in the study of scripture; for that will be found his most ‘ beneficial attainment.

18 Let him pass through this life, bringing his apparel, ‘ his discourse, and his frame of mind, to a conformity with ‘ his age, his occupations, his property, his divine knowledge, ‘ and his family.

19 ‘ Each day let him examine those holy books, which ‘ soon give increase of wisdom; and those, which teach the ‘ means of acquiring wealth; those, which are salutary to ‘ life; and those nigamas, which are explanatory of the Véda;

20 ‘ Since, as far as a man studies completely the system ‘ of sacred literature, so far only can he become eminently ‘ learned, and so far may his learning shine brightly.

21 ‘ The sacramental oblations to sages, to the gods, to ‘ spirits, to men, and to his ancestors, let him constantly per‘ form to the best of his power.

22 ‘ Some, who well know the ordinances for those obla‘ tions, perform not always externally the five great sacra‘ ments, but continually make offerings in their own organs
 ‘ of sensation and intellect:

23 ‘ Some constantly sacrifice their breath in their ‘ speech, when they instruct others, or praise GOD aloud, and ‘ their speech in their breath, when they meditate in silence; ‘ perceiving in their speech and breath thus employed the un-‘ perishable fruit of a sacrificial offering:

24 ‘ Other Bráhmens incessantly perform those sacrifices ‘ with scriptural knowledge only; seeing with the eye of ‘ divine learning, that scriptural knowledge is the root of ‘ every ceremonial observance.

25 ‘ Let a Bráhmen perpetually make oblations to con‘secrated fire, at the beginning and end of day and night, ‘ and at the close of each fortnight, or at the conjunction and ‘ opposition :

26 ‘ At the season, when old grain is usually consumed, ‘ let him offer new grain for a plentiful harvest; and at the ‘ close of the season, let him perform the rites called adhva- ‘ ra; at the solstices let him sacrifice cattle; at the end of ‘ the year, let his oblations be made with the juice of ‘ the moonplant:

27 ‘ Not having offered grain for the harvest, nor cattle
 ‘ at the time of the solstice, let no Bráhmen, who keeps hallow‘ ed fire, and wishes for long life, taste rice or flesh;

28 ‘ Since the holy fires, not being honoured with new ‘ grain and with a sacrifice of cattle, are greedy for rice and ‘ flesh, and seek to devour his vital spirits.

29 ‘ Let him take care, to the utmost of his power, that ‘ no guest sojourn in his house unhonoured with a seat, with ‘ food, with a bed, with water, with esculent roots, and with ‘ fruit:

30 ‘ But, let him not honour with his conversation such ‘ as do forbidden acts; such as subsist, like cats, by interested craft; such, as believe not the scripture; such as oppugn it by sophisms; or such as live like rapacious waterbirds.

31 ‘ With oblations to the gods and to ancestors, let him do reverence to Bráhmens of the second order, who who are learned in theology, who have returned home from their preceptors, after having performed their religious duties and fully studied the Véda; but men of an opposite description let him avoid.

32 ‘ Gifts must be made by each housekeeper, as far as he has ability, to religious mendicants, though heterodox; and a just portion must be reserved, without inconvenience to his family, for all sentient beings, animal and vegetable.

33 ‘ A priest, who is master of a family, and pines with hunger, may seek wealth from a king of the military class, from a sacrificer, or his own pupil, but from no person else, unless all other helps fail: thus will he show his respect for the law.

34 ‘ Let no priest, who keeps house, and is able to procure food, ever waste himself with hunger; nor, when he has any substance, let him wear old or fordid clothes.

35 ‘ His hair, nails, and beard, being clipped; his passions subdued; his mantle, white; his body, pure; let him diligently occupy himself in reading the Véda, and be constantly intent on such acts, as may be salutary to him.

36 ‘ Let him carry a staff of Vénu, an ewer with water in it, a handful of cusa grass, or a copy of the Véda; with a pair of bright golden rings in his ears.

37 ‘ He must not gaze on the sun, whether rising or ‘ setting, or eclipsed, or reflected in water, or advanced to ‘ the middle of the sky.

38 ‘ Over a string, to which a calf is tied, let him not ‘ step; nor let him run, while it rains; nor let him look on ‘ his own image in water: this is a settled rule.

39 ‘ By a mound of earth, by a cow, by an idol, by a ‘ Bráhmén, by a pot of clarified butter, or of honey, by a ‘ place where four ways meet, and by large trees well ‘ known in the district, let him pass with his right hand to‘ ward them.

40 ‘ Let him not, though mad with desire, approach ‘ his wife, when her courses appear; nor let him then sleep ‘ with her in the same bed;

41 ‘ Since the knowledge, the manhood, the strength,
 ‘ the eyesight, even the vital spirit, of him, who approach‘ es his wife thus defiled, utterly perish;

42 ‘ But the knowledge, the manhood, the strength, the ‘ sight, and the life of him, who avoids her in that state of ‘ defilement, are greatly increased.

43 ‘ Let him neither eat with his wife, nor look at her ‘ eating, or sneezing, or yawning, or sitting carelessly at her ease;

44 ‘ Nor let a Bráhmén, who desires manly strength, be‘ hold her setting off her eyes with black powder, or scent-‘ ing herself with essences, or baring her bosom, or bring‘ ing forth a child.

45 ‘ Let him not eat his food, wearing only a single ‘ cloth; nor let him bathe quite naked; nor let him eject ‘ urine or feces in the highway, nor on ashes, nor where ‘ kine are grazing,

46 ‘ Nor on tilled ground, nor in water, nor on wood

‘ raised for burning, nor, unless he be in great need, on a mountain, nor on the ruins of a temple, nor at any time on a nest of white ants,

47 ‘ Nor in ditches with living creatures in them, nor walking, nor standing, nor on the bank of a river, nor on the summit of a mountain :

48 ‘ Nor let him ever eject them, looking at things moved by the wind, or at fire, or at a priest, or at the sun, or at water, or at cattle;

49 ‘ But let him void his excrements, having covered the earth with wood, potherbs, dry leaves and grafs, or the like, carefully suppressing his utterance, wrapping up his breast and his head:

50 ‘ By day let him void them with his face to the north; by night, with his face to the south; at sunrise and sunset, in the same manner as by day;

51 ‘ In the shade or in darkness, whether by day or by night, let a Bráhmén ease nature with his face turned as he pleases; and in places where he fears injury to life from wild beasts or from reptiles.

52 ‘ Of him, who should urine against fire, against the sun or the moon, against a twiceborn man, a cow, or the wind, all the sacred knowledge would perish.

53 ‘ Let him not blow the fire with his mouth; let him not see his wife naked; let him not throw any foul thing into fire; nor let him warm his feet in it;

54 ‘ Nor let him place it in a chafing dish under his bed; nor let him stride over it; nor let him keep it, while he sleeps, at his feet: let him do nothing, that may be injurious to life.

55 ‘ At the time of sunrise or sunset, let him not eat,

‘ nor travel, nor lie down to rest; let him not idly draw ‘ lines on the ground; nor let him take off his own chaplet ‘ of flowers.

56 ‘ Let him not cast into water either urine or ordure, ‘ nor saliva, nor cloth, or any other thing, soiled with im‘ purity, nor blood, nor any kinds of poison.

57 ‘ Let him not sleep alone in an empty house; nor ‘ let him wake a sleeping man superiour to himself in wealth
 ‘ and in learning; nor let him speak to a woman at the time
 ‘ of her courses; nor let him go to perform a sacrifice, un‘ attended by an officiating priest.

58 ‘ In a temple of consecrated fire, in the pasture of kine, ‘ in the presence of Bráhmens, in reading the Véda, and in ‘ eating his food, let him hold out his right arm uncovered.

59 ‘ Let him not interrupt a cow while she is drinking, ‘ nor give notice to any, whose milk or water she drinks; nor ‘ let him, who knows right from wrong, and sees in the sky
 ‘ the bow of INDRA, show it to any man.

60 ‘ Let him not inhabit a town, in which civil and re‘ ligious duties are neglected; nor, for a long time, one in ‘ which diseases are frequent: let him not begin a journey ‘ alone: let him not reside long on a mountain.

61 ‘ Let him not dwell in a city governed by a Súdra ‘ king, nor in one surrounded with men unobservant of ‘ their duties, nor in one abounding with professed hereticks, ‘ nor in one swarming with lowborn outcasts.

62 ‘ Let him eat no vegetable, from which the oil has ‘ been extracted; nor indulge his appetite to satiety; nor eat ‘ either too early or too late; nor take any food in the even‘ ing, if he have eaten to fulness in the morning.

63 ‘ Let him make no vain corporeal exertion: let him ‘ not sip water taken up with his closed fingers: let him eat ‘ nothing placed in his lap: let him never take pleasure in ‘ asking idle questions.

64 ‘ Let him neither dance nor sing, nor play on musi‘ cal instruments, except in religious rites; nor let him strike his ‘ arm, or gnash his teeth, or make a braying noise, though ‘ agitated by passion.

65 ‘ Let him not wash his feet in a pan of mixed yel‘ low metal; nor let him eat from a broken dish, nor where ‘ his mind is disturbed with anxious apprehensions.

66 ‘ Let him not use either slippers or clothes, or a sa‘ cerdotal string, or an ornament, or a garland, or a water-‘ pot, which before have been used by another.

67 ‘ With untrained beasts of burden let him not travel; ‘ nor with such, as are oppressed by hunger or by disease; ‘ nor with such as have imperfect horns, eyes, or hoofs; nor ‘ with such as have ragged tails:

68 ‘ But let him constantly travel with beasts well train‘ ed, whose pace is quick, who bear all the marks of a good ‘ breed, who have an agreeable colour, and a beautiful form; ‘ giving them very little pain with his whip.

69 ‘ The sun in the sign of Canyà, the smoke of a burning ‘ corse, and a broken seat, must be shunned: he must never cut ‘ his own hair and nails, nor ever tear his nails with his teeth.

70 ‘ Let him not break mould or clay without cause: let ‘ him not cut grass with his nails; let him neither indulge ‘ any vain fancy, nor do any act, that can bring no future ‘ advantage:

71 ‘ He, who thus idly breaks clay, or cuts grass, or bites

‘ his nails, will speedily sink to ruin; and so shall a detractor, ‘ and an unclean person.

72 ‘ Let him use no contumelious phrase: let him wear ‘ no garland except on his hair: to ride on the back of a ‘ bull or cow, is in all modes culpable.

73 ‘ Let him not pass, otherwise than by the gate, into a ‘ walled town or an enclosed house; and by night let him ‘ keep aloof from the roots of trees.

74 ‘ Never let him play with dice: let him not put off ‘ his sandals with his hand: let him not eat, while he reclines ‘ on a bed, nor what is placed in his hand, or on a bench;

75 ‘ Nor, when the sun is set, let him eat any thing ‘ mixed with tila; nor let him ever in this world sleep quite ‘ naked; nor let him go anywhither with a remnant of food ‘ in his mouth.

76 ‘ Let him take his food, having sprinkled his feet with ‘ water; but never let him sleep with his feet wet: he, who ta‘ kes his food with his feet so sprinkled, will attain long life.

77 ‘ Let him never advance into a place undistinguish‘ able by his eye, or not easily passable: never let him look ‘ at urine or ordure; nor let him pass a river swimming with ‘ his arms.

78 ‘ Let not a man, who desires to enjoy long life, ‘ stand upon hair, nor upon ashes, bones, or potsherds, nor ‘ upon seeds of cotton, nor upon hulks of grain.

79 ‘ Nor let him tarry even under the shade of the same ‘ tree with outcasts for great crimes, nor with Chandálas, ‘ nor with Puccasas, nor with idiots, nor with men proud ‘ of wealth, nor with washermen and other vile persons, nor ‘ with Antyavasyáins.

80 ‘ Let him not give even temporal advice to a Súdra ; ‘ nor, except to his own servant, what remains from his table ; nor ‘ clarified butter, of which part has been offered to the gods ; ‘ nor let him in person give spiritual counsel to such a man, ‘ nor personally inform him of the legal expiation for his sin :

81 ‘ Surely he, who declares the law to a servile man,
 ‘ and he, who instructs him in the mode of expiating sin, except by the intervention of a priest, sinks with that very man
 ‘ into the hell named Aśamvṛita :

82 ‘ Let him not stroke his head with both hands ; nor ‘ let him even touch it, while food remains in his mouth ; ‘ not without bathing it, let him bathe his body.

83 ‘ Let him not in anger lay hold of hair, or smite ‘ any one on the head ; nor let him, after his head has ‘ been rubbed with oil, touch with oil any of his limbs.

84 ‘ From a king, not born in the military class, let ‘ him accept no gift, nor from such as keep a slaughter‘ house or an oilpress, or put out a vintner’s flag, or sub‘ sist by the gain of prostitutes :

85 ‘ One oilpress is as bad as ten slaughterhouses ; one ‘ vintner’s flag, as ten oilpresses ; one prostitute, as ten ‘ vintner’s flags ; one such king, as ten prostitutes ;

86 ‘ With a slaughterer, therefore, who employs ten ‘ thousand slaughterhouses, a king, not a soldier by birth, is ‘ declared to be on a level ; and a gift from him is tremendous.

87 ‘ He, who receives a present from an avaricious king
 ‘ and a transgressor of the sacred ordinances, goes in succe‘ sion to the following twenty one hells :

88 ‘ Támisra, Andhatámisra, Maháaurava, Raurava, Na-
 ‘ raca, Cálasútra, and Mahánaraca ;

89 ‘ Sanjivana, Mahávíchi, Tapana, Sampratápana, San- ‘ hata, Sacácóla, Cudmala, Pútimrítica;

90 ‘ Lóhasancu, or ironspiked, and Rijisha, Pant’hána,
‘ the river Sálmalì, Asipatravana, or the swordleaved forest,
‘ and Lóh’ángáraca, or the pit of redhot charcoal.

91 ‘ Bráhmens, who know this law, who speak the ‘ words of the Véda, and who seek bliss after death, accept ‘ no gifts from a king.

92 ‘ LET the housekeeper wake in the time sacred to ‘ BRA’HMÍ, the goddess of speech, that is, in the last watch of ‘ the night: let him then reflect on virtue and virtuous emo- ‘ luments, on the bodily labour, which they require, and on ‘ the whole meaning and very essence of the Véda.

93 ‘ Having risen, having done what nature makes ne- ‘ cessary, having then purified himself and fixed his atten- ‘ tion, let him stand a long time repeating the gáyatrì for ‘ the first or morning twilight; as he must, for the last or ‘ evening twilight in its proper time.

94 ‘ By continued repetition of the gáyatrì at the twi-
‘ lights, the holy sages acquired length of days, perfect know- ‘ ledge, reputation during life, fame after death, and celest- ‘ tial glory.

95 ‘ Having duly performed the upácarma, or domestick ‘ ceremony with sacred fire, at the full moon of Srávana or of ‘ Bhádra, let the Bráhmen, fully exerting his intellectual pow- ‘ ers, read the Védas during four months and one fortnight:

96 ‘ Under the lunar asterism Pushya, or on the first ‘ day of the bright half of Mágha, and in the first part of ‘ the day, let him perform, out of the town, the ceremony
‘ called the utserga of the Védas.

97 ‘ Having performed that ceremony out of town, as ‘ the law directs, let him desist from reading for one inter- ‘ mediate night winged with two days, or for that day and ‘ that following night only;

98 ‘ But after that intermission, let him attentively read
 ‘ the Védas in the bright fortnights; and in the dark fort-‘ nights let him constantly read all the Védángas.

99 ‘ He must never read the Véda without accents and ‘ letters well pronounced; nor ever in the presence of Sú- ‘ dras; nor, having begun to read it in the last watch of the ‘ night, must he, though fatigued, sleep again.

100 ‘ By the rule just mentioned let him continually, ‘ with his faculties exerted, read the Mantras, or holy texts, ‘ composed in regular measures; and, when he is under no ‘ restraint, let him read both the Mantras and the Bráhma- ‘ nas, or chapters on the attributes of GOD.

101 ‘ LET a reader of the Véda, and a teacher of it to ‘ his pupils, in the form prescribed, always avoid reading ‘ on the following prohibited days.

102 ‘ By night, when the wind meets his ear, and by ‘ day when the dust is collected, he must not read in the sea‘ son of rain; since both those times are declared unfit for ‘ reading, by such as know when the Véda ought to be ‘ read.

103 ‘ In lightning, thunder, and rain, or during the fall ‘ of large fireballs on all sides, at such times MENU has or‘ dained the reading of scripture to be deferred till the same ‘ time next day.

104 ‘ When the priest perceives those accidents occur‘ ring at once, while his fires are kindled for morning and ‘ evening sacrifices, then let him know, that the Véda must ‘ not be read; and when clouds are seen gathered out of ‘ season.

105 ‘ On the occasion of a preternatural sound from the ‘ sky, of an earthquake, or an obscuration of the heavenly ‘ bodies, even in due season, let him know, that his reading ‘ must be postponed till the proper time:

106 ‘ But if, while his fires are blazing, the sound of ‘ lightning and thunder is heard without rain, his reading ‘ must be discontinued, only while the phenomenon lasts;
 ‘ the remaining event, or rain also, happening, it must cease
 ‘ for a night and a day.

107 ‘ The reading of such, as wish to attain the excel‘ lent reward of virtue, must continually be suspended in ‘ towns and in cities, and always where an offensive smell ‘ prevails.

108 ‘ In a district, through which a corpse is carried,
 ‘ and in the presence of an unjust person, the reading of ‘ scripture must cease; and while the sound of weeping is ‘ heard; and in a promiscuous assembly of men.

109 ‘ In water, near midnight, and while the two na‘ tural excretions are made, or with a remnant of food in ‘ the mouth, or when the śráddha has recently been ‘ eaten, let no man even meditate in his heart on the holy ‘ texts.

110 ‘ A learned Bráhmen, having received an invitation ‘ to the obsequies of a single ancestor, must not read the ‘ Véda for three days; nor when the king has a son born; ‘ nor when the dragon’s head causes an eclipse.

111 ‘ As long as the scent and unctuousity of perfumes

‘ remain on the body of a learned priest, who has partaken
 ‘ of an entertainment, so long he must abstain from pro‘ nouncing the texts of the Véda.

112 ‘ Let him not read lolling on a couch, nor with ‘ his feet raised on a bench, nor with his thighs crossed, ‘ nor having lately swallowed meat, or the rice and other ‘ food given on the birth or death of a relation;

113 ‘ Nor in a cloud of dust, nor while arrows whiz, ‘ or a lute sounds, nor in either of the twilights, nor at the ‘ conjunction, nor on the fourteenth day, nor at the opposi‘ tion, nor on the eighth day, of the moon:

114 ‘ The dark lunar day destroys the spiritual teacher;
 ‘ the fourteenth destroys the learner; the eighth and the day ‘ of the full moon destroy all remembrance of scripture; for ‘ which reasons he must avoid reading on those lunar days.

115 ‘ Let no Bráhmén read, while dust falls like a show‘ er, nor while the quarters of the firmament are inflamed, ‘ nor while shakals yell, nor while dogs bark or yelp, nor ‘ while asses or camels bray, nor while men in company ‘ chatter.

116 ‘ He must not read near a cemetery, near a town, ‘ or in a pasture for kine; nor in a mantle worn before at a ‘ time of dalliance; nor having just received the present ‘ usual at obsequies:

117 ‘ Be it an animal, or a thing inanimate, or what‘ ever be the gift at a śráddha, let him not, having lately ac‘ cepted it, read the Véda; for such a Bráhmén is said to have ‘ his mouth in his hand.

118 ‘ When the town is beset by robbers, or an alarm
 ‘ has been raised by fire, and in all terrors from strange phe-

‘ nomena, let him know, that his lecture must be suspended ‘ till the due time after the cause of terror has ceased.

119 ‘ The suspension of reading scripture, after a per‘ formance of the upácarma and utserga, must be for three ‘ whole nights, by the man who seeks virtue more than know- ‘ ledge; also for one day and night, on the eighth lunar days ‘ which follow those ceremonies, and on the nights at the ‘ close of the seasons.

120 ‘ Never let him read on horseback, nor on a tree, ‘ nor on an elephant, nor in a boat, nor on an ass, nor on a ‘ camel, nor standing on barren ground, nor borne in a car‘ riage;

121 ‘ Nor during a verbal altercation, nor during a mu‘ tual assault, nor with an army, nor in battle, nor after food, ‘ while his hand is moist from washing, nor with an indiges‘ tion, nor after vomiting, nor with four eructations;

122 ‘ Nor without notice to a guest just arrived, nor ‘ while the wind vehemently blows, nor when blood gushes ‘ from his body, nor when it is wounded by a weapon.

123 ‘ While the strain of the Sáman meets his ear, he ‘ shall not read the R̥ich, or the Yajush; nor any part of ‘ the Véda, when he has just concluded the whole; nor any ‘ other part, when he has just finished the book entitled ‘ Aranyaca:

124 ‘ The Rigvéda is held sacred to the gods; the Ya- ‘ jurvéda relates to mankind; the Sámanvéda concerns the ‘ manes of ancestors, and the sound of it, when chanted, raises ‘ therefore a notion of something impure.

125 ‘ Knowing this collection of rules, let the learned read
 ‘ the Véda on every lawful day, having first repeated in order

* the pure effence of the three Védas, namely, the pranava, * the vyáhr̥itis, and the gáyatrī.

126 * If a beast used in agriculture, a frog, a cat, a dog, * a snake, an ichneumon, or a rat, pass between the lecturer
 * and his pupil, let him know, that the lecture must be inter-* mitted for a day and a night.

127 * Two occasions, when the Véda must not be read, * let a Bráhm̐en constantly observe with great care ; namely, * when the place for reading it is impure, and when he is * himself unpurified.

128 * ON the dark night of the moon, and on the * eighth, on the night of the full moon, and on the four* teenth, let a Bráhm̐en, who keeps house, be continually * chaste as a student in theology, even in the season of nup* tial embraces.

129 * Let him not bathe, having just eaten ; nor while * he is afflicted with disease ; nor in the middle of the * night ; nor with many clothes ; nor in a pool of water im* perfectly known.

130 * Let him not intentionally pass over the sha* dow of sacred images, of a natural or spiritual father, * of a king, of a Bráhm̐en, who keeps house, or of any * reverend personage ; nor of a redhaired or coppercoloured * man ; nor of one, who has just performed a sacri* fice.

131 * At noon or at midnight, or having eaten flesh at * a śráddha, or in either of the twilights, let him not long * tarry, where four ways meet.

132 * He must not stand knowingly near oil and other * things, with which a man has rubbed his body, or water,

‘ in which he has washed himself, or feces and urine, or ‘ blood, or mucus, or any thing chewed and spitten out, or ‘ any thing vomited.

133 ‘ Let him show no particular attention to his ene‘ my, or his enemy’s friend, to an unjust person, to a thief,
‘ or to the wife of another man;

134 ‘ Since nothing is known in this world so obstruct‘ ive to length of days, as the culpable attention of a man ‘ to the wife of another.

135 ‘ Never let him, who desires an increase of wealth, ‘ despise a warrior, a serpent, or a priest versed in scrip‘ ture, how mean so ever they may appear;

136 ‘ Since those three, when contemned, may destroy ‘ a man; let a wise man therefore always beware of treating ‘ those three with contempt:

137 ‘ Nor should he despise even himself on account of ‘ previous miscarriages: let him pursue fortune till death, ‘ nor ever think her hard to be attained.

138 ‘ Let him say what is true, but let him say what is ‘ pleasing; let him speak no disagreeable truth, nor let him ‘ speak agreeable falsehood: this is a primeval rule.

139 ‘ Let him say “well and good,” or let him say ‘ “well” only; but let him not maintain fruitless enmity
‘ and altercation with any man.

140 ‘ Let him not journey too early in the morning or ‘ too late in the evening, nor too near the midday, nor ‘ with an unknown companion, nor alone, nor with men
‘ of the servile class.

141 ‘ Let him not insult those, who want a limb, or ‘ have a limb redundant, who are unlearned, who are ad‘ vanced in age, who have no beauty, who have no wealth, ‘ or who are of an ignoble race.

142 ‘ Let no priest, unwashed after food, touch with ‘ his hand a cow, a Bráhmén, or fire; nor, being in good ‘ health and unpurified, let him even look at the lumina‘ ries in the firmament:

143 ‘ But, having accidentally touched them before his ‘ purification, let him ever sprinkle, with water in the palm ‘ of his hand, his organs of sensation, all his limbs, and his ‘ navel.

144 ‘ Not being in pain from disease, let him never ‘ without cause touch the cavities of his body; and care‘ fully let him avoid his concealed hair.

145 ‘ Let him be intent on those propitious observances ‘ which lead to good fortune, and on the discharge of his ‘ customary duties, his body and mind being pure, and his ‘ members kept in subjection; let him constantly without ‘ remissness repeat the gáyatrì, and present his oblation to ‘ fire:

146 ‘ To those, who are intent on good fortune and on ‘ the discharge of their duties, who are always pure, who ‘ repeat the holy text and make oblations to fire, no cala‘ mity happens.

147 ‘ In due season let him ever study the scripture ‘ without negligence; for the sages call that his principal ‘ duty: every other duty is declared to be subordinate.

148 ‘ By reading the Véda continually, by purity of bo‘ dy and mind, by rigorous devotion, and by doing no in‘ jury to animated creatures, he brings to remembrance his ‘ former birth:

149 ‘ A Bráhmén, remembering his former birth, again reads the Véda, and, by reading it constantly, attains bliss without end.

150 ‘ On the days of the conjunction and opposition, let him constantly make those oblations, which are hallowed by the gáyatrì, and those, which avert misfortune; but on the eighth and ninth lunar days of the three dark fortnights after the end of Agraháyan, let him always do reverence to the manes of ancestors.

151 ‘ Far from the mansion of holy fire, let him remove all ordure; far let him remove water, in which feet have been washed; far let him remove all remnants of food, and all seminal impurity.

152 ‘ At the beginning of each day let him discharge his feces, bathe, rub his teeth, apply a collyrium to his eyes, adjust his dress, and adore the gods.

153 ‘ On the dark lunar day, and on the other monthly parvans, let him visit the images of deities, and Bráhmens eminent in virtue, and the ruler of the land, for the sake of protection, and those whom he is bound to revere.

154 ‘ Let him humbly greet venerable men, who visit him, and give them his own seat; let him sit near them, closing the palms of his hands; and when they depart, let him walk some way behind them.

155 ‘ Let him practise without intermission that system of approved usages, which is the root of all duty religious and civil, declared at large in the scripture and sacred lawtracts, together with the ceremonies peculiar to each act;

156 ‘ Since by such practice long life is attained; by ‘ such practice is gained wealth unperishable ; such practice ‘ baffles every mark of ill fortune :

157 ‘ But, by an opposite practice, a man surely sinks ‘ to contempt in this world, has always a large portion of ‘ misery, is afflicted with disease and shortlived ;

158 ‘ While the man, who is observant of approved ‘ usages, endued with faith in scripture, and free from a ‘ spirit of detraction, lives a hundred years, even though he ‘ bear no bodily mark of a prosperous life.

159 ‘ Whatever act depends on another man, that act ‘ let him carefully shun ; but whatever depends on himself, ‘ to that let him studiously attend :

160 ‘ ALL, THAT DEPENDS ON ANOTHER, GIVES PAIN ; ‘ AND ALL, THAT DEPENDS ON HIMSELF, GIVES PLEASURE ; let ‘ him know this to be in few words the definition of plea‘ sure and pain.

161 ‘ When an act, neither prescribed nor prohibited, gra‘ tifies the mind of him, who performs it, let him perform ‘ it with diligence ; but let him avoid its opposite.

162 ‘ Him, by whom he was invested with the sacrifi‘ cial thread, him, who explained the Véda or even a part ‘ of it, his mother, and his father, natural or spiritual, let ‘ him never oppose ; nor priests, nor cows, nor persons tru‘ ly devout.

163 ‘ Denial of a future state, neglect of the scrip‘ ture, and contempt of the deities, envy and hatred, va‘ nity and pride, wrath and severity, let him at all times ‘ avoid.

164 ‘ Let him not, when angry, throw a stick at another ‘ man, nor smite him with any thing ; unless he be a son or

‘ a pupil: those two he may chastise for their improvement ‘ in learning.

165 ‘ A twiceborn man, who barely assaults a Bráh- ‘ men with intention to hurt him, shall be whirled about for ‘ a century in the hell named Támisra;

166 ‘ But, having smitten him in anger and by design, ‘ even with a blade of grass, he shall be born, in one and ‘ twenty transmigrations, from the wombs of impure quadru-‘ peds.

167 ‘ He, who, through ignorance of the law, sheds ‘ blood from the body of a Bráhmén, not engaged in battle, ‘ shall feel excessive pain in his future life:

168 ‘ As many particles of dust as the blood shall roll ‘ up from the ground, for so many years shall the shedder
 ‘ of that blood be mangled by other animals in his next ‘ birth.

169 ‘ Let not him then, who knows this law, even af-
 ‘ fault a Bráhmén at any time, nor strike him even with grass, ‘ nor cause blood to gush from his body.

170 ‘ EVEN here below an unjust man attains no felici‘ ty; nor he, whose wealth proceeds from giving false evi‘ dence; nor he, who constantly takes delight in mischief.

171 ‘ Though oppressed by penury, in consequence of ‘ his righteous dealings, let him never give his mind to un‘ righteousness; for he may observe the speedy overthrow ‘ of iniquitous and sinful men.

172 ‘ Iniquity, committed in this world, produces not ‘ fruit immediately, but, like the earth, in due season; and, ad‘ vancing by little and little, it eradicates the man, who ‘ committed it.

173 ‘ Yes; iniquity, once committed, fails not of producing fruit to him, who wrought it; if not in his own person, yet in his sons; or, if not in his sons, yet in his grandsons:

174 ‘ He grows rich for a while through unrighteousness; then he beholds good things; then it is, that he vanquishes his foes; but he perishes at length from his whole root upwards.

175 ‘ LET a man continually take pleasure in truth, in justice, in laudable practices, and in purity; let him chastise those, whom he may chastise, in a legal mode; let him keep in subjection his speech, his arm, and his appetite:

176 ‘ Wealth and pleasures, repugnant to law, let him shun; and even lawful acts, which may cause future pain, or be offensive to mankind.

177 ‘ Let him not have nimble hands, restless feet, or voluble eyes; let him not be crooked in his ways; let him not be flippant in his speech, nor intelligent in doing mischief.

178 ‘ Let him walk in the path of good men; the path, in which his parents and forefathers walked: while he moves in that path, he can give no offence.

180 ‘ With his mother herself, or with his father, with

 ‘ or his daughter, and with his whole fet of fervants, let ‘ him have no strife.

181 ‘ A housekeeper, who fhuns altercation with thofe
 ‘ juft mentioned, is releafed from all fecret faults; and, by fup‘ preffing all fuch difputes, he obtains a victory over the ‘ following worlds :

182 ‘ The teacher of the Véda fecures him the world
 ‘ of BRAHMA; his father, the world of the Sun, or of the ‘ Prajápetis ; his gueft, the world of INDRA ; his attendants on ‘ holy fire, the world of Dévas ;

183 ‘ His female relations, the world of celeftial nymphs;
 ‘ his maternal coufins, the world of the Viſvadévas ; his re‘ lations by affinity, the world of waters ; his mother and ‘ maternal uncle give him power on earth ;

184 ‘ Children, old men, poor dependants, and fick
 ‘ perfons, muſt be confidered as rulers of the pure ether ; ‘ his elder brother, as equal to his father ; his wife and fon,
 ‘ as his own body ;

185 ‘ His afſemblage of fervants, as his own ſhadow ;
 ‘ his daughter, as the higheſt object of tenderneſs : let him, ‘ therefore, when offended by any of thofe, bear the offence ‘ without indignation.

186 ‘ THOUGH permitted to receive preſents, let him ‘ avoid a habit of taking them ; ſince, by taking many gifts, ‘ his divine light ſoon fades.

187 ‘ Let no man of ſenſe, who has not fully informed ‘ himſelf of the law concerning gifts of particular things, ‘ accept a preſent, even though he pine with hunger.

188 ‘ The man, who knows not that law, yet accepts

‘ gold or gems, land, a horse, a cow, food, raiment, oils or ‘ clarified butter, becomes mere ashes, like wood consumed
 ‘ by fire :

189 ‘ Gold and gems burn up his nourishment and ‘ life ; land and a cow, his body ; a horse, his eyes ; rai‘ ment, his skin ; clarified butter, his manly strength ; oils, ‘ his progeny.

190 ‘ A twiceborn man, void of true devotion, and ‘ not having read the Véda, yet eager to take a gift, sinks ‘ down together with it, as with a boat of stone in deep ‘ water.

191 ‘ Let him then, who knows not the law, be fear‘ ful of presents from this or that giver ; since an ignorant ‘ man, even by a small gift, may become helpless as a cow ‘ in a bog.

192 ‘ Let no man, apprized of this law, present even ‘ water to a priest, who acts like a cat, not to him, who acts ‘ like a bittern, nor to him, who is unlearned in the Véda;

193 ‘ Since property, though legally gained, if it be ‘ given to either of those three, becomes prejudicial in the ‘ next world both to the giver and receiver :

194 ‘ As he, who tries to pass over deep water in a ‘ boat of stone, sinks to the bottom, so those two ignorant ‘ men, the receiver and the giver, sink to a region of tor‘ ment.

195 ‘ A covetous wretch, who continually displays ‘ the flag of virtue, a pretender, a deluder of the people, is ‘ declared to be the man, who acts like a cat : he is an ‘ injurious hypocrite, a detractor from the merits of all ‘ men.

196 ‘ A twiceborn man, with his eyes dejected, morose, intent on his own advantage, fly, and falsely demure, is he, who acts like a bittern.

197 ‘ Such priests, as live like bitterns, and such as demean themselves like cats, fall by that sinful conduct into the hell called Andhatámisra.

198 ‘ LET no man, having committed sin, perform a penance, under the pretext of austere devotion, disguising his crime under fictitious religion and deceiving both women and low men :

199 ‘ Such impostors, though Bráhmens, are despised, in the next life and in this, by all who pronounce holy texts ; and every religious act fraudulently performed goes to evil beings.

200 ‘ He, who has no right to distinguishing marks, yet gains a subsistence by wearing false marks of distinction, takes to himself the sin committed by those who are entitled to such marks, and shall again be born from the womb of a brute animal.

201 ‘ NEVER let him bathe in the pool of another man ; for he, who bathes in it without licence, takes to himself a small portion of the sins, which the maker of the pool has committed.

202 ‘ He, who appropriates to his own use the carriage, the bed, the seat, the well, the garden, or the house of another man, who has not delivered them to him, assumes a fourth part of the guilt of their owner.

203 ‘ In rivers, in ponds dug by holy persons, and in lakes, let him always bathe ; in rivulets also, and in torrents.

204 ‘ A WISE man should constantly discharge all the ‘ moral duties, though he perform not constantly the cere‘ monies of religion; since he falls low, if, while he performs ‘ ceremonial acts only, he discharge not his moral duties.

205 ‘ NEVER let a priest eat part of a sacrifice not be‘ gun with texts of the Véda, nor of one performed by a ‘ common sacrificer, by a woman, or by an eunuch:

206 ‘ When those persons offer the clarified butter, it ‘ brings misfortune to good men, and raises aversion in ‘ the deities; such oblations, therefore, he must carefully ‘ shun.

207 ‘ Let him never eat the food of the insane, the ‘ wrathful, or the sick; nor that, on which lice have fallen; ‘ nor that, which has designedly been touched by a foot;

208 ‘ Nor that, which has been looked at by the slayer ‘ of a priest, or by any other deadly sinner, or has even been ‘ touched by a woman in her courses, or pecked by a bird, ‘ or approached by a dog;

209 ‘ Nor food which has been smelted by a cow; nor ‘ particularly that, which has been proclaimed for all comers; ‘ nor the food of associated knaves, or of harlots; nor that,
‘ which is contemned by the learned in scripture;

210 ‘ Nor that of a thief or a publick sinner, of a car‘ penter, of an usurer, of one who has recently come from ‘ a sacrifice, of a niggardly churl, or of one bound with ‘ fetters;

211 ‘ Of one publicly defamed, of an eunuch, of an ‘ unchaste woman, or of a hypocrite; nor any sweet thing ‘ turned acid, nor what has been kept a whole night; nor ‘ the food of a servile man, nor the orts of another;

212 ‘ Nor the food of a phyfician, or of a hunter, or ‘ of a difhoneft man, or of an eater of orts; nor that of ‘ any cruel perfon; nor of a woman in childbed; nor of ‘ him, who rifes prematurely from table to make an ablu‘ tion; nor of her, whole ten days of purification have ‘ not elapsed;

213 ‘ Nor that, which is given without due honour to ‘ honourable men; nor any flefh, which has not been fa‘ crificed; nor the food of a woman, who has neither a ‘ husband nor a fon; nor that of a foe, nor that of the whole ‘ town, nor that of an outcaft, nor that on which any per‘ fon has sneezed;

214 ‘ Nor that of a backbiter, or of a falfe witnefs; ‘ nor of one, who fells the reward of his facrifice; nor of ‘ a publick dancer, or a tailor; nor of him, who has return‘ ed evil for good;

215 ‘ Nor that of a blackfmith, or a man of the tribe ‘ called Nifháda, nor of a ftageplayer, nor of a worker in ‘ gold or in cane, nor of him who fells weapons;

216 ‘ Nor of thofe, who train hunting dogs, or fell fer‘ mented liquor; nor of him who wafhes clothes, or who ‘ dyes them; nor of any malevolent perfon; nor of one, ‘ who ignorantly fuffers an adulterer to dwell under his ‘ roof;

217 ‘ Nor of thofe, who knowingly bear with the pa‘ ramours of their own wives, or are constantly in fubjection
‘ to women; nor food given for the dead before ten days ‘ of purification have paffed; nor any food whatever, but ‘ that which fatisfies him.

218 ‘ Food given by a king, impairs his manly vigour;

‘ by one of the servile class, his divine light ; by goldsmiths, ‘ his life ; by leatherscutters, his good name :

219 ‘ Given by cooks and the like mean artisans, it de‘ stroys his offspring ; by a washerman, his muscular strength ; ‘ but the food of knavish associates and harlots excludes ‘ him from heaven :

220 ‘ The food of a physician is purulent ; that of a ‘ libidinous woman, feminal ; that of an usurer, feculent : that ‘ of a weaponseller, filthy :

221 ‘ That of all others, mentioned in order, whose ‘ food must never be tasted, is held equal by the wise to the ‘ skin, bones, and hair of the dead.

222 ‘ Having unknowingly swallowed the food of any ‘ such persons, he must fast during three days ; but, having ‘ eaten it knowingly, he must perform the same harsh pe‘ nance, as if he had tasted any feminal impurity, ordure, ‘ or urine.

223 ‘ Let no learned priest eat the dressed grain of a ‘ servile man, who performs no parental obsequies ; but, ‘ having no other means to live, he may take from him raw ‘ grain enough for a single night.

224 ‘ The deities, having well considered the food of a ‘ niggard, who has read the scripture, and that of an usurer, ‘ who bestows gifts liberally, declared the food of both to ‘ be equal in quality ;

225 ‘ But BRAHMA, advancing toward the gods, thus ‘ addressed them : “ Make not that equal, which in truth is “ unequal ; since the food of a liberal man is purified by “ faith, while that of a learned miser is defiled by his want
 “ of faith in what he has read.”

226 ' LET each wealthy man continually and sedulously
 ' perform sacred rites, and consecrate pools or gardens with
 ' faith; since those two acts, accomplished with faith and
 ' with riches honestly gained, procure an unperishable re-
 ' ward:

227 ' If he meet with fit objects of benevolence, let ' him constantly bestow gifts on them, both at sacrifices
 ' and consecrations, to the best of his power and with a
 ' cheerful heart;

228 ' Such a gift, how small soever, bestowed on request
 ' without grudging, passes to a worthy object, who will se-
 ' cure the giver from all evil.

229 ' A giver of water obtains content; a giver of food,
 ' extreme bliss; a giver of tila, desired offspring; a giver of
 ' a lamp, unblemished eyesight;

230 ' A giver of land obtains landed property; a giver
 ' of gems or gold, long life; a giver of a house, the most
 ' exalted mansion; a giver of silver, exquisite beauty;

231 ' A giver of clothes, the same station with CHAN-
 ' DRA; a giver of a horse, the same station with ASWI;
 ' a giver of a bull, eminent fortune; a giver of a cow, the ' mansion of SU'RYA;

232 ' A giver of a carriage or a bed, an excellent con-
 ' fort; a giver of safety, supreme dominion; a giver of ' grain, perpetual delight; a giver of scriptural knowledge,
 ' union with GOD:

233 ' Among all those gifts, of water, food, kine, land,
 ' clothes, tila, gold, clarified butter, and the rest, a gift
 ' of spiritual knowledge is consequently the most impor-
 ' tant;

234 ' And for whatever purpose a man bestows any
' gift, for a similar purpose he shall receive, with due ho-
' nour, a similar reward.

235 ' Both he, who respectfully bestows a present, and
' he who respectfully accepts it, shall go to a seat of bliss;
' but, if they act otherwise, to a region of horror.

236 ' LET not a man be proud of his rigorous devo-
' tion; let him not, having sacrificed, utter a falsehood;
' let him not, though injured, insult a priest; having made a
' donation, let him never proclaim it:

237 ' By falsehood, the sacrifice becomes vain; by pride,
' the merit of devotion is lost; by insulting priests, life is di-
' minished; and by proclaiming a largess, its fruit is de-
' stroyed.

238 ' GIVING no pain to any creature, let him collect
' virtue by degrees, for the sake of acquiring a companion
' to the next world, as the white ant by degrees builds his ' nest;

239 ' For, in his passage to the next world, neither his ' father, nor his mother, nor his wife, nor his son, nor his
' kinsmen, will remain in his company: his Virtue alone
' will adhere to him.

240 ' Single is each man born; single he dies; single
' he receives the reward of his good, and single the punish-
' ment of his evil, deeds:

241 ' When he leaves his corse, like a log or a lump
' of clay, on the ground, his kindred retire with averted
' faces; but his Virtue accompanies his soul.

242 ' Continually, therefore, by degrees let him collect
' virtue, for the sake of securing an inseparable companion;

‘ since with Virtue for his guide, he will traverse a gloom, ‘ how hard to be traversed !

243 ‘ A man, habitually virtuous, whose offences have ‘ been expiated by devotion, is instantly conveyed after ‘ death to the higher world, with a radiant form and a body ‘ of ethereal substance.

244 ‘ HE, who seeks to preserve an exalted rank, must ‘ constantly form connexions with the highest and best fa‘ milies, but avoid the worst and the meanest ;

245 ‘ Since a priest, who connects himself with the best
 ‘ and highest of men, avoiding the lowest and worst, attains ‘ eminence ; but sinks, by an opposite conduct, to the class ‘ of the servile.

246 ‘ HE, who perseveres in good actions, in subduing
 ‘ his passions, in bestowing largesses, in gentleness of manners, ‘ who bears hardships patiently, who associates not with the ‘ malignant, who gives pain to no sentient being, obtains fi‘ nal beatitude.

247 ‘ WOOD, water, roots, fruit, and food placed be‘ fore him without his request, he may accept from all men ; ‘ honey also, and protection from danger.

248 ‘ Gold, or other alms, voluntarily brought and pre‘ sented, but unasked and unpromised, BRAHMA´ considered ‘ as receivable even from a sinner :

249 ‘ Of him, who shall disdain to accept such alms, ‘ neither will the manes eat the funeral oblations for ‘ fifteen years, nor will the fire convey the burnt sacrifice
 ‘ to the gods.

250 ‘ A bed, houses, blades of cusa, perfumes, water, flow‘ ers, jewels, buttermilk, ground rice, fish, new milk, flesh-

‘ meat, and green vegetables, let him not proudly re‘ ject.

251 ‘ When he wishes to relieve his natural parents or ‘ spiritual father, his wife or others, whom he is bound to ‘ maintain, or when he is preparing to honour deities or ‘ guests, he may receive gifts from any person, but must not ‘ gratify himself with such presents :

252 ‘ If his parents, however, be dead, or if he live with‘ out them in his own house, let him, when he seeks nour‘ ishment for himself, receive presents invariably from good ‘ men alone.

253 ‘ A labourer in tillage, a familyfriend, a herds-‘ man, a slave, a barber, a poor stranger offering his humble ‘ duty, are men of the servile class, who may eat the food of ‘ their superiors:

254 ‘ As the nature of the poor stranger is, as the work ‘ is, which he desires to perform, and as he may show most ‘ respect to the master of the house, even thus let him offer his ‘ service;

255 ‘ For he, who describes himself to worthy men ‘ in a manner contrary to truth, is the most sinful wretch ‘ in this world: he is the worst of thieves, a stealer of ‘ minds.

256 ‘ All things have their sense ascertained by speech ;
 ‘ in speech they have their basis ; and from speech they pro‘ ceed: consequently, a falsifier of speech falsifies every ‘ thing.

257 ‘ WHEN he has paid, as the law directs, his debts ‘ to the sages, to the manes, and to the gods, by reading the ‘ scripture, begetting a son, and performing regular sacrifices, he ‘ may resign all to his son of mature age, and reside in his ‘ family house, with no employment, but that of an umpire.

258 ‘ Alone, in some solitary place, let him constantly ‘ meditate on the divine nature of the soul, for by such me‘ ditation he will attain happiness.

259 ‘ Thus has been declared the mode, by which a ‘ Bráhmén, who keeps house, must continually subsist, toge‘ ther with the rule of devotion ordained for a pupil re‘ turned from his preceptor; a laudable rule, which increases
 ‘ the best of the three qualities.

260 ‘ A priest, who lives always by these rules, who ‘ knows the ordinances of the Véda, who is freed from the ‘ bondage of sin, shall be absorbed in the divine essence.

CHAPTER THE FIFTH:

ON DIET, PURIFICATION, AND WOMEN.

1 THE Sages, having heard those laws delivered for the conduct of housekeepers, thus addressed the highminded BHRĪGU, who proceeded in a former birth from the genius of fire.

2 ‘ How, Lord, can death prevail over Bráhmens, who know the scriptural ordinances, and perform their duties, as they have been declared ?’

3 Then he, whose disposition was perfect virtue, even BHRĪGU, the son of MENU, thus answered the great Rĭshis :
‘ Hear, from what sin proceeds the inclination of death, to destroy the chief of the twiceborn :

4 ‘ Through a neglect of reading the Véda, through a desertion of approved usages, through supine remissness in performing holy rites, and through various offences in diet, the genius of death becomes eager to destroy them.

5 ‘ Garlick, onions, leeks, and mushrooms, (which no twiceborn man must eat) and all vegetables raised in dung,

6 Red gums or resins, exuding from trees, and juices from wounded stems, the fruit félu, and the thickened milk of a cow within ten days after her calving, a priest must avoid with great care.

7 ‘ Ricepudding boiled with tila, frumenty, ricemilk,
 ‘ and baked bread, which have not been first offered to ‘ some deity, fleshmeat also, the food of gods, and clarified
 ‘ butter, which have not first been touched, while holy texts
 ‘ were recited,

8 ‘ Fresh milk from a cow, whose ten days are not pas‘ sed, the milk of a camel, or any quadruped with a hoof
 ‘ not cloven, that of an ewe, and that of a cow in heat, or ‘ whose calf is dead or absent from her,

9 ‘ That of any forest beast, except the buffalo, the milk
 ‘ of a woman, and any thing naturally sweet but acidulated,
 ‘ must all be carefully shunned :

10 ‘ But among such acids, buttermilk may be swallow-
 ‘ ed, and every preparation of buttermilk, and all acids ex‘ tracted from pure flowers, roots, or fruit not cut with iron.

11 ‘ Let every twiceborn man avoid carnivorous birds,
 ‘ and such as live in towns, and quadrupeds with uncloven
 ‘ hoofs, except those allowed by the Véda, and the bird cal‘ led tittibha ;

12 ‘ The sparrow, the water bird plava, the phenicop-
 ‘ teros, the chacraváca, the breed of the towncock, the sárasa, ‘ the rajjuvála, the woodpecker, and the parrot, male and ‘ female ;

13 ‘ Birds, that strike with their beaks, webfooted birds,
 ‘ the cóyashti, those, who wound with strong talons, and ‘ those, who dive to devour fish: let him avoid meat kept at ‘ a slaughter house, and dried meat,

14 ‘ The heron, the raven, the c’hanjana, all amphibious
 ‘ fisheaters, tame hogs, and fish of every sort, but those ex- ‘ pressly permitted.

15 ' He, who eats the flesh of any animal, is called the ' eater of that animal itself; and a fisheater is an eater of
 ' all flesh; from fish, therefore, he must diligently abstain:

16 ' Yet the two fish, called pát'hína and róhita, may ' be eaten by the guests, when offered at a repast in honour
 ' of the gods or the manes; and so may the rájíva, the
 ' sinhatunda, and the sasalka of every species.

17 ' Let him not eat the flesh of any solitary animals;
 ' nor of unknown beasts or birds, though by general words
 ' declared eatable, nor of any creature with five claws;

18 ' The hedgehog and porcupine, the lizard gódhá,
 ' the gandaca, the tortoise, and the rabbit or hare, wise
 ' legislators declare lawful food among fivetoed animals;
 ' and all quadrupeds, camels excepted, which have but one
 ' row of teeth.

19 ' The twiceborn man, who has intentionally eaten
 ' a mushroom, the flesh of a tame hog, or a town cock,
 ' a leek, or an onion, or garlick, is degraded immediately;

20 ' But, having undesignedly tasted either of those six
 ' things, he must perform the penance sántapana, or the ' chándráyana, which anchorets practise: for other things
 ' he must fast a whole day.

21 ' One of those harsh penances, called prájápatya,
 ' the twiceborn man must perform annually, to purify him
 ' from the unknown taint of illicit food; but he must do
 ' particular penance for such food intentionally eaten.

22 ' BEASTS and birds of excellent sorts may be slain
 ' by Bráhmens for sacrifice, or for the sustenance of those,
 ' whom they are bound to support; since AGASTYA did
 ' this of old.

7 ‘ Ricepudding boiled with tila, frumenty, ricemilk,
 ‘ and baked bread, which have not been first offered to ‘ some deity, fleshmeat also, the food of gods, and clarified
 ‘ butter, which have not first been touched, while holy texts
 ‘ were recited,

8 ‘ Fresh milk from a cow, whose ten days are not pas‘ sed, the milk of a camel, or any quadruped with a hoof
 ‘ not cloven, that of an ewe, and that of a cow in heat, or ‘ whose calf is dead or absent from her,

9 ‘ That of any forest beast, except the buffalo, the milk
 ‘ of a woman, and any thing naturally sweet but acidulated,
 ‘ must all be carefully shunned :

10 ‘ But among such acids, buttermilk may be swallow-
 ‘ ed, and every preparation of buttermilk, and all acids ex-
 ‘ tracted from pure flowers, roots, or fruit not cut with iron.

11 ‘ Let every twiceborn man avoid carnivorous birds,
 ‘ and such as live in towns, and quadrupeds with uncloven
 ‘ hoofs, except those allowed by the Véda, and the bird cal-
 ‘ led tittibha ;

12 ‘ The sparrow, the water bird plava, the phenicop-
 ‘ teros, the chacraváca, the breed of the towncock, the sárasa, ‘ the rajjuvála, the woodpecker, and the parrot, male and ‘ female ;

13 ‘ Birds, that strike with their beaks, webfooted birds,
 ‘ the cóyashti, those, who wound with strong talons, and ‘ those, who dive to devour fish: let him avoid meat kept at
 ‘ a slaughter house, and dried meat,

14 ‘ The heron, the raven, the c’hanjana, all amphibious
 ‘ fish eaters, tame hogs, and fish of every sort, but those ex-
 ‘ pressly permitted.

15 ' He, who eats the flesh of any animal, is called the eater of that animal itself; and a fisheater is an eater of all flesh; from fish, therefore, he must diligently abstain:

16 ' Yet the two fish, called pát'hína and róhita, may be eaten by the guests, when offered at a repast in honour of the gods or the manes; and so may the rájíva, the sinhatunda, and the sasalka of every species.

17 ' Let him not eat the flesh of any solitary animals, nor of unknown beasts or birds, though by general words declared eatable, nor of any creature with five claws;

18 ' The hedgehog and porcupine, the lizard gódhá, the gandaca, the tortoise, and the rabbit or hare, wise legislators declare lawful food among fivetoed animals; and all quadrupeds, camels excepted, which have but one row of teeth.

19 ' The twiceborn man, who has intentionally eaten a mushroom, the flesh of a tame hog, or a town cock, a leek, or an onion, or garlick, is degraded immediately;

20 ' But, having undesignedly tasted either of those six things, he must perform the penance sántapana, or the chándráyana, which anchorets practise: for other things he must fast a whole day.

21 ' One of those harsh penances, called prájápatya, the twiceborn man must perform annually, to purify him from the unknown taint of illicit food; but he must do particular penance for such food intentionally eaten.

22 ' BEASTS and birds of excellent sorts may be slain by Bráhmens for sacrifice, or for the sustenance of those, whom they are bound to support; since AGASTYA did this of old.

23 ‘ No doubt, in the primeval sacrifices by holy men,
 ‘ and in oblations by those of the priestly and military ‘ tribes, the flesh of such beasts and birds, as may be legally ‘ eaten, was presented to the deities.

24 ‘ That, which may be eaten or drunk, when fresh,
 ‘ without blame, may be swallowed, if touched with oil, ‘ though it has been kept a whole night; and so may the ‘ remains of clarified butter:

25 ‘ And every mess prepared with barley or wheat, or ‘ with dressed milk, may be eaten by the twiceborn, al‘ though not sprinkled with oil.

26 ‘ Thus has the food, allowed or forbidden to a twice-‘ born man, been comprehensively mentioned: I will now ‘ propound the special rules for eating and for avoiding flesh ‘ meat.

27 ‘ He should taste meat, which has been hallowed ‘ for a sacrifice with appropriated texts, and, once only, when a ‘ priest shall desire him, and when he is performing a legal ‘ act, or in danger of losing life.

28 ‘ For the sustenance of the vital spirit, BRAHMA cre‘ ated all this animal and vegetable system; and all, that is ‘ moveable or immoveable, that spirit devours.

29 ‘ Things fixed are eaten by creatures with locomo‘ tion; toothless animals, by animals with teeth; those with‘ out hands, by those to whom hands were given; and the ‘ timid, by the bold.

30 ‘ He, who eats according to law, commits no sin, even ‘ though every day he taste the flesh of such animals, as may ‘ lawfully be tasted; since both animals, who may be eaten, and ‘ those, who eat them, were equally created by BRAHMA.

31 ‘ It is delivered as a rule of the gods, that meat ‘ must be swallowed only for the purpose of sacrifice ; but ‘ it is a rule of giantick demons, that it may be swallowed ‘ for any other purpose.

32 ‘ No sin is committed by him, who, having honour‘ ed the deities and the manes, eats fleshmeat, which he ‘ has bought, or which he has himself acquired, or which ‘ has been given him by another :

33 ‘ Let no twiceborn man, who knows the law, and is ‘ not in urgent distress, eat flesh without observing this rule ; ‘ for he, unable to save himself, will be devoured in the ‘ next world by those animals, whose flesh he has thus ille‘ gally swallowed.

34 ‘ The sin of him, who kills deer for gain, is not so ‘ heinous, with respect to the punishment in another life, as ‘ that of him, who eats fleshmeat in vain, or not previously ‘ offered as a sacrifice :

35 ‘ But the man, who, engaged in holy rites according ‘ to law, refuses to eat it, shall sink in another world, for ‘ twenty-one births, to the state of a beast.

36 ‘ Never let a priest eat the flesh of cattle unhallowed ‘ with mantras, but let him eat it, observing the primeval rule, ‘ when it has been hallowed with those texts of the Véda.

37 ‘ Should he have an earnest desire to taste fleshmeat,
 ‘ he may gratify his fancy by forming the image of some beast
 ‘ with clarified butter thickened, or he may form it with dough ;
 ‘ but never let him indulge a wish to kill any beast in vain :

38 ‘ As many hairs as grow on the beast, so many simi‘ lar deaths shall the slayer of it, for his own satisfaction in ‘ this world, endure in the next from birth to birth.

39 ‘ By the Selfexisting in person were beasts created ‘ for sacrifice ; and the sacrifice was ordained for the increase ‘ of this universe : the slaughterer, therefore, of beasts for ‘ sacrifice is in truth no slaughterer.

40 ‘ Gramineous plants, cattle, timbertrees, amphi‘ bious animals, and birds, which have been destroyed for ‘ the purpose of sacrifice, attain in the next world exalted ‘ births.

41 ‘ On a solemn offering to a guest, at a sacrifice, ‘ and in holy rites to the manes or to the gods, but on ‘ those occasions only, may cattle be slain : this law MENU ‘ enacted.

42 ‘ The twiceborn man, who, knowing the meaning and ‘ principles of the Véda, slays cattle on the occasions men‘ tioned, conveys both himself and those cattle to the sum‘ mit of beatitude.

43 ‘ Let no twiceborn man, whose mind is improved ‘ by learning, hurt animals without the sanction of scripture, ‘ even though in pressing distress, whether he live in his own ‘ house, or in that of his preceptor, or in a forest.

44 ‘ That hurt, which the scripture ordains, and which ‘ is done in this world of moveable and immoveable crea‘ tures, he must consider as no hurt at all ; since law shone ‘ forth from the light of the scripture.

45 ‘ He, who injures animals, that are not injurious, ‘ from a wish to give himself pleasure, adds nothing to his ‘ own happiness, living or dead ;

46 ‘ While he, who gives no creature willingly the pain
 ‘ of confinement or death, but seeks the good of all sentient
 ‘ beings, enjoys bliss without end.

47 ‘ He, who injures no animated creature, shall attain ‘ without hardship whatever he thinks of, whatever he strives ‘ for, whatever he fixes his mind on.

48 ‘ Fleshmeat cannot be procured without injury to ‘ animals, and the slaughter of animals obstructs the path
 ‘ to beatitude ; from fleshmeat, therefore, let man abstain:

49 ‘ Attentively considering the formation of bodies,
 ‘ and the death or confinement of embodied spirits, let him ‘ abstain from eating fleshmeat of any kind.

50 ‘ The man, who forsakes not the law, and eats not ‘ fleshmeat, like a bloodthirsty demon, shall attain good ‘ will in this world, and shall not be afflicted with maladies.

51 ‘ He, who consents to the death of an animal ; he,
 ‘ who kills it ; he, who dissects it ; he, who buys it ; he, who ‘ sells it ; he, who dresses it ; he, who serves it up ; and he, who ‘ makes it his food ; these are eight principals in the slaughter.

52 ‘ Not a mortal exists more sinful than he, who, ‘ without an oblation to the manes or the gods, desires to ‘ enlarge his own flesh with the flesh of another crea‘ ture.

53 ‘ The man, who performs annually, for a hundred ‘ years, an aswamedha, or sacrifice of a horse, and the man, ‘ who abstains from fleshmeat, enjoy for their virtue an ‘ equal reward.

54 ‘ By subsisting on pure fruit and on roots, and by ‘ eating such grains as are eaten by hermits, a man reaps not ‘ so high a reward, as by carefully abstaining from animal ‘ food.

55 “ Me he (mán ja) will devour in the next world, “ whose flesh I eat in this life : ” thus should a fleheater

‘ ſpeak, and thus the learned pronounce the true derivation of the word mánſa, or fleſh.

56 ‘ In lawfully taſting meat, in drinking fermented liquor, in careſſing women, there is no turpitude; for to ſuch enjoyments men are naturally prone: but a virtuous abſtinence from them produces a ſignal compenſation.

57 ‘ Now will I promulgate the rules of purification for the dead, and the modes of purifying inanimate things, as the law preſcribes them for the four claſſes in due order.

58 ‘ When a child has teethed, and when, after teething, his head has been ſhorn, and when he has been girt with his thread, and when, being full grown, he dies, all his kindred are impure: on the birth of a child the law is the ſame.

59 ‘ By a dead body, the ſapindas are rendered impure in law for ten days, or until the fourth day, when the bones have been gathered up, or for three days, or for one day only, according to the qualities of the deceased:

60 ‘ Now the relation of the ſapindas, or men connected by the funeral cake, ceases with the ſeventh perſon, or in the ſixth degree of aſcent or deſcent, and that of ſamánódacas, or thoſe connected by an equal oblation of water, ends only, when their births and familynames are no longer known.

61 ‘ As this impurity, by reaſon of a dead kinfman, is ordained for ſapindas, even thus it is ordained on a childbirth, for thoſe who ſeek abſolute purity.

62 ‘ Uncleanneſs, on account of the dead, is ordained for all; but on the birth of a child, for the mother and ‘ father: impurity, for ten days after the childbirth, affects ‘ the mother only; but the father, having bathed, becomes ‘ pure.

63 ‘ A man, having waisted his manhood, is purified ‘ by bathing; but, after begetting a child on a parapúrvá, he ‘ must meditate for three days on his impure state.

64 ‘ In one day and night, added to nights three times ‘ three, the śapindas are purified after touching the corpse; ‘ but the samánódacas, in three days.

65 ‘ A pupil in theology, having performed the cere‘ mony of burning his deceased preceptor, becomes pure in ‘ ten nights: he is equal, in that case, to the śapindas, who ‘ carry out the dead.

66 ‘ In a number of nights, equal to the number of ‘ months from conception, a woman is purified on a ‘ miscarriage; and a woman in her courses is rendered ‘ pure by bathing, when her effusion of blood has quite ‘ stopped.

67 ‘ For deceased male children, whose heads have not ‘ been shorn, purity is legally obtained in one night; but ‘ for those, on whom that ceremony has been perform‘ ed, a purification of three nights is required.

68 ‘ A dead child under the age of two years, let his ‘ kinsmen carry out having decked him with flowers, and ‘ bury him in pure ground, without collecting his bones at ‘ a future time:

69 ‘ Let no ceremony with fire be performed for him, ‘ nor that of sprinkling water; but his kindred, having left ‘ him like a piece of wood in the forest, shall be unclean ‘ for three days.

70 ‘ For a child under the age of three years, the ceremony with water shall not be performed by his kindred ; ‘ but, if his teeth be completely grown, or a name have ‘ been given him, they may perform it, or not, at their option.

71 ‘ A fellow student in theology being dead, three ‘ days of impurity are ordained ; and, on the birth of a ‘ samánódaca, purification is required for three nights.

72 ‘ The relations of betrothed but unmarried damsels, ‘ are in three days made pure ; and, in as many, are their ‘ paternal kinsmen purified after their marriage :

73 ‘ Let them eat vegetable food without factitious, ‘ that is, only with native, salt ; let them bathe for three days ‘ at intervals ; let them taste no fleshmeat ; and let them ‘ sleep apart on the ground.

74 ‘ This rule, which ordains impurity by reason of the ‘ dead, relates to the case of one dying near his kinsmen ;
 ‘ but, in the case of one dying at a distance, the following ‘ rule must be observed by those, who share the same cake,
 ‘ and by those, who share only the same water :

75 ‘ The man, who hears that a kinsman is dead in a ‘ distant country, becomes unclean, if ten days after the death
 ‘ have not passed, for the remainder of those ten days only ;

76 ‘ But, if the ten days have elapsed, he is impure for ‘ three nights, and, if a year have expired, he is purified ‘ merely by touching water.

77 ‘ If, after the lapse of ten days, he know the death of ‘ a kinsman, or the birth of a male child, he must purify ‘ himself by bathing together with his clothes.

78 ‘ Should a child, whose teeth are not grown, or ‘ should a samánódaca, die in a distant region, the kinsman,

‘ having bathed with his apparel, becomes immediately
 ‘ pure.

79 ‘ If, during the ten days, another death or another ‘ birth intervene, a Bráhmen remains impure, only till those ‘ ten days have elapsed.

80 ‘ A spiritual teacher being dead, the sages declare ‘ his pupil impure for three days; but for a day and ‘ a night, if the son or wife of the teacher be deceased: such ‘ is the sacred ordinance.

81 ‘ For a reader of the whole Véda, who dwells in the ‘ same house, a man is unclean three nights; but for a ma‘ ternal uncle, a pupil, an officiating priest, and a distant ‘ kinsman, only one night winged with two days.

82 ‘ On the death of a military king, in whose domi‘ nion he lives, his impurity lasts while the sun or the stars ‘ give light; but it lasts a whole day, on the death of a ‘ priest, who has not read the whole Véda, or of a ‘ spiritual guide, who has read only part of it, with its ‘ Angas.

83 ‘ A man of the sacerdotal class becomes pure in ten ‘ days; of the warlike, in twelve; of the commercial, in ‘ five; of the servile, in a month.

84 ‘ Let no man prolong the days of impurity; let him ‘ not intermit the ceremonies to be performed with holy ‘ fires: while he performs those rites, even though he be a ‘ Japinda, he is not impure.

85 ‘ He, who has touched a Chandála, a woman in her ‘ courses, an outcast for deadly sin, a newborn child, a ‘ corpse, or one who has touched a corpse, is made pure by ‘ bathing.

86 ‘ If, having sprinkled his mouth with water, and been ‘ long intent on his devotion, he see an unclean person, ‘ let him repeat, as well as he is able, the solar texts of the ‘ Véda, and those, which confer purity.

87 ‘ Should a Bráhmén touch a human bone moist with ‘ oil, he is purified by bathing; if it be not oily, by strok‘ ing a cow, or by looking at the sun, having sprinkled his ‘ mouth duly with water.

88 ‘ A student in theology shall not perform the cere‘ mony of pouring water at obsequies, until he have com‘ pleted his course of religious acts; but if, after the comple‘ tion of them, he thus make an offering of water, he be‘ comes pure in three nights.

89 ‘ For those, who discharge not their prescribed duties, ‘ for those, whose fathers were of a lower class than their ‘ mothers, for those, who wear a dress of religion unautho‘ rized by the Véda, and for those, who illegally kill themselves, ‘ the ceremony of giving funeral water is forbidden by law;

90 ‘ And for women imitating such hereticks, as ‘ wear an unlawful dress, and for such women as live at ‘ their own pleasure, or have caused an abortion, or have ‘ stricken their husbands, or have drunk any spirituous liquor.

91 ‘ A student violates not the rules of his order, by ‘ carrying out, when dead, his own instructor in the Védas, ‘ who invested him with his holy cord, or his teacher of ‘ particular chapters, or his reverend expounder of their ‘ meaning, or his father, or his mother.

92 ‘ Let men carry out a dead Sudra by the southern ‘ gate of the town; but the twiceborn, in due order, by the ‘ western, northern, and eastern gates.

93 ‘ No taint of impurity can light on kings or students ‘ in theology, while employed in discharging their several duties, ‘ nor on those, who have actually begun a sacrifice ; for the ‘ first are then placed on the seat of INDRA, and the others ‘ are always equally pure with the celestial spirit.

94 ‘ To a king, on the throne of magnanimity, the law ‘ ascribes instant purification, because his throne was raised ‘ for the protection of his people and the supply of their ‘ nourishment :

95 ‘ It is the same with the kinsmen of those, who die ‘ in battle, after the king has been slain, or have been ‘ killed by lightning, or legally by the king himself, or in ‘ defence of a cow, or of a priest ; and with all those, whom ‘ the king wishes to be pure.

96 ‘ The corporeal frame of a king is composed of par‘ ticles from SO’MA, AGNI, SU’RYA, PAVANA, INDRA, CUVE’- ‘ RA, VARUNA, and YAMA, the eight guardian deities of the ‘ world :

97 ‘ By those guardians of men in substance is the king ‘ pervaded, and he cannot by law be impure ; since by those ‘ tutelar gods are the purity and impurity of mortals both ‘ caused and removed.

98 ‘ By a soldier, discharging the duties of his class, and ‘ slain in the field with brandished weapons, the highest ‘ sacrifice is, in that instant, complete ; and so is his purifica‘ tion: this law is fixed.

99 ‘ A priest, having performed funeral rites, is purified
 ‘ by touching water ; a soldier, by touching his horse or ele‘ phant, or his arms ; a husbandman, by touching his goad,
 ‘ or the halter of his cattle ; a servant, by touching his staff.

100. ‘ This mode of purifying śapindas, O chief of the ‘ twiceborn, has been fully declared to you! learn now the ‘ purification required on the death of kinsmen less inti‘ mately connected.

101 ‘ A Bráhmén, having carried out a dead Bráhmén, ‘ though not a śapinda, with the affection of a kinsman, or ‘ any of those nearly related to him by his mother, becomes ‘ pure in three days;

102 ‘ But, if he taste the food offered by their ‘ śapindas, he is purified in ten days; and in one day, if ‘ he neither partake of their food, nor dwell in the same ‘ house.

103 ‘ If he voluntarily follow a corpse, whether of a pa‘ ternal kinsman or of another, and afterwards bathe with his ‘ apparel, he is made pure by touching fire and tasting ‘ clarified butter.

104 ‘ Let no kinsman, whilst any of his own class are at ‘ hand, cause a deceased Bráhmén to be carried out by a ‘ Súdra; since the funeral rite, polluted by the touch of a ‘ servile man, obstructs his passage to heaven.

105 ‘ Sacred learning, austere devotion, fire, holy ali-
 ‘ ment, earth, the mind, water, smearing with cowdung, air, ‘ prescribed acts of religion, the sun, and time, are purifiers ‘ of embodied spirits;

106 ‘ But of all pure things, purity in acquiring wealth, ‘ is pronounced the most excellent: since he, who gains ‘ wealth with clean hands, is truly pure; not he, who is ‘ purified merely with earth and water.

107 ‘ By forgiveness of injuries, the learned are purifi‘ ed; by liberality, those who have neglected their duty; by

‘ pious meditation, those who have secret faults ; by devout ‘ austerities, those who best know the Véda.

108 ‘ By water and earth is purified what ought to be ‘ made pure ; a river, by its current ; a woman, whose ‘ thoughts have been impure, by her monthly discharge, and ‘ the chief of twiceborn men, by fixing his mind wholly on ‘ God.

109 ‘ Bodies are cleansed by water ; the mind is purified ‘ by truth ; the vital spirit, by theology and devotion ; the ‘ understanding, by clear knowledge.

110 ‘ Thus have you heard me declare the precise rules ‘ for purifying animal bodies : hear now the modes of restoring ‘ purity to various inanimate things.

111 ‘ Of brilliant metals, of gems, and of every thing ‘ made with stone, the purification, ordained by the wise, is ‘ with ashes, water, and earth.

112 ‘ A golden vessel, not smeared, is cleansed with water ‘ only ; and every thing produced in water, as coral,
 ‘ shells, or pearls, and every stony substance, and a silver ‘ vessel not enchased.

113 ‘ From a junction of water and fire arose gold ‘ and silver ; and they two, therefore, are best purified by ‘ the elements, whence they sprang,

114 ‘ Vessels of copper, iron, brass, pewter, tin and ‘ lead, may be fitly cleansed with ashes, with acids, or ‘ with water.

115 ‘ The purification ordained for all sorts of liquids, ‘ is by stirring them with cusa grass ; for cloths folded, by ‘ sprinkling them with hallowed water ; for wooden utensils, ‘ by planing them ;

116 ‘ For the sacrificial pots to hold clarified butter ‘ and juice of the moonplant, by rubbing them with the ‘ hand, and washing them, at the time of the sacrifice :

117 ‘ Implements to wash the rice, to contain the obla‘ tions, to cast them into the fire, to collect, winnow, and ‘ prepare the grain, must be purified with water made hot.

118 ‘ The purification by sprinkling is ordained for ‘ grain and cloths in large quantities ; but, to purify them ‘ in small parcels, which a man may easily carry, they must be ‘ washed.

119 ‘ Leathern utensils, and such as are made with ‘ cane, must generally be purified in the same manner with ‘ cloths ; green vegetables, roots, and fruit, in the same ‘ manner with grain ;

120 ‘ Silk and woollen stuff, with saline earths; blank‘ ets from Népála, with pounded arishtas, or nimba fruit ;
 ‘ vests and long drawers, with the fruit of the Bilva ; man‘ tles of śhumá, with white mustardseeds.

121 ‘ Utensils made of shells or of horn, of bones or ‘ of ivory, must be cleansed by him, who knows the law,
 ‘ as mantles of śhumá are purified, with the addition of cow’s ‘ urine or of water.

122 ‘ Grass, firewood, and straw, are purified by sprink‘ ling them with water ; a house, by rubbing, brushing, and ‘ smearing with cowdung ; an earthen pot, by a second ‘ burning :

123 ‘ But an earthen pot, which has been touched with ‘ any spirituous liquor, with urine, with ordure, with spit‘ tle, with pus, or with blood, cannot, even by another ‘ burning, be rendered pure.

124 ' Land is cleaned by five modes ; by sweeping, by smearing with cowdung, by sprinkling with cows' urine, by scraping, or by letting a cow pass a day and a night on it.

125 ' A thing nibbled by a bird, smelt at by a cow, shaken with a foot, sneezed on, or defiled by lice, is purified by earth scattered over it.

126 ' As long as the scent or moisture, caused by any impurity, remain on the thing soiled, so long must earth and water be repeatedly used in all purifications of things inanimate.

127 ' The Gods declared three pure things peculiar to Bráhmens; what has been defiled without their knowledge, what, in cases of doubt, they sprinkle with water; and what they commend with their speech.

128 ' Waters are pure, as far as a cow goes to quench her thirst in them, if they flow over clean earth, and are sullied by no impurity, but have a good scent, colour, and taste.

129 ' The hand of an artist employed in his art is always pure; so is every vendible commodity, when exposed to sale; and that food is always clean, which a student in theology has begged and received: such is the sacred rule.

130 ' The mouth of a woman is constantly pure; a bird is pure on the fall of fruit, which he has pecked; a sucking animal, on the flowing of the milk; a dog, on his catching the deer :

131 ' The flesh of a wild beast slain by dogs, MENU pronounces pure; and that of an animal slain by other carnivorous creatures, or by men of the mixed class, who subsist by hunting.

132 ‘ All the cavities above the navel are pure, and all ‘ below it, unclean; so are all excretions, that fall from the ‘ body.

133 ‘ Gnats, clear drops from the mouth of a speaker, ‘ a shadow, a cow, a horse, sunbeams, dust, earth, air, and ‘ fire, must all be considered as clean, even when they touch ‘ an unclean thing.

134 ‘ For the cleansing of vessels, which have held or‘ dure or urine, earth and water must be used, as long as they ‘ are needful; and the same for cleansing the twelve corpo‘ real impurities:

135 ‘ Oily exudations, feminal fluids, blood, dandruff, ‘ urine, feces, earwax, nailparings, phlegm, tears, concre‘ tions on the eyes, and sweat, are the twelve impurities of ‘ the human frame.

136 ‘ By the man, who desires purity, one piece of earth
 ‘ together with water must be used for the conduit of urine, ‘ three, for that of the feces; so, ten for one hand, that is, the ‘ left; then seven for both: but, if necessary, more must be used.

137 ‘ Such is the purification of married men; that of ‘ students must be double; that of hermits, triple; that of ‘ men wholly recluse, quadruple.

138 ‘ Let each man sprinkle the cavities of his body,
 ‘ and taste water in due form, when he has discharged urine
 ‘ or feces; when he is going to read the Véda; and, invari‘ ably, before he takes his food:

139 ‘ First, let him thrice taste water; then twice let ‘ him wipe his mouth, if he be of a twiceborn class, and desire ‘ corporeal purity; but a woman or servile man may once ‘ respectively make that ablution.

140 ‘ Súdras, engaged in religious duties, must perform ‘ each month the ceremony of shaving their heads ; their ‘ food must be the orts of Bráhmens ; and their mode of pu‘ rification, the same with that of a Vaisya.

141 ‘ Such drops of water, as fall from the mouth on ‘ any part of the body, render it not unclean ; nor hairs of ‘ the beard, that enter the mouth ; nor what adheres awhile ‘ to the teeth.

142 ‘ Drops, which trickle on the feet of a man hold‘ ing water for others, are held equal to waters flowing over ‘ pure earth : by them he is not defiled.

143 ‘ He, who carries in any manner an inanimate bur‘ den, and is touched by any thing impure, is cleansed by ‘ making an ablution, without laying his burden down.

144 ‘ Having vomited or been purged, let him bathe ‘ and taste clarified butter, but, if he have eaten already, let ‘ him only perform an ablution : for him, who has been ‘ connected with a woman, bathing is ordained by law.

145 ‘ Having flumbered, having sneezed, having eat‘ en, having spitten, having told untruths, having drunk ‘ water, and going to read sacred books, let him, though ‘ pure, wash his mouth.

146 ‘ This perfect system of rules for purifying men of ‘ all classes, and for cleansing inanimate things, has been ‘ declared to you : hear now the laws concerning women.

147 ‘ By a girl, or by a young woman, or by a woman ‘ advanced in years, nothing must be done, even in her own ‘ dwelling place, according to her mere pleasure :

148 ‘ In childhood must a female be dependent on her ‘ father ; in youth, on her husband ; her lord being dead,

‘ on her sons; if she have no sons, on the near kinsmen of ‘ her husband; if he left no kinsmen, on those of her father; if ‘ she have no paternal kinsmen, on the sovereign: a woman ‘ must never seek independence.

149 ‘ Never let her wish to separate herself from her ‘ father, her husband, or her sons; for, by a separation from ‘ them, she exposes both families to contempt.

150 ‘ She must always live with a cheerful temper, ‘ with good management in the affairs of the house, with ‘ great care of the household furniture, and with a frugal ‘ hand in all her expenses.

151 ‘ Him, to whom her father has given her, or her ‘ brother with the paternal assent, let her obsequiously ho‘ nour, while he lives; and, when he dies, let her never ‘ neglect him.

152 ‘ The recitation of holy texts, and the sacrifice ‘ ordained by the lord of creatures, are used in marriages ‘ for the sake of procuring good fortune to brides; but the ‘ first gift, or troth plighted, by the husband is the primary ‘ cause and origin of marital dominion.

153 ‘ When the husband has performed the nuptial ‘ rites with texts of the Véda, he gives bliss continually to ‘ his wife here below, both in season and out of season;
 ‘ and he will give her happiness in the next world.

154 ‘ Though inobservant of approved usages, or ena-‘ moured of another woman, or devoid of good qualities, ‘ yet a husband must constantly be revered as a god by a ‘ virtuous wife.

155 ‘ No sacrifice is allowed to women apart from ‘ their husbands, no religious rite, no fasting: as far only

‘ as a wife honours her lord, so far she is exalted in heaven.

156 ‘ A faithful wife, who wishes to attain in heaven the mansion of her husband, must do nothing unkind to him, be he living or dead :

157 ‘ Let her emaciate her body, by living voluntarily on pure flowers, roots, and fruit ; but let her not, when her lord is deceased, even pronounce the name of another man.

158 ‘ Let her continue till death forgiving all injuries, performing harsh duties, avoiding every sensual pleasure, and cheerfully practising the incomparable rules of virtue, which have been followed by such women, as were devoted to one only husband.

159 ‘ Many thousands of Bráhmens, having avoided sensuality from their early youth, and having left no issue in their families, have ascended, nevertheless, to heaven ;

160 ‘ And, like those abstemious men, a virtuous wife ascends to heaven, though she have no child, if, after the decease of her lord, she devote herself to pious austerity :

161 ‘ But a widow, who, from a wish to bear children, flights her deceased husband by marrying again, brings disgrace on herself here below, and shall be excluded from the seat of her lord.

162 ‘ Issue, begotten on a woman by any other than her husband, is here declared to be no progeny of hers ; no more than a child, begotten on the wife of another man, belongs to the begetter : nor is a second husband allowed, in any part of this code, to a virtuous woman.

163 ‘ She, who neglects her former (púrva) lord, ‘ though of a lower class, and takes another (para) of a high‘ er, becomes despicable in this world, and is called para-
 ‘ púrvá, or one who had a different husband before.

164 ‘ A married woman, who violates the duty, which ‘ she owes to her lord, brings infamy on herself in this life, ‘ and, in the next, shall enter the womb of a shakal, or be ‘ afflicted with elephantiasis, and other diseases, which punish ‘ crimes;

165 While she, who flights not her lord, but keeps her ‘ mind, speech, and body, devoted to him, attains his hea‘ venly mansion, and by good men is called śádhvì, or vir- ‘ tuous.

166 ‘ Yes; by this course of life it is, that a woman, ‘ whose mind, speech, and body are kept in subjection, ac‘ quires high renown in this world, and, in the next, the same ‘ abode with her husband.

167 ‘ A twiceborn man, versed in sacred ordinances, ‘ must burn, with hallowed fire and fit implements of sacri‘ fice, his wife dying before him, if she was of his own class,
 ‘ and lived by these rules:

168 ‘ Having thus kindled sacred fires, and performed ‘ funeral rites to his wife, who died before him, he may again ‘ marry, and again light the nuptial fire.

169 ‘ Let him not cease to perform day by day accord‘ ing to the preceding rules, the five great sacraments; and,
 ‘ having taken a lawful comfort, let him dwell in his house ‘ during the second period of his life.

CHAPTER THE SIXTH:

ON DEVOTION; OR ON THE THIRD AND FOURTH ORDERS.

1 ‘ HAVING thus remained in the order of a house‘ keeper, as the law ordains, let the twiceborn
 ‘ man, who had before completed his studentship, dwell ‘ in a forest, his faith being firm and his organs wholly ‘ subdued.

2 ‘ When the father of a family, perceives his muscles ‘ become flaccid and his hair gray, and sees the child of his ‘ child, let him then seek refuge in a forest:

3 ‘ Abandoning all food eaten in towns, and all his ‘ household utensils, let him repair to the lonely wood, ‘ committing the care of his wife to her sons, or accom‘ panied by her, if she chuse to attend him.

4 ‘ Let him take up his consecrated fire, and all his ‘ domestick implements of making oblations to it, and, de‘ parting from the town to the forest, let him dwell in it ‘ with complete power over his organs of sense and of action.

5 ‘ With many sorts of pure food, such as holy sages

‘ used to eat, with green herbs, roots, and fruit, let him ‘ perform the five great sacraments before mentioned, in‘ troducing them with due ceremonies.

6 ‘ Let him wear a black antelope’s hide, or a vesture
 ‘ of bark; let him bathe evening and morning; let him ‘ suffer the hairs of his head, his beard, and his nails to ‘ grow continually.

7 ‘ From such food, as himself may eat, let him, to ‘ the utmost of his power, make offerings and give alms;
 ‘ and with presents of water, roots, and fruit, let him ‘ honour those, who visit his hermitage.

8 ‘ Let him be constantly engaged in reading the Véda;
 ‘ patient of all extremities, universally benevolent, with a ‘ mind intent on the Supreme Being; a perpetual giver, but ‘ no receiver of gifts; with tender affection for all animated ‘ bodies.

9 ‘ Let him, as the law directs, make oblations on the ‘ hearth with three sacred fires; not omitting in due time ‘ the ceremonies to be performed at the conjunction and ‘ opposition of the moon.

10 ‘ Let him also perform the sacrifice ordained in ‘ honour of the lunar constellations, make the prescribed ‘ offering of new grain, and solemnize holy rites every ‘ four months, and at the winter and summer solstices.

11 ‘ With pure grains, the food of ancient sages, grow‘ ing in the vernal and autumnal seasons, and brought home ‘ by himself, let him severally make, as the law ordains, the ‘ oblations of cakes and boiled grain;

12 ‘ And, having presented to the gods, that purest ‘ oblation, which the wild woods produced, let him eat

‘ what remains, together with some native salt, which him‘ self collected.

13 ‘ Let him eat green herbs, flowers, roots, and fruit, ‘ that grow on earth or in water, and the productions of ‘ pure trees, and oils formed in fruits.

14 ‘ Honey and fleshmeat he must avoid, and all sorts of ‘ mushrooms, the plant bhústrīna, that named sighruca, and ‘ the fruit of the sléshmátaca.

15 ‘ In the month Asvina let him cast away the food
 ‘ of fages, which he before had laid up, and his vesture, ‘ then become old, and his herbs, roots, and fruit.

16 ‘ Let him not eat the produce of ploughed land, ‘ though abandoned by any man, who owns it, nor fruit
 ‘ and roots produced in a town, even though hunger op-‘ presses him.

17 ‘ He may eat what is mellowed by fire, and he may ‘ eat what is ripened by time; and either let him break ‘ hard fruits with a stone, or let his teeth serve as a pestle.

18 ‘ Either let him pluck enough for a day, or let him ‘ gather enough for a month; or let him collect enough ‘ for six months, or lay up enough for a year.

19 ‘ Having procured food, as he is able, he may eat ‘ it at eve or in the morning; or he may take only every ‘ fourth, or every eighth, such regular meal;

20 ‘ Or, by the rules of the lunar penance, he may ‘ eat a mouthful less each day of the bright, and a mouthful ‘ more each day of the dark, fortnight; or he may eat only ‘ once, at the close of each fortnight, a morsel of boiled ‘ grains:

21 ‘ Or he may constantly live on flowers and roots,

‘ and on fruit matured by time, which has fallen spontaneously, strictly observing the laws ordained for hermits.

22 ‘ Let him slide backwards and forwards on the ground; or let him stand a whole day on tiptoe; or let him continue in motion rising and sitting alternately; but at sunrise, at noon, and at sunset, let him go to the waters and bathe.

23 ‘ In the hot season, let him sit exposed to five fires, four blazing around him with the sun above; in the rains, let him stand uncovered, without even a mantle, where the clouds pour the heaviest showers; in the cold season, let him wear humid vesture; and let him increase by degrees the austerity of his devotion:

24 ‘ Performing his ablution at the three Savanas, let him give satisfaction to the manes and to the gods; and, enduring harsher and harsher mortifications, let him dry up his bodily frame.

25 ‘ Then, having reposed his holy fires, as the law directs, in his mind, let him live without external fire, without a mansion, wholly silent, feeding on roots and fruit;

26 ‘ Not solicitous for the means of gratification, chaste as a student, sleeping on the bare earth, in the haunts of pious hermits, without one selfish affection, dwelling at the roots of trees.

27 ‘ From devout Bráhmens let him receive alms to support life, or from other housekeepers of twiceborn classes, who dwell in the forest:

28 ‘ Or the hermit may bring food from a town, having received it in a basket of leaves, in his naked hand, or in a potsherd; and then let him swallow eight mouthfuls.

29 ‘ These and other rules must a Bráhmén, who retires ‘ to the woods, diligently practise; and, for the purpose of ‘ uniting his soul with the divine spirit, let him study the ‘ various upanishads of scripture, or chapters on the essence and ‘ attributes of God,

30 ‘ Which have been studied with reverence by an‘ chorites versed in theology, and by housekeepers, who ‘ dwelt afterwards in forests, for the sake of increasing their ‘ sublime knowledge and devotion, and for the purification ‘ of their bodies.

31 ‘ Or, if he has any incurable disease, let him advance in a ‘ straight path, towards the invincible north eastern point, ‘ feeding on water and air, till his mortal frame totally decay,
 ‘ and his soul become united with the Supreme.

32 ‘ A Bráhmén, having shuffled off his body by any ‘ of those modes, which great sages practised, and becoming ‘ void of sorrow and fear, rises to exaltation in the divine ‘ essence.

33 ‘ HAVING thus performed religious acts in a forest
 ‘ during the third portion of his life, let him become a ‘ Sannyási for the fourth portion of it, abandoning all sen‘ sual affections, and wholly reposing in the Supreme Spirit:

34 ‘ The man, who has passed from order to order, has ‘ made oblations to fire on his respective changes of state, and ‘ has kept his members in subjection, but, tired with so long
 ‘ a course of giving alms and making offerings, thus reposes ‘ himself entirely on God, shall be raised after death to ‘ glory.

35 ‘ When he has paid his three debts to the sages, the ‘ manes, and the gods, let him apply his mind to final beati-

‘ tude; but low shall He fall, who presumes to seek beatitude, ‘ without having discharged those debts :

36 ‘ After he has read the Védas in the form prescribed ‘ by law, has legally begotten a son, and has performed sacri‘ fices to the best of his power, he has paid his three debts,
 ‘ and may then apply his heart to eternal bliss;

37 ‘ But if a Bráhmén have not read the Véda, if he ‘ have not begotten a son, and if he have not performed sa‘ crifices, yet shall aim at final beatitude, he shall sink to a ‘ place of degradation.

38 ‘ Having performed the sacrifice of PRAJA’PETI, ac‘ companied with a gift of all his wealth, and having re‘ posited in his mind the sacrificial fires, a Bráhmén may ‘ proceed from his house, that is, from the second order, or he ‘ may proceed even from the first, to the condition of a ‘ Sannyási.

39 ‘ Higher worlds are illuminated with the glory of ‘ that man, who passes from his house into the fourth order, ‘ giving exemption from fear to all animated beings, and ‘ pronouncing the mystick words of the Véda :

40 ‘ To the Bráhmén, by whom not even the smallest ‘ dread has been occasioned to sentient creatures, there can ‘ be no dread from any quarter whatever, when he obtains ‘ a release from his mortal body.

41 ‘ Departing from his house, taking with him pure ‘ implements, his waterpot and staff, keeping silence, unal‘ lured by desire of the objects near him, let him enter ‘ into the fourth order.

42 ‘ Alone let him constantly dwell, for the sake of ‘ his own felicity: observing the happiness of a solitary man,

• who neither forsakes nor is forsaken, let him live without
• a companion.

43 • Let him have no culinary fire, no domicil; let • him, when very hungry, go to the town for food; let • him patiently bear disease; let his mind be firm; let him
• study to know God, and fix his attention on God alone.

44 • An earthen waterpot, the roots of large trees,
• coarse vesture, total solitude, equanimity toward all
• creatures, these are the characteristicks of a Bráhmén
• set free.

45 • Let him not wish for death; let him not wish for • life; let him expect his appointed time, as a hired ser• vant expects his wages.

46 • Let him advance his foot purified by looking down,
• lest he touch any thing impure; let him drink water purified
• by straining with a cloth, lest he hurt some insect; let him,
• if he chuse to speak, utter words purified by truth; let him
• by all means keep his heart purified.

47 • Let him bear a reproachful speech with patience;
• let him speak reproachfully to no man; let him not, on • account of this frail and feverish body, engage in hostility
• with any one living.

48 • With an angry man let him not in his turn be an• gry; abused, let him speak mildly; nor let him utter a
• word relating to vain illusory things and confined within
• seven gates, the five organs of sense, the heart, and the intellect;
• or this world, with three above and three below it.

49 • Delighted with meditating on the Supreme Spirit,
• sitting fixed in such meditation, without needing any • thing earthly, without one sensual desire, without any com-

‘ panion but his own foul, let him live in this world seeking ‘ the blifs of the next.

50 ‘ Neither by explaining omens and prodigies, nor ‘ by ſkill in aſtrology and palmeftry, nor by caſuiſtry and ‘ expoſitions of holy texts, let him at any time gain his dai‘ ly ſupport.

51 ‘ Let him not go near a houſe frequented by hermits,
 ‘ or prieſts, or birds, or dogs, or other beggars.

52 ‘ His hair, nails, and beard being clipped, bearing ‘ with him a diſh, a ſtaff, and a waterpot, his whole mind
 ‘ being fixed on GOD, let him wander about continually, ‘ without giving pain to animal or vegetable beings.

53 ‘ His diſhes muſt have no fracture, nor muſt they be ‘ made of bright metals: the purification ordained for them ‘ muſt be with water alone, like that of the veſſels for a ſa‘ crifice.

54 ‘ A gourd, a wooden bowl, an earthen diſh, or a ‘ baſket made of reeds, has MENU, ſon of the Self-exiſting, de‘ clared fit veſſels to receive the food of Bráhmens devoted ‘ to God.

55 ‘ Only once a day let him demand food; let him ‘ not habituate him to eat much at a time; for an anchorite, ‘ habituated to eat much, becomes inclined to ſenſual grati-‘ fications.

56 ‘ At the time when the ſmoke of kitchen fires has ‘ ceaſed, when the peſtle lies motionleſs, when the burning ‘ charcoal is extinguished, when people have eaten and when ‘ diſhes are removed, that is, late in the day, let the Sannyáſi ‘ always beg food.

57 ‘ For miſſing it, let him not be ſorrowful; nor for ‘ gaining it let him be glad: let him care only for a sufficiency to support life, but let him not be anxious about his utensils.

58 ‘ Let him constantly disdain to receive food after humble reverence; since, by receiving it in consequence of an humble salutation, a Sannyási, though free, becomes a captive.

59 ‘ By eating little and by sitting in solitary places, let him restrain those organs, which are naturally hurried away by sensual desires.

60 ‘ By the coercion of his members, by the absence of hate and affection, and by giving no pain to sentient creatures, he becomes fit for immortality.

61 ‘ Let him reflect on the transmigrations of men caused by their sinful deeds, on their downfall into a region of darkness, and their torments in the mansion of YAMA;

62 ‘ On their separation from those, whom they love, and their union with those, whom they hate, on their strength overpowered by old age, and their bodies racked with disease;

63 ‘ On their agonizing departure from this corporeal frame, their formation again in the womb, and the glidings of this vital spirit through ten thousand millions of uterine passages;

64 ‘ On the misery attached to embodied spirits from a violation of their duties, and the unperishable bliss attached to them from their abundant performance of all duties, religious and civil.

65 ‘ Let him reflect also, with exclusive application of mind, on the subtil indivisible essence of the supreme spi-

‘ rit, and its complete existence in all beings, whether ex‘ tremely high or extremely low.

66 ‘ Equalminded towards all creatures, in what order ‘ soever he may have been placed, let him fully discharge ‘ his duty, though he bear not the visible marks of his order:
 ‘ the visible mark, or mere name, of his order is by no ‘ means an effective discharge of his duty;

67 ‘ As, although the fruit of the tree cātaca purify ‘ water, yet a man cannot purify water by merely pronounc‘ ing the name of that fruit: he must throw it, when pounded,
 ‘ into the jar.

68 ‘ For the sake of preserving minute animals by night
 ‘ and by day, let him walk, though with pain to his own ‘ body, perpetually looking on the ground.

69 ‘ Let a Sannyási, by way of expiation for the death of ‘ those creatures, which he may have destroyed unknowing‘ ly by day or by night, make six suppressions of his breath, ‘ having duly bathed:

70 ‘ Even three suppressions of breath made according ‘ to the divine rule, accompanied with the triverbal phrase ‘ (bhurbhuvah svah) and the trilateral syllable (óm), may ‘ be considered as the highest devotion of a Bráhmen;

71 ‘ For as the drops and impurities of metallick ores are ‘ consumed by fire, thus are the sinful acts of the human or‘ gans consumed by suppressions of the breath, while the ‘ mystic words, and the measures of the gáyatrì are revolved in ‘ the mind.

72 ‘ Let him thus by such suppressions of breath burn ‘ away his offences; by reflecting intensely on the steps of ‘ ascent to beatitude, let him destroy sin; by coercing his mem-

‘ bers, let him restrain all sensual attachments ; by meditating on the intimate union of his own soul and the divine essence, let him extinguish all qualities repugnant to the nature of GOD.

73 ‘ Let him observe, with extreme application of mind, the progress of this internal spirit through various bodies, high and low ; a progress hard to be discerned by men with unimproved intellects.

74 ‘ He, who fully understands the perpetual omnipresence of GOD, can be led no more captive by criminal acts ; but he, who possesses not that sublime knowledge, shall wander again through the world.

75 ‘ By injuring nothing animated, by subduing all sensual appetites, by devout rites ordained in the Véda, and by rigorous mortifications, men obtain, even in this life, the state of beatitude.

77 ‘ A mansion infested by age and by sorrow, the seat of malady, harassed with pains, haunted with the quality of darkness, and incapable of standing long ; such a mansion of the vital soul let its occupier always cheerfully quit :

78 ‘ As a tree leaves the bank of a river, when it falls in, or as a bird leaves the branch of a tree at his pleasure, thus he, who leaves his body by necessity or by legal choice, is delivered from the ravening shark, or crocodile, of the world.

79 ‘ Letting his good acts descend (by the law of the Véda) to those, who love him, and his evil deeds, to those,

‘ who hate him, he may attain, through devout meditation,
 ‘ the eternal spirit.

80 ‘ When, having well considered the nature and con‘ sequence of sin, he becomes averse from all sensual de‘ lights, he then attains bliss in this world; bliss, which ‘ shall endure after death.

81 Thus, having gradually abandoned all earthly attach‘ ments, and indifferent to all pairs of opposite things, as ‘ honour and dishonour, and the like, he remains absorbed in ‘ the divine essence.

82 ‘ All, that has now been declared, is obtained by pi‘ ous meditation; but no man, who is ignorant of the su‘ preme spirit, can gather the fruit of mere ceremonial acts.

83 ‘ Let him constantly study that part of the Véda, ‘ which relates to sacrifice; that, which treats of subordi‘ nate deities; that, which reveals the nature of the supreme ‘ GOD; and whatever is declared in the Upanishads.

84 ‘ This holy scripture is a sure refuge even for those, ‘ who understand not its meaning, and of course for those,
 ‘ who understand it; this Véda is a sure resource for those, ‘ who seek bliss above; this is a sure resource for those, who ‘ seek bliss eternal.

85 ‘ That Bráhmen, who becomes a Sannyási by this dis‘ cipline, announced in due order, shakes off sin here below, ‘ and reaches the most high.

86 ‘ This general law has been revealed to you for an‘ chorites with subdued minds: now learn the particular dis‘ cipline of those, who become recluses according to the ‘ Véda, that is, of anchorites in the first of the four degrees.

87 ‘ The student, the married man, the hermit, and the ‘ anchorite, are the offspring, though in four orders, of ‘ married men keeping house ;

88 ‘ And all, or even any, of those orders, assumed in ‘ their turn, according to the sacred ordinances, lead the ‘ Bráhmens, who acts by the preceding rules, to the highest ‘ mansion :

89 ‘ But of all those the housekeeper, observing the ‘ regulations of the Sruti and Smṛiti, may be called the chief ; ‘ since he supports the three other orders :

90 ‘ As all rivers, female and male, run to their deter‘ mined place in the sea, thus men of all other orders, re‘ pair to their fixed place in the mansion of the housekeeper.

91 ‘ By Bráhmens, placed in these four orders, a tenfold
 ‘ system of duties must ever be sedulously practised :

92 ‘ Content, returning good for evil, resistance to sen‘ sual appetites, abstinence from illicit gain, purification, coer‘ cion of the organs, knowledge of scripture, knowledge of ‘ the supreme spirit, veracity, and freedom from wrath, form ‘ their tenfold system of duties :

93 ‘ Such Bráhmens, as attentively read the ten precepts ‘ of duty, and after reading, carefully practise them, attain
 ‘ the most exalted condition.

94 ‘ A Bráhmen, having practised, with organs under ‘ command, this tenfold system of duty, having heard the ‘ Upanishads explained, as the law directs, and who has dis‘ charged his three debts, may become an anchorite, in the ‘ house of his son, according to the Véda :

95 ‘ And, having abandoned all ceremonial acts, having ‘ expiated all his offences, having obtained a command over ‘ his organs, and having perfectly understood the scripture,

‘ he may live at his ease, while the household affairs are ‘ conducted by his son.

96 ‘ When he thus has relinquished all forms, is intent ‘ on his own occupation, and free from every other desire, ‘ when, by devoting himself to GOD, he has effaced sin, he ‘ then attains the supreme path of glory.

97 ‘ THIS fourfold regulation for the sacerdotal class, ‘ has thus been made known to you; a just regulation, pro‘ ducing endless fruit after death: next, learn the duty of ‘ kings, or the military class.’

CHAPTER THE SEVENTH:

ON GOVERNMENT, AND PUBLIC LAW; OR ON THE MILITARY CLASS.

1 ‘ I WILL fully declare the duty of kings ; and show ‘ how a ruler of men should conduct himself, in ‘ what manner he was framed, and how his ultimate reward ‘ may be attained by him.

2 ‘ By a man of the military class, who has received in ‘ due form the investiture, which the Véda prescribes, great ‘ care must be used to maintain this whole assemblage of laws.

3 ‘ Since, if the world had no king, it would quake on ‘ all sides through fear, the ruler of this universe, therefore, ‘ created a king, for the maintenance of this system, both ‘ religious and civil,

4 ‘ Forming him of eternal particles drawn from the ‘ substance of INDRA, PAVANA, YAMA, SU’RYA, of AGNI and ‘ VARUNA, of CHANDRA and CÚVE’RA :

5 ‘ And since a king was composed of particles drawn ‘ from those chief guardian deities, he consequently fur-‘ passes all mortals in glory.

6 ' Like the sun, he burns eyes and hearts; nor can ' any human creature on earth even gaze on him.

7 ' He is fire and air; he, both sun and moon; he,
 ' the god of criminal justice; he, the genius of wealth;
 ' he, the regent of waters; he, the lord of the firmament.

8 ' A king, even though a child, must not be treated
 ' lightly, from an idea that he is a mere mortal: no; he ' is a powerful divinity, who appears in a human shape.

9 ' Fire burns only one person, who carelessly goes too
 ' near it; but the fire of a king in wrath burns a whole
 ' family, with all their cattle and goods.

10 ' Fully considering the business before him, his own
 ' force, and the place, and the time, he assumes in succeſ-
 ' ſion all ſorts of forms, for the ſake of advancing juſtice.

11 ' He, ſure, muſt be the perfect eſſence of majeſty; by
 ' whoſe favour Abundance riſes on her lotos, in whoſe va-
 ' lour dwells conqueſt; in whoſe anger, death.

12 ' He, who ſhows hatred of the king, through deluſi-
 ' on of mind, will certainly periſh; for ſpeedily will the ' king apply his heart to that man's perdition.

13 ' LET the king prepare a juſt compensation for the ' good, and a juſt puniſhment for the bad: the rule of ſtrict
 ' juſtice let him never tranſgreſs.

14 ' For his uſe BRAHMA formed in the beginning of ' time the genius of puniſhment, with a body of pure light,
 ' his own ſon, even abſtract criminal juſtice, the protector
 ' of all created things:

15 ' Through fear of that genius all ſentient beings,
 ' whether fixed or locomotive, are fitted for natural enjoy-
 ' ments and ſwerve not from duty.

16 ‘ When the king, therefore, has fully considered ‘ place and time, and his own strength, and the divine or‘ dinance, let him justly inflict punishment on all those, ‘ who act unjustly.

17 ‘ Punishment is an active ruler; he is the true ma‘ nager of publick affairs; he is the dispenser of laws; and ‘ wise men call him the sponfor of all the four orders for ‘ the discharge of their several duties.

18 ‘ Punishment governs all mankind; punishment ‘ alone preserves them; punishment wakes, while their ‘ guards are asleep: the wise consider punishment as the ‘ perfection of justice.

19 ‘ When rightly and considerately inflicted, it makes ‘ all the people happy; but, inflicted without full confide‘ ration, it wholly destroys them all.

20 ‘ If the king were not, without indolence, to pu‘ nish the guilty, the stronger would roast the weaker, like ‘ fish, on a spit; (or, according to one reading, the stronger ‘ would oppress the weaker, like fish in their element;)

21 ‘ The crow would peck the consecrated offering of ‘ rice; the dog would lick the clarified butter; ownership ‘ would remain with none; the lowest would overfet the ‘ highest.

22 ‘ The whole race of men is kept in order by pu‘ nishment; for a guiltless man is hard to be found: through ‘ fear of punishment, indeed, this universe is enabled to en‘ joy its blessings;

23 ‘ Deities and demons, heavenly songsters and cruel
‘ giants, birds and serpents, are made capable, by just cor‘ rection, of their several enjoyments.

24 ‘ All classes would become corrupt; all barriers ‘ would be destroyed, there would be total confusion a‘ mong men, if punishment either were not inflicted, or ‘ were inflicted unduly :

25 ‘ But where punishment, with a black hue and a ‘ red eye, advances to destroy sin, there, if the judge dis‘ cern well, the people are undisturbed.

26 ‘ Holy sages consider as a fit dispenser of criminal ‘ justice, that king, who invariably speaks truth, who duly ‘ considers all cases, who understands the sacred books, who ‘ knows the distinctions of virtue, pleasure, and riches ;

27 ‘ Such a king, if he justly inflict legal punishments, ‘ greatly increases those three means of happiness; but pu‘ nishment itself shall destroy a king, who is crafty, volup‘ tuous, and wrathful :

28 ‘ Criminal justice, the bright essence of majesty, and ‘ hard to be supported by men with unimproved minds, era‘ dicates a king, who swerves from his duty, together with ‘ all his race :

29 ‘ Punishment shall overtake his castles, his territo‘ ries, his peopled land with all fixed and all moveable ‘ things, that exist on it: even the gods and the sages, who ‘ lose their oblations, will be afflicted and ascend to the sky.

30 ‘ Just punishment cannot be inflicted by an igno‘ rant and covetous king, who has no wise and virtuous as‘ sistant, whose understanding has not been improved, and ‘ whose heart is addicted to sensuality :

31 ‘ By a king, wholly pure, faithful to his promise, ‘ observant of the scriptures, with good assistants and sound ‘ understanding, may punishment be justly inflicted.

32 ‘ Let him in his own domains act with justice, chastise foreign foes with rigour, behave without duplicity to his affectionate friends, and with lenity to Bráhmens.

33 ‘ Of a king thus disposed, even though he subsist by gleanings, or, be his treasure ever so small, the fame is far spread in the world, like a drop of oil in water;

34 ‘ But of a king with a contrary disposition, with passions unsubdued, be his riches ever so great, the fame is contracted in the world, like clarified butter in the same element.

35 ‘ A king was created as the protector of all those classes and orders, who, from the first to the last, discharge their several duties;

36 ‘ And all, that must be done by him, for the protection of his people, with the assistance of good ministers, I will declare to you, as the law directs, in due order.

37 ‘ LET the king, having risen at early dawn, respectfully attend to Bráhmens, learned in the three Védas, and in the science of ethicks; and by their decision let him abide.

38 ‘ Constantly must he show respect to Bráhmens, who have grown old, both in years and in piety, who know the scriptures, who in body and mind are pure; for he, who honours the aged, will perpetually be honoured even by cruel demons:

39 ‘ From them, though he may have acquired modest behaviour by his own good sense and by study, let him continually learn habits of modesty and composure; since a king, whose demeanour is humble and composed, never perishes.

40 ‘ While, through want of such humble virtue, many ‘ kings have perished with all their possessions, and, through ‘ virtue united with modesty, even hermits have obtained ‘ kingdoms.

41 ‘ Through want of that virtuous humility VE’NA
 ‘ was utterly ruined, and so was the great king NAHUSHA, ‘ and SUDA’SA, and YAVANA, (or, by a different reading, and ‘ SUDA’SA, the son of PIYAVANA) and SUMUC’HA, and ‘ NIMI;

42 ‘ But, by virtues with humble behaviour, PRIT’HU
 ‘ and MENU acquired sovereignty; CUVE’RA, wealth inex‘ haustible; and VISWA’MITRA, son of GA’DHI, the rank of ‘ a priest, though born in the military class.

43 ‘ From those, who know the three Védas, let him ‘ learn the triple doctrine comprised in them, together with ‘ the primeval science of criminal justice and sound policy,
 ‘ the systems of logick and metaphysics, and sublime theo‘ logical truth: from the people he must learn the theory ‘ of agriculture, commerce, and other practical arts.

44 ‘ Day and night must he strenuously exert himself to ‘ gain complete victory over his own organs; since that king ‘ alone, whose organs are completely subdued, can keep his ‘ people firm to their duty.

45 ‘ With extreme care let him shun eighteen vices, ‘ ten proceeding from love of pleasure, eight springing from ‘ wrath, and all ending in misery;

46 ‘ Since a king, addicted to vices arising from love of ‘ pleasure, must lose both his wealth and his virtue, and, ad‘ dicted to vices arising from anger, he may lose even his

47 ‘ Hunting, gaming, sleeping by day, censuring rivals, excess with women, intoxication, singing, instrumental musick, dancing, and useles travel, are the tenfold set of vices produced by love of pleasure :

48 ‘ Talebearing, violence, insidious wounding, envy, detraction, unjust seizure of property, reviling, and open assault, are in like manner the eightfold set of vices, to which anger gives birth.

49 ‘ A selfish inclination, which all wise men know to be the root of those two sets, let him suppress with diligence : both sets of vices are constantly produced by it.

50 ‘ Drinking, dice, women, and hunting, let him consider as the four most pernicious in the set, which love of pleasure occasions :

51 ‘ Battery, defamation, and injury to property, let him always consider as the three most heinous in the set, which arises from wrath ;

52 ‘ And in this sevenfold assemblage of vices, too frequently prevailing in all kingdoms, let an enlightened prince consider the first, and so forth in order, as the most abominable in each set.

53 ‘ On a comparison between death and vice, the learned pronounce vice the more dreadful ; since, after death, a vicious man sinks to regions lower and lower, while a man, free from vice, reaches heaven.

54 ‘ THE king must appoint seven or eight ministers, who must be sworn by touching a sacred image and the like ; men, whose ancestors were servants of kings ; who are versed in the holy books ; who are personally brave ; who

‘ are skilled in the use of weapons; and whose lineage is ‘ noble.

55 ‘ Even an act easy in itself is hard sometimes to be ‘ performed by a single man, especially if he have no assistant ‘ near: how much harder must it be to perform alone the bu- ‘ siness of a kingdom with great revenues!

56 ‘ Let him perpetually consult with those ministers ‘ on peace and war, on his forces, on his revenues, on the ‘ protection of his people, and on the means of bestowing ‘ aptly the wealth, which he has acquired:

57 ‘ Having ascertained the several opinions of his coun-‘ fellows, first apart and then collectively, let him do what is ‘ most beneficial for him in publick affairs.

58 ‘ To one learned Bráhmén, distinguished among ‘ them all, let the king impart his momentous counsel, re‘ lating to six principal articles.

59 ‘ To him, with full confidence, let him intrust all ‘ transactions; and with him, having taken his final resolu‘ tion, let him begin all his measures.

60 ‘ He must likewise appoint other officers; men of ‘ integrity, wellinformed, steady, habituated to gain wealth
‘ by honourable means, and tried by experience.

61 ‘ As many officers as the due performance of his ‘ business requires, not slothful men, but active, able, and well ‘ instructed, so many, and no more, let him appoint.

62 ‘ Among those let him employ the brave, the skilful,
‘ the wellborn, and the honest, in his mines of gold or gems, ‘ and in other similar works for amassing wealth; but the ‘ pusillanimous, in the recesses of his palace.

63 ‘ Let him likewise appoint an ambassador versed in ‘ all the Sástras, who understands hints, external signs, and ‘ actions, whose hand and heart are pure, whose abilities ‘ are great, and whose birth was illustrious:

64 ‘ That royal ambassador is applauded most, who is ‘ generally beloved, pure within and without, dextrous in ‘ business, and endued with an excellent memory; who ‘ knows countries and times, is handsome, intrepid, and elo‘ quent.

65 ‘ The forces of the realm must be immediately re‘ gulated by the commander in chief; the actual infliction ‘ of punishment, by the officers of criminal justice; the ‘ treasury and the country, by the king himself; peace and ‘ war, by the ambassador;

66 ‘ For it is the ambassador alone, who unites, who ‘ alone disjoins the united; that is, he transacts the business,
‘ by which kingdoms are at variance or in amity.

67 ‘ In the transaction of affairs let the ambassador com‘ prehend the visible signs and hints, and discover the acts, ‘ of the foreign king, by the signs, hints, and acts of his ‘ confidential servants, and the measures, which that king ‘ wishes to take, by the character and conduct of his ministers.

68 ‘ Thus, having learned completely from his ambassa- ‘ dor all the designs of the foreign prince, let the king so ‘ apply his vigilant care, that he bring no evil on himself.

69 ‘ LET him fix his abode in a district containing open ‘ champaigns; abounding with grain; inhabited chiefly by ‘ the virtuous; not infected with maladies; beautiful to the ‘ sight; surrounded by submissive mountaineers, foresters, or ‘ other neighbours; a country, in which the subjects may ‘ live at ease.

70 ‘ There let him reside in a capital, having, by way ‘ of a fortrefs, a desert rather more than twenty miles round it,
 ‘ or a fortrefs of earth, a fortrefs of water, or of trees, a ‘ fortrefs of armed men, or a fortrefs of mountains.

71 ‘ With all possible care let him secure a fortrefs of ‘ mountains; for, among those just mentioned, a fortrefs of ‘ mountains has many transcendent properties.

72 ‘ In the three first of them live wild beasts, vermine, ‘ and aquatick animals; in the three last, apes, men, and ‘ gods, in order as they are named :

73 ‘ As enemies hurt them not in the shelter of their ‘ feveral abodes, thus foes hurt not a king, who has taken ‘ refuge in his durga, or place of difficult access.

74 ‘ One bowman, placed on a wall, is a match in war
 ‘ for a hundred enemies; and a hundred, for ten thousand ; ‘ therefore is a fort recommended.

75 ‘ Let that fort be supplied with weapons, with money, ‘ with grain, with beasts, with Bráhmens, with artificers, with ‘ engines, with grass, and with water.

76 ‘ In the centre of it let him raise his own palace, ‘ well finished in all its parts, completely defended, habi‘ table in every season, brilliant with white stucco, surrounded ‘ with water and trees :

77 ‘ Having prepared it for his mansion, let him chuse a ‘ confort of the same class with himself, endued with all the ‘ bodily marks of excellence, born of an exalted race, capti‘ vating his heart, adorned with beauty and the best qua‘ lities.

78 ‘ He must appoint also a domestick priest, and re‘ tain a performer of sacrifices, who may solemnize the re-

• religious rites of his family, and those performed with three
 • sacred fires.

79 ‘ Let the king make sacrifices, accompanied with • gifts of many different kinds; and, for the full discharge of
 • his duty, let him give the Bráhmens both legal enjoyments
 • and moderate wealth.

80 ‘ His annual revenue he may receive from his whole
 • dominion through his collectors; but let him in this world
 • observe the divine ordinances; let him act as a father to
 • his people.

81 ‘ Here and there he must appoint many sorts of in• telligent supervisors, who may inspect all the acts of the • officers engaged in his business.

82 ‘ To Bráhmens returned from the mansions of their • preceptors, let him show due respect; for that is called a • precious unperishable gem, deposited by kings with the • sacerdotal class:

83 ‘ It is a gem, which neither thieves or foes take a-
 • way; which never perishes: kings must, therefore, deposit
 • with Bráhmens that indestructible jewel of respectful presents.

84 ‘ An oblation in the mouth, or hand, of a Bráhmen,
 • is far better than offerings to holy fire: it never drops; it
 • never dries; it is never consumed.

85 ‘ A gift to one not a Bráhmen produces fruit of a
 • middle standard; to one, who calls himself a Bráhmen,
 • double; to a well read Bráhmen, a hundred thousand fold;
 • to one, who has read all the Védas, infinite.

86 ‘ Of a gift, made with faith in the Sástra, to a per• son highly deserving it, the giver shall indubitably gain the • fruit after death, be the present small or great.

87 ‘ A KING, while he protects his people, being defeated by an enemy of equal, greater, or less force, must by no means turn his face from battle, but must remember the duty of his military class :

88 ‘ Never to recede from combat, to protect the people, and to honour the priests, is the highest duty of kings and ensures their felicity.

89 ‘ Those rulers of the earth, who, desirous of defeating each other, exert their utmost strength in battle, without ever averting their faces, ascend after death directly to heaven.

90 ‘ LET no man, engaged in combat, smite his foe with sharp weapons concealed in wood, nor with arrows mischievously barbed, nor with poisoned arrows, nor with darts blazing with fire ;

91 ‘ Nor let him, in a car or on horseback, strike his enemy alighted on the ground ; nor an effeminate man ; nor one, who flies for life with closed palms ; nor one, whose hair is loose and obstructs his sight ; nor one, who sits down fatigued ; nor one, who says, “ I am thy captive ; ”

92 ‘ Nor one, who sleeps ; nor one, who has lost his coat of mail ; nor one, who is naked ; nor one, who is disarmed ; nor one, who is a spectator, but not a combatant ; nor one, who is fighting with another man :

93 ‘ Calling to mind the duty of honourable men, let him never slay one, who has broken his weapon ; nor one, who is afflicted with private sorrow ; nor one, who has been grievously wounded ; nor one, who is terrified ; nor one, who turns his back.

94 ‘ The foldier, indeed, who, fearing and turning his ‘ back, happens to be flain by his foes in an engagement, ‘ fhall take upon himfelf all the fin of his commander, what‘ ever it be ;

95 ‘ And the commander fhall take to himfelf the fruit
 ‘ of all the good conduct, which the foldier, who turns his ‘ back and is killed, had previously ftored up for a future ‘ life.

96 ‘ CARS, horfes, elephants, umbrellas, habiliments, ex- ‘ cept the jewels which may adorn them, grain, cattle, women, ‘ all forts of liquids and metals, except gold and filver, are ‘ the lawful prizes of the man, who takes them in war ;

97. ‘ But of thofe prizes the captors muft lay the moft ‘ valuable before the king: fuch is the rule in the Véda con‘ cerning them ; and the king fhould diftribute among the ‘ whole army what has not been feparately taken.

98 ‘ Thus has been declared the blamelefs primeval ‘ law for military men: from this law a king muft never ‘ depart, when he attacks his foes in battle.

99 ‘ What he has not gained from his foe, let him ftrove
 ‘ to gain ; what he has acquired, let him preferve with care ;
 ‘ what he preferves, let him augment ; and what he has aug‘ mented, let him beftow on the deferving.

100 ‘ This is the fourfold rule, which he muft confider ‘ as the fure means of attaining the great object of man, hap- ‘ pinefs ; and let him praétife it fully without intermiffion, ‘ without indolence :

101 ‘ What he has not gained, let him ftrove to gain by ‘ military ftrength ; what he has acquired, let him preferve
 ‘ by careful infpection ; what he has preferved, let him

‘ augment by legal modes of increase; and what he has ‘ augmented, let him dispense with just liberality.

102 ‘ Let his troops be constantly exercised; his prow‘ ells, constantly displayed; what he ought to secure, con‘ stantly secured; and the weakness of his foe, constantly ‘ investigated.

103 ‘ By a king, whose forces are always ready for ac‘ tion, the whole world may be kept in awe; let him ‘ then, by a force always ready, make all creatures living ‘ his own.

104 ‘ Let him act on all occasions without guile, and ‘ never with insincerity; but, keeping himself ever on his ‘ guard, let him discover the fraud intended by his foe.

105 ‘ Let not his enemy discern his vulnerable part,
‘ but the vulnerable part of his enemy let him well discern:
‘ like a tortoise, let him draw in his members under the shell
‘ of concealment, and diligently let him repair any breach,
‘ that may be made in it.

106 ‘ Like a heron, let him muse on gaining advan‘ tages; like a lion, let him put forth his strength; like a ‘ wolf, let him creep toward his prey; like a hare, let him ‘ double to secure his retreat.

107 ‘ When he thus has prepared himself for conquest, ‘ let him reduce all opposers to submission by negotiation ‘ and three other expedients, namely, presents, division, and ‘ force of arms:

108 ‘ If they cannot be restrained by the three first me‘ thods, then let him, firmly but gradually, bring them to ‘ subjection by military force.

109 ‘ Among those four modes of obtaining success, the wise prefer negotiation and war for the exaltation of kingdoms.

110 ‘ As a husbandman plucks up weeds and preserves his corn, thus let a king destroy his opponents and secure his people.

111 ‘ That king, who, through weakness of intellect, rashly oppresses his people, will, together with his family, be deprived both of kingdom and life :

112 ‘ As, by the loss of bodily sustenance, the lives of animated beings are destroyed, thus, by the distress of kingdoms, are destroyed even the lives of kings.

113 ‘ For the sake of protecting his dominions, let the king perpetually observe the following rules ; for, by protecting his dominions, he will increase his own happiness.

114 ‘ Let him place, as the protectors of his realm, a company of guards, commanded by an approved officer, over two, three, five, or a hundred districts, according to their extent.

115 ‘ Let him appoint a lord of one town with its district, a lord of ten towns, a lord of twenty, a lord of a hundred, and a lord of a thousand.

116 ‘ Let the lord of one town certify of his own accord to the lord of ten towns any robberies, tumults, or other evils, which arise in his district, and which he cannot suppress; and the lord of ten, to the lord of twenty :

117 ‘ Then let the lord of twenty towns notify them to the lord of a hundred ; and let the lord of a hundred transmit the information himself to the lord of a thousand townships.

118 ‘ Such food, drink, wood, and other articles, as by ‘ law should be given each day to the king by the inhabitants of the township, let the lord of one town receive as his perquisite :

119 ‘ Let the lord of ten towns enjoy the produce of two ploughlands, or as much ground as can be tilled with two ploughs, each drawn by six bulls; the lord of twenty, that of five ploughlands; the lord of a hundred, that of a village or small town; the lord of a thousand, that of a large town.

120 ‘ The affairs of those townships, either jointly or separately transacted, let another minister of the king inspect; who should be well affected, and by no means remiss.

121 ‘ In every large town or city, let him appoint one superintendent of all affairs, elevated in rank, formidable in power, distinguished as a planet among stars :

122 ‘ Let that governor from time to time survey all the rest in person, and, by means of his emissaries, let him perfectly know their conduct in their several districts.

123 ‘ Since the servants of the king, whom he has appointed guardians of districts, are generally knaves, who seize what belongs to other men, from such knaves let him defend his people :

124 ‘ Of such evilminded servants, as wring wealth from subjects attending them on business, let the king confiscate all the possessions, and banish them from his realm.

125 ‘ For women, employed in the service of the king, and for his whole set of menial servants, let him daily provide a maintenance, in proportion to their station and to their work :

126 ‘ One pana of copper must be given each day as ‘ wages to the lowest servant, with two cloths for apparel every half year, and a dróna of grain every month ; to the highest must be given wages in the ratio of six to one.

127 ‘ HAVING ascertained the rates of purchase and sale, the length of the way, the expenses of food and of condiments, the charges of securing the goods carried, and the neat profits of trade, let the king oblige traders to pay taxes on their saleable commodities :

128 ‘ After full consideration, let a king so levy those taxes continually in his dominions, that both he and the merchant may receive a just compensation for their several acts.

129 ‘ As the leech, the suckling calf, and the bee, take their natural food by little and little, thus must a king draw from his dominions an annual revenue.

130 ‘ Of cattle, of gems, of gold and silver, added each year to the capital stock, a fiftieth part may be taken by the king ; of grain, an eighth part, a sixth, or a twelfth, according to the difference of the soil, and the labour necessary to cultivate it.

131 ‘ He may also take a sixth part of the clear annual increase of trees, fleshmeat, honey, clarified butter, perfumes, medical substances, liquids, flowers, roots, and fruit,

132 ‘ Of gathered leaves, potherbs, grafs, utensils made with leather or cane, earthen pots, and all things made of stone.

133 ‘ A king, even though dying with want, must not receive any tax from a Bráhmén learned in the Védas, nor suffer such a Bráhmén, residing in his territories, to be afflicted with hunger :

134 ‘ Of that king, in whose dominion a learned Bráhmén is afflicted with hunger, the whole kingdom will in a short time be afflicted with famine.

135 ‘ The king, having ascertained his knowledge of scripture and good morals, must allot him a suitable maintenance, and protect him on all sides, as a father protects his own son:

136 ‘ By that religious duty, which such a Bráhmén performs each day, under the full protection of the sovereign, the life, wealth, and dominions of his protector shall be greatly increased.

137 ‘ Let the king order a mere trifle to be paid, in the name of the annual tax, by the meaner inhabitants of his realm, who subsist by petty traffick :

138 ‘ By low handicraftsmen, artificers, and servile men, who support themselves by labour, the king may cause work to be done for a day in each month.

139 ‘ Let him not cut up his own root by taking no revenue, nor the root of other men by excess of covetousness; for, by cutting up his own root and theirs, he makes both himself and them wretched.

140 ‘ Let him, considering the diversity of cases, be occasionally sharp and occasionally mild, since a king, duly sharp and mild, becomes universally approved.

141 ‘ When tired of overlooking the affairs of men, let him assign the station of such an inspector to a principal minister, who well knows his duty, who is eminently learned, whose passions are subdued, and whose birth is exalted.

142 ‘ Thus must he protect his people, discharging, with great exertion and without languor, all those duties, which the law requires him to perform.

143 ‘ That monarch, whose subjects are carried from his kingdom by ruffians, while they call aloud for protection, and he barely looks on them with his ministers, is a dead, and not a living, king.

144 ‘ The highest duty of a military man is the defence of his people, and the king, who receives the consideration just mentioned, is bound to discharge that duty.

145 ‘ HAVING risen in the last watch of the night, his body being pure, and his mind attentive, having made oblations to fire, and shown due respect to the priests, let him enter his hall decently splendid :

146 ‘ Standing there, let him gratify his subjects, before he dismisses them, with kind looks and words ; and, having dismissed them all, let him take secret council with his principal ministers :

147 ‘ Ascending up the back of a mountain, or going privately to a terrace, a bower, a forest, or a lonely place, without listeners, let him consult with them unobserved.

148 ‘ That prince, of whose weighty secrets all assemblies of men are ignorant, shall attain dominion over the whole earth, though at first he possesses no treasure.

149 ‘ At the time of consultation, let him remove the stupid, the dumb, the blind, and the deaf, talking birds, decrepit old men, women, and infidels, the diseased and the maimed ;

150 ‘ Since those, who are disgraced in this life by reason of sins formerly committed, are apt to betray secret council ;

‘ so are talking birds; and so above all are women: them he ‘ must, for that reason, diligently remove.

151 ‘ At noon or at midnight, when his fatigues have ‘ ceased, and his cares are dispersed, let him deliberate, ‘ with those ministers or alone, on virtue, lawful pleasure,
‘ and wealth;

152 ‘ On the means of reconciling the acquisition of ‘ them, when they oppose each other; on bestowing his ‘ daughters in marriage, and on preserving his sons from ‘ evil by the best education;

153 ‘ On sending ambassadors and messengers; on the ‘ probable events of his measures; on the behaviour of his ‘ women in the private apartments; and on the acts even ‘ of his own emissaries.

154 ‘ On the whole eightfold business of kings, re- ‘ lating to the revenue, to their expenses, to the good or bad conduct ‘ of their ministers, to legislation in dubious cases, to civil and ‘ criminal justice, and to expiations for crimes, let him reflect ‘ with the greatest attention; on his five sorts of spies, or ‘ active and artful youths, degraded anchorets, distressed husband- ‘ men, decayed merchants, and fictitious penitents, whom he must ‘ pay and see privately; on the good will or enmity of his ‘ neighbours, and on the state of the circumjacent countries.

155 ‘ On the conduct of that foreign prince, who has ‘ moderate strength equal to one ordinary foe, but no match for ‘ two; on the designs of him, who is willing and able to be ‘ a conqueror; on the condition of him, who is pacifick, ‘ but a match even for the former unallied; and on that of ‘ his natural enemy, let him sedulously meditate:

156 ‘ Those four powers, who, in one word, are the root

‘ or principal strength, of the countries round him, added to ‘ eight others, who are called the branches, and are as many ‘ degrees of allies and opponents variously distinguished, are de‘ clared to be twelve chief objects of the royal consideration ;

157 ‘ And five other heads, namely, their ministers, ‘ their territories, their strong holds, their treasuries, and ‘ their armies, being applied to each of those twelve, there ‘ are in all, together with them, seventy-two foreign objects ‘ to be carefully investigated.

158 ‘ Let the king consider as hostile to him the pow‘ er immediately beyond him, and the favourer of that ‘ power; as amicable, the power next beyond his natural ‘ foe ; and as neutral, the powers beyond that circle :

159 ‘ All those powers let him render subservient to his ‘ interests by mild measures and the other three expedients ‘ before mentioned, either separate or united, but principal‘ ly by valour and policy in arms and negotiation.

160 ‘ Let him constantly deliberate on the six measures ‘ of a military prince, namely, waging war, and making peace
 ‘ or alliance, marching to battle, and sitting encamped, dis‘ tributing his forces, and seeking the protection of a more ‘ powerful monarch :

161 ‘ Having considered the posture of affairs, let him ‘ occasionally apply to it the measure of sitting inactive, or ‘ of marching to action, of peace, or of war, of dividing his ‘ force, or of seeking protection.

162 ‘ A king must know, that there are two sorts of al‘ liance and war ; two, of remaining encamped, and of march‘ ing ; two, likewise, of dividing his army, and of obtaining ‘ protection from another power.

163 ‘ The two forts of alliance, attended with present ‘ and future advantages, are held to be those, when he acts in ‘ conjunction with his ally, and when he acts apart from him.

164 ‘ War is declared to be of two forts; when it is ‘ waged for an injury to himself, and when it is waged for ‘ an injury to his ally, with a view to harass the enemy both ‘ in season and out of season.

165 ‘ Marching is of two forts, when destructive acts are ‘ done at his own pleasure by himself apart, or when his ally ‘ attends him.

166 ‘ The two forts of fitting encamped are, first, when ‘ he has been gradually weakened by the divine power, or ‘ by the operation of past sins, and, secondly, when, to favour ‘ his ally, he remains in his camp.

167 ‘ A detachment commanded by the king in person, ‘ and a detachment commanded by a general officer, for the ‘ purpose of carrying some important point, are declared by ‘ those, who well know the fix measures, to be the two modes ‘ of dividing his army.

168 ‘ The two modes of seeking protection, that his ‘ powerful support may be proclaimed in all countries, are,
 ‘ first, when he wishes to be secure from apprehended injury,
 ‘ and, next, when his enemies actually assail him.

169 ‘ When the king knows with certainty, that at some ‘ future time his force will be greatly augmented, and when,
 ‘ at the time present, he sustains little injury, let him then ‘ have recourse to peaceful measures;

170 ‘ But, when he sees all his subjects considerably ‘ firm in strength, and feels himself highly exalted in power, ‘ let him protect his dominions by war.

171 ‘ When he perfectly knows his own troops to be ‘ cheerful and well supplied, and those of his enemy quite ‘ the reverse, let him eagerly march against his foes;

172 ‘ But, when he finds himself weak in beasts of bur‘ den and in troops, let him then sit quiet in camp, using ‘ great attention, and pacifying his enemy by degrees.

173 ‘ When a king sees his foe stronger in all respects ‘ than himself, let him detach a part of his army, to keep the ‘ enemy amused, and secure his own safety in an inaccessible place;

174 ‘ But, when he is in all places assailable by the hos‘ tile troops, let him speedily seek the protection of a just ‘ and powerful monarch.

175 ‘ Him, who can keep in subjection both his own ‘ subjects and his foes, let him constantly sooth by all sorts ‘ of attentive respect, as he would honour his father, natural ‘ or spiritual:

176 ‘ But if, even in that situation, he find such protec‘ tion a cause of evil, let him alone, though weak, wage vi‘ gorous war without fear.

177 ‘ By all these expedients let a politick prince act ‘ with such wisdom, that neither allies, neutral powers, nor ‘ foes, may gain over him any great advantage.

178 ‘ Perfectly let him consider the state of his kingdom ‘ both actually present and probably future, with the good ‘ and bad parts of all his actions:

179 That king shall never be overcome by his enemies,
 ‘ who foresees the good and evil to ensue from his mea‘ sures; who, on present occasions, takes his resolution ‘ with prudent speed, and who weighs the various events of ‘ his past conduct.

180 ‘ Let him so arrange all his affairs, that no ally, ‘ neutral prince, or enemy may obtain any advantage over ‘ him: this, in few words, is the sum of political wisdom.

181 WHEN the king begins his march against the do‘ mains of his foe, let him gradually advance, in the fol‘ lowing manner, against the hostile metropolis.

182 ‘ Let him set out on his expedition in the fine ‘ month of Mārgaśīrsha, or about the month of Phālguna and ‘ Chaitra, according to the number of his forces, that he may ‘ find autumnal or vernal crops in the country invaded by him:

183 ‘ Even in other seasons, when he has a clear pro‘ spect of victory, and when any disaster has befallen his foe, ‘ let him advance with the greater part of his army.

184 ‘ Having made a due arrangement of affairs in his ‘ own dominions, and a disposition fit for his enterprize, ‘ having provided all things necessary for his continuance in ‘ the foreign realm, and having seen all his spies dispatch‘ ed with propriety,

185 ‘ Having secured the three sorts of ways, over water,
 ‘ on plains, and through forests, and placed his sixfold army, ‘ elephants, cavalry, cars, infantry, officers, and attendants, in ‘ complete military form, let him proceed by fit journies ‘ toward the metropolis of his enemy:

186 ‘ Let him be much on his guard against every se‘ cret friend in the service of the hostile prince, and against ‘ emissaries, who go and return; for in such friends he may ‘ find very dangerous foes.

187 ‘ On his march let him form his troops, either ‘ like a staff, or in an even column; like a wain, or in a wedge ‘ with the apex foremost; like a boar, or in a rhomb with the ‘ van and rear narrow and the centre broad; like a Macara or ‘ sea monster, that is, in a double triangle with apices joined; like ‘ a needle, or in a long line; or like the bird of VISHNU, ‘ that is, in a rhomboid with the wings far extended:

188 ‘ From whatever side he apprehends danger, to ‘ that side let him extend his troops; and let him always ‘ conceal himself in the midst of a squadron formed like ‘ a lotos flower.

189 Let him cause his generals and the chief comman‘ der under himself to act in all quarters; and from what‘ ever side he perceives a design of attacking him, to that ‘ side let him turn his front.

190 ‘ On all sides let him station troops of soldiers, in ‘ whom he confides, distinguished by known colours and other ‘ marks; who are excellent both in sustaining a charge
 ‘ and in charging, who are fearless and incapable of deser‘ tion.

191 ‘ Let him at his pleasure order a few men to en‘ gage in a close phalanx, or a large number of warriors in ‘ loose ranks; and, having formed them in a long line like ‘ a needle, or in three divisions like a thunderbolt, let him give ‘ orders for battle.

192 ‘ On a plain, let him fight with his armed cars
 ‘ and horses; on watery places, with manned boats ‘ and elephants; on ground full of trees and shrubs, with ‘ bows; on cleared ground, with swords and targets, and ‘ other weapons.

193 ‘ Men born in Curushétra, near Indraprestha, in ‘ Matsya, or Viráta, in Panchála or Cányacubja, and in Súr- ‘ aséna, in the district of Mat'hurá, let him cause to engage ‘ in the van; and men, born in other countries, who are tall ‘ and light.

194 ‘ Let him, when he has formed his troops in array, ‘ encourage them with short animated speeches; and then, let ‘ him try them completely: let him know likewise, how ‘ his men feverally exert themselves, while they charge the ‘ foe.

195 ‘ If he block up his enemy, let him sit encamped,
 ‘ and lay waste the hostile country; let him continually ‘ spoil the grass, water, and wood of the adverse prince.

196 ‘ Pools, wells, and trenches let him destroy: let him ‘ harass the foe by day, and alarm him by night.

197 ‘ Let him secretly bring over to his party all such ‘ leaders as he can safely bring over; let him be informed ‘ of all, that his enemies are doing; and, when a fortunate ‘ moment is offered by heaven, let him give battle, pushing ‘ on to conquest and abandoning fear:

198 ‘ Yet he should be more sedulous to reduce his ene‘ my by negotiation, by well applied gifts, and by creating ‘ divisions, using either all or some of those methods, than ‘ by hazarding at any time a decisive action,

199 ‘ Since victory or defeat are not surely foreseen on ‘ either side, when two armies engage in the field: let the ‘ king then, if other expedients prevail, avoid a pitched battle;

200 ‘ But, should there be no means of applying the ‘ three beforementioned expedients, let him, after due prepa‘ ration, fight so valiantly, that his enemy may be totally ‘ routed.

201 ‘ HAVING conquered a country, let him respect the ‘ deities adored in it, and their virtuous priests; let him

‘ also distribute largesses to the people, and cause a full exemption from terrour to be loudly proclaimed.

202 ‘ When he has perfectly ascertained the conduct and intentions of all the vanquished, let him fix in that country a prince of the royal race, and give him precise instructions.

203 ‘ Let him establish the laws of the conquered nation as declared in their books; and let him gratify the new prince with gems and other precious gifts.

204 ‘ The seizure of desirable property, though it cause hatred, and the donation of it, though it cause love, may be laudable or blameable on different occasions:

205 ‘ All this conduct of human affairs is considered as dependent on acts ascribed to the deity, and on acts ascribed to men; now the operations of the deity cannot be known by any intenseness of thought, but those of men may be clearly discovered.

206 ‘ Or the victor, considering an ally, territory, and wealth as the triple fruit of conquest, may form an alliance with the vanquished prince, and proceed in union with him, using diligent circumspection.

207 ‘ He should pay due attention to the prince, who supported his cause, and to any other prince in the circumjacent region, who checked that supporter, so that, both from a wellwisher and from an opponent, he may secure the fruit of his expedition.

208 ‘ By gaining wealth and territory a king acquires not so great an increase of strength, as by obtaining a firm ally, who, though weak, may hereafter be powerful.

209 ‘ That ally, though feeble, is highly estimable, who ‘ knows the whole extent of his duties, who gratefully re‘ members benefits, whose people are satisfied, or, who has a ‘ gentle nature, who loves his friend, and perseveres in his ‘ good resolutions.

210 ‘ Him have the sages declared an enemy hard to ‘ be subdued, who is eminently learned, of a noble race, ‘ personally brave, dextrous in management, liberal, grateful,
 ‘ and firm.

211 ‘ Goodnature, knowledge of mankind, valour, be-‘ nignity of heart, and incessant liberality, are the assem‘ blage of virtues, which adorn a neutral prince, whose amity ‘ must be courted.

212 ‘ Even a salubrious and fertile country, where cat‘ tle continually increase, let a king abandon without hesita‘ tion for the sake of preserving himself :

213 ‘ Against misfortune, let him preserve his wealth ;
 ‘ at the expense of his wealth, let him preserve his wife ;
 ‘ but let him at all events preserve himself even at the ha‘ zard of his wife and his riches.

214 ‘ A wise prince, who finds every sort of calamity ‘ rushing violently upon him, should have recourse to all ‘ just expedients, united or separate :

215 ‘ Let him consider the business to be expedited, the ‘ expedients collectively, and himself who must apply them ;
 ‘ and, taking refuge completely in those three, let him stren‘ uously labour for his own prosperity.

216 ‘ HAVING consulted with his ministers, in the man‘ ner before prescribed, on all this mass of publick affairs ; hav‘ ing used exercise becoming a warrior, and having bathed

‘ after it, let the king enter at noon his private apartments-‘ for the purpose of taking food.

217 ‘ There let him eat lawful aliment prepared by ‘ servants attached to his person, who know the difference ‘ of times and are incapable of perfidy, after it has been ‘ proved innocent by certain experiments, and hallowed by ‘ texts of the Véda repulsive of poison.

218 ‘ Together with all his food let him swallow such ‘ medical substances as resist venom; and let him constantly ‘ wear with attention such gems, as are known to repel it.

219 ‘ Let his females, well tried and attentive, their ‘ dress and ornaments having been examined, lest some wea- ‘ pon should be concealed in them, do him humble service with ‘ fans, water, and perfumes:

220 ‘ Thus let him take diligent care, when he goes ‘ out in a carriage or on horseback, when he lies down to rest,
‘ when he sits, when he takes food, when he bathes, anoints
‘ his body with odorous essences, and puts on all his habiliments.

221 ‘ After eating, let him divert himself with his wo‘ men in the recesses of his palace; and, having idled a rea‘ sonable time, let him again think of publick affairs:

222 ‘ When he has dressed himself completely, let him ‘ once more review his armed men, with all their elephants, ‘ horses, and cars, their accoutrements, and weapons.

223 ‘ At sunset, having performed his religious duty, ‘ let him privately, but well armed, in his interior apart‘ ment, hear what has been done by his reporters and emissa‘ ries:

224 ‘ Then, having dismissed those informers, and re‘ turning to another secret chamber, let him go, attended

‘ by women, to the inmost recesses of his mansion for the sake
‘ of his evening meal ;

225 ‘ There, having a second time eaten a little, and ‘ having been recreated with musical strains, let him take ‘ rest early, and rise refreshed from his labour.

226 ‘ This perfect system of rules let a king, free from ‘ illness, observe ; but, when really afflicted with disease, he ‘ may intrust all these affairs to his officers.’

CHAPTER THE EIGHTH:

ON JUDICATURE; AND ON LAW, PRIVATE AND CRIMINAL.

1 ‘ A KING, desirous of inspecting judicial proceedings, must enter his court of justice, composed and sedate in his demeanour, together with Bráhmens and counsellors, who know how to give him advice :

2 ‘ There, either sitting or standing, holding forth his right arm, without ostentation in his dress and ornaments, let him examine the affairs of litigant parties.

3 ‘ Each day let him decide causes, one after another, under the eighteen principal titles of law, by arguments and rules drawn from local usages, and from written codes :

4 ‘ Of those titles, the first is debt, on loans for consumption ; the second, deposits, and loans for use ; the third, sale without ownership ; the fourth, concerns among partners ; the fifth, subtraction of what has been given ;

5 ‘ The sixth, nonpayment of wages or hire ; the seventh, nonperformance of agreements ; the eighth, rescission of sale and purchase ; the ninth, disputes between master and servant ;

6 ‘ The tenth, contests on boundaries; the eleventh and twelfth, assault and slander; the thirteenth, larciny; the fourteenth, robbery and other violence; the fifteenth, adultery;

7 ‘ The sixteenth, altercation between man and wife, and their several duties; the seventeenth, the law of inheritance; the eighteenth, gaming with dice and with living creatures: these eighteen titles of law are settled as the groundwork of all judicial procedure in this world.

8 ‘ Among men, who contend for the most part on the titles just mentioned, and on a few miscellaneous heads not comprised under them, let the king decide causes justly, observing primeval law;

9 ‘ But, when he cannot inspect such affairs in person, let him appoint, for the inspection of them, a Bráhmén of eminent learning:

10 ‘ Let that chief judge, accompanied by three assessors, fully consider all causes brought before the king, and, having entered the courtroom, let him sit or stand, but not move backwards and forwards.

11 ‘ In whatever country three Bráhméns, particularly skilled in the three several Védas, sit together with the very learned Bráhmén appointed by the king, the wise call that assembly the court of BRAHMA with four faces.

12 ‘ WHEN justice, having been wounded by iniquity, approaches the court, and the judges extract not the dart, they also shall be wounded by it.

13 ‘ Either the court must not be entered by judges, parties, and witnesses, or law and truth must be openly declared: that man is criminal, who either says nothing, or says what is false or unjust.

14 ' Where justice is destroyed by iniquity, and truth
' by false evidence, the judges, who basely look on without
' giving redress, shall also be destroyed.

15 ' Justice, being destroyed, will destroy; being pre-
' served, will preserve: it must never, therefore, be violat-
' ed. "Beware, O judge, lest justice, being overturned, over-
' turn both us and thyself."

16 ' The divine form of justice is represented as Vrishā,
' or a bull, and the gods consider him, who violates jus-
' tice, as a Vrishala, or one who slays a bull: let the king,
' therefore, and his judges beware of violating justice.

17 ' The only firm friend, who follows men even after ' death, is justice: all others are extinct with the body.

18 ' Of injustice in decisions, one quarter falls on the ' party in the cause; one quarter, on his witnesses; one
' quarter, on all the judges; and one quarter on the king;

19 ' But where he, who deserves condemnation, shall
' be condemned, the king is guiltless, and the judges free
' from blame: an evil deed shall recoil on him, who com-
' mitted it.

20 ' A Bráhmén supported only by his class, and one
' barely reputed a Bráhmén, but without performing any
' sacerdotal acts, may, at the king's pleasure, interpret the ' law to him: so may the two middle classes; but a Súdra, in
' no case whatever.

21 ' Of that king, who stupidly looks on, while a
' Súdra decides causes, the kingdom itself shall be embar-
' rassed, like a cow in deep mire.

22 ' The whole territory, which is inhabited by a ' number of Súdras, overwhelmed with atheists, and de-

‘ prived of Bráhmens, must speedily perish afflicted with ‘ dearth and disease.

23 ‘ LET the king or his judge, having seated himself on ‘ the bench, his body properly clothed and his mind atten‘ tively fixed, begin with doing reverence to the deities, ‘ who guard the world; and then let him enter on the trial ‘ of causes:

24 ‘ Understanding what is expedient or inexpedient,
 ‘ but considering only what is law or not law, let him ex‘ amine all disputes between parties, in the order of their ‘ several classes.

25 ‘ By external signs let him see through the thoughts
 ‘ of men; by their voice, colour, countenance, limbs, ‘ eyes, and action :

26 ‘ From the limbs, the look, the motion of the ‘ body, the gesticulation, the speech, the changes of the ‘ eye and the face, are discovered the internal workings of ‘ the mind.

27 ‘ THE property of a student and of an infant, whe‘ ther by descent or otherwise, let the king hold in his cus‘ tody, until the owner shall have ended his studentship, or ‘ until his infancy shall have ceased in his sixteenth year:

28 ‘ Equal care must be taken of barren women, of ‘ women without sons, whose husband have married other wives, ‘ of women without kindred, or whose husbands are in dis‘ tant places, of widows true to their lords, and of women ‘ afflicted with illness.

29 ‘ Such kinsmen, as, by any pretence, appropriate the ‘ fortunes of women during their lives, a just king must ‘ punish with the severity due to thieves.

30 ‘ Three years let the king detain the property, of ‘ which no owner appears, after a distinct proclamation: the ‘ owner, appearing within the three years, may take it; but, ‘ after that term, the king may confiscate it.

31 ‘ He, who says “This is mine,” must be duly exa‘ mined; and if, before he inspect it, he declare its form, ‘ number, and other circumstances, the owner must have his ‘ property;

32 ‘ But, if he show not at what place and time it was ‘ lost, and specify not its colour, shape, and dimensions, he ‘ ought to be amerced:

33 ‘ The king may take a sixth part of the property ‘ so detained by him, or a tenth, or a twelfth, remembering ‘ the duty of good kings.

34 ‘ Property lost by one man, and found by another, let ‘ the king secure, by committing it to the care of trustwor‘ thy men; and those, whom he shall convict of stealing it, ‘ let him cause to be trampled on by an elephant.

35 ‘ From the man, who shall say with truth, “This ‘ property, which has been kept, belongs to me,” the king ‘ may take a sixth or twelfth part, for having secured it;

36 ‘ But he, who shall say so falsely, may be fined either ‘ an eighth part of his own property, or else in some small ‘ proportion to the value of the goods falsely claimed, a just ‘ calculation having been made.

37 ‘ A learned Bráhmén, having found a treasure for‘ merly hidden, may take it without any deduction; since he ‘ is the lord of all;

38 ‘ But of a treasure anciently repositied under ground, ‘ which any other subject or the king has discovered, the king

may lay up half in his treasury, having given half to the Bráhmens.

39 ‘ Of old hoards, and precious minerals in the earth, the king is entitled to half by reason of his general protection, and because he is the lord paramount of the soil.

40 ‘ To men of all classes, the king must restore their property, which robbers have seized; since a king, who takes it for himself, incurs the guilt of a robber.

41 ‘ A king, who knows the revealed law, must inquire into the particular laws of classes, the laws or usages of districts, the customs of traders, and the rules of certain families, and establish their peculiar laws, if they be not repugnant to the law of GOD;

42 ‘ Since all men, who mind their own customary ways of proceeding, and are fixed in the discharge of their several duties, become united by affection with the people at large, even though they dwell far asunder.

43 ‘ Neither the king himself nor his officers must ever promote litigation; nor ever neglect a lawsuit instituted by others.

44 ‘ As a hunter traces the lair of a wounded beast by the drops of blood; thus let a king investigate the true point of justice by deliberate arguments:

45 ‘ Let him fully consider the nature of truth, the state of the case, and his own person; and, next, the witnesses, the place, the mode, and the time; firmly adhering to all the rules of practice:

46 ‘ What has been practised by good men and by virtuous Bráhmens, if it be not inconsistent with the legal cus‘ toms of provinces or districts, of classes and families, let ‘ him establish.

47 ‘ WHEN a creditor sues before him for the reco‘ very of his right from a debtor, let him cause the debtor ‘ to pay what the creditor shall prove due.

48 ‘ By whatever lawful means a creditor may have ‘ gotten possession of his own property, let the king ratify ‘ such payment by the debtor, though obtained even by ‘ compulsory means:

49 ‘ By the mediation of friends, by suit in court, by ‘ artful management, or by distress, a creditor may recover
‘ the property lent; and, fifthly, by legal force.

50 ‘ That creditor, who recovers his right from his deb‘ tor, must not be rebuked by the king for retaking his own ‘ property.

51 ‘ In a suit for a debt, which the defendant denies, ‘ let him award payment to the creditor of what, by good ‘ evidence, he shall prove due, and exact a small fine, ‘ according to the circumstances of the debtor.

52 ‘ On the denial of a debt, which the defendant has ‘ in court been required to pay, the plaintiff must call a ‘ witness, who was present at the place of the loan, or pro‘ duce other evidence, as a note and the like.

53 ‘ The plaintiff, who calls a witness not present ‘ at the place, where the contract was made, or, having ‘ knowingly called him, disclaims him as his witness; or who ‘ perceives not, that he asserts confused and contradictory ‘ facts;

54 ‘ Or who, having stated what he designs to prove,
‘ varies afterwards from his case; or who, being questioned

‘ on a fact, which he had before admitted, refuses to ‘ acknowledge that very fact;

55 ‘ Or who has conversed with the witnesses in a place ‘ unfit for such conversation; or who declines answering a ‘ question properly put; or who departs from the court;

56 ‘ Or who, being ordered to speak, stands mute; or ‘ who proves not what he has alledged, or who knows not ‘ what is capable or incapable of proof; such a plaintiff shall ‘ fail in that suit.

57 ‘ Him, who has said, “I have witnesses,” and, being ‘ told to produce them, produces them not, the judge must ‘ on this account declare nonsuited.

58 ‘ If the plaintiff delay to put in his plaint, he may, ‘ according to the nature of the case, be corporally punish‘ ed or justly amerced; and, if the defendant plead not with‘ in three fortnights, he is by law condemned.

59 ‘ In the double of that sum, which the defendant ‘ falsely denies, or on which the complainant falsely de‘ clares, shall those two men, wilfully offending against jus‘ tice, be fined by the king.

60 ‘ When a man has been brought into court by a sui‘ tor for property, and, being called on to answer, denies the ‘ debt, the cause should be decided by the Bráhmén, who re‘ presents the king, having heard three witnesses at least.

61 ‘ WHAT sort of witnesses must be produced by credi‘ tors and others on the trial of causes, I will comprehensive‘ ly declare; and in what manner those witnesses must give ‘ true evidence.

62 ‘ Married housekeepers, men with male issue, inha‘ bitants of the same district, either of the military, the com‘ mercial, or the servile class, are competent, when called by ‘ the party, to give their evidence; not any persons indis‘ criminate, except in such cases of urgency as will soon be ‘ mentioned.

63 ‘ Just and sensible men of all the four classes may be ‘ witnesses on trials; men, who know their whole duty, and ‘ are free from covetousness: but men of an opposite cha‘ racter the judge must reject.

64 ‘ Those must not be admitted, who have a pecuni‘ ary interest; nor familiar friends; nor menial servants;
 ‘ nor enemies; nor men formerly perjured; nor persons ‘ grievously diseased; nor those, who have committed hei‘ nous offences.

65 ‘ The king cannot be made a witness; nor cooks,
 ‘ and the like mean artificers; nor publick dancers and ‘ singers; nor a priest of deep learning in scripture; nor ‘ a student in theology; nor an anchorit secluded from ‘ all worldly connexions;

66 ‘ Nor one wholly dependent; nor one of bad fame; ‘ nor one, who follows a cruel occupation; nor one, who ‘ acts openly against law; nor a decrepit old man; nor a ‘ child; nor one man only, unless he be distinguished for vir- ‘ tue; nor a wretch of the lowest mixed class; nor one, ‘ who has lost the organs of sense;

67 ‘ Nor one extremely grieved; nor one intoxicated;
 ‘ nor a madman; nor one tormented with hunger or thirst; ‘ nor one oppressed by fatigue; nor one excited by lust; nor ‘ one inflamed by wrath; nor one who has been convicted ‘ of theft.

68 ‘ Women should regularly be witnesses for women;

‘ twiceborn men, for men alike twiceborn; good servants ‘ and mechanicks, for servants and mechanicks; and those ‘ of the lowest race, for those of the lowest;

69 ‘ But any person whatever, who has positive know‘ ledge of transactions in the private apartments of a house, ‘ or in a forest, or at a time of death, may give evidence ‘ between the parties:

70 ‘ On failure of witnesses duly qualified, evidence may ‘ in such cases be given by a woman, by a child, or by an ‘ aged man, by a pupil, by a kinsman, by a slave, or by a ‘ hired servant;

71 ‘ Yet of children, of old men, and of the diseased, ‘ who are all apt to speak untruly, the judge must consider ‘ the testimony as weak; and, much more, that of men with ‘ disordered minds:

72 ‘ In all cases of violence, of theft and adultery, of ‘ defamation and assault, he must not examine too strictly ‘ the competence of witnesses.

73 ‘ If there be contradictory evidence, let the king ‘ decide by the plurality of credible witnesses; if equality ‘ in number, by superiority in virtue; if parity in virtue, ‘ by the testimony of such twiceborn men, as have best ‘ performed publick duties.

74 ‘ Evidence of what has been seen, or of what has ‘ been heard, as slander and the like, given by those who saw or ‘ or heard it, is admissible; and a witness, who speaks truth ‘ in those cases, neither deviates from virtue nor loses his ‘ wealth:

75 ‘ But a witness, who knowingly says any thing, ‘ before an assembly of good men, different from what he ‘ had seen or heard, shall fall headlong, after death, into ‘ a region of horror, and be debarred from heaven.

76 ‘ When a man sees or hears any thing, without ‘ being then called upon to attest it, yet, if he be afterwards
 ‘ examined as a witness, he must declare it, exactly as it ‘ was seen, and as it was heard.

77 ‘ One man, untainted with covetousness and other ‘ vices may in some cases be the sole witness, and will have ‘ more weight than many women, because female understand‘ ings are apt to waver; or than many other men, who ‘ have been tarnished with crimes.

78 ‘ What witnesses declare naturally, or without bias, ‘ must be received on trials; but what they improperly say, ‘ from some unnatural bent, is inapplicable to the purposes of ‘ justice.

79 ‘ THE witnesses being assembled in the middle of ‘ the courtroom, in the presence of the plaintiff and the ‘ defendant, let the judge examine them, after having ad‘ dressed them all together in the following manner:

80 “ What ye know to have been transacted in the “ matter before us, between the parties reciprocally, declare “ at large and with truth; for your evidence in this cause “ is required.”

81 ‘ A witness, who gives testimony with truth, shall at‘ tain exalted seats of beatitude above, and the highest fame ‘ here below: such testimony is revered by BRAHMA him‘ self.

82 ‘ The witness, who speaks falsely, shall be fast bound ‘ under water in the snaky cords of VARUNA, and be whol‘ ly deprived of power to escape torment during a hundred

‘ transmigrations : let mankind, therefore, give no false testi‘ mony.

83 ‘ By truth is a witness cleared from sin ; by truth is ‘ justice advanced : truth must, therefore, be spoken by wit‘ nesses of every class.

84 ‘ The soul itself is its own witness ; the soul itself ‘ is its own refuge : offend not thy conscious soul, the su‘ preme internal witness of men !

85 ‘ The sinful have said in their hearts : “ None sees “ us.” Yes ; the gods distinctly see them ; and so does the ‘ spirit within their breasts.

86 ‘ The guardian deities of the firmament, of the earth, ‘ of the waters, of the human heart, of the moon, of the ‘ sun, and of fire, of punishment after death, of the winds, ‘ of night, of both twilights, and of justice, perfectly know
 ‘ the state of all spirits clothed with bodies.

87 ‘ In the forenoon let the judge, being purified, se‘ verally call on the twiceborn, being purified also, to declare
 ‘ the truth, in the presence of some image a symbol of the divi‘ nity, and of Bráhmens, while the witnesses turn their faces ‘ either to the north or to the east.

88 ‘ To a Bráhmen he must begin with saying, “ De‘ clare ;” to a Cshatriya, with saying “ Declare the truth ;”
 ‘ to a Vaisya, with comparing perjury to the crime of stealing ‘ kine, grain, or gold ; to a Súdra, with comparing it, in some ‘ or all of the following sentences, to every crime, that men can ‘ commit.

89 “ WHATEVER places of torture have been prepared “ for the slayer of a priest, for the murderer of a woman “ or of a child, for the injurer of a friend, and for an ungrate“ ful man, those places are ordained for a witness, who gives “ false evidence.

90 “ The fruit of every virtuous act, which thou hast “ done, O good man, since thy birth, shall depart from thee
 “ to dogs, if thou deviate in speech from the truth.

91 “ O friend to virtue, that supreme spirit, which thou “ believest one and the same with thyself, resides in thy bo“ som perpetually, and is an allknowing inspector of thy “ goodness or of thy wickedness.

92 “ If thou beest not at variance, by speaking falsely, “ with YAMA, or the subduer of all, with VAIVASWATA, or “ the punisher, with that great divinity, who dwells in thy “ breast, go not on a pilgrimage to the river Gangà, nor to the “ plains of CURU, for thou hast no need of expiation.

93 “ Naked and shorn, tormented with hunger and “ thirst, and deprived of sight, shall the man, who gives “ false evidence, go with a potsherd to beg food at the “ door of his enemy.

94 “ Headlong, in utter darkness, shall the impious “ wretch tumble into hell, who, being interrogated in a ju“ dicial inquiry, answers one question falsely.

95 “ He, who in a court of justice gives an imperfect “ account of any transaction, or asserts a fact of which he “ was no eyewitness, shall receive pain instead of pleasure, “ and resemble a man, who eats fish with eagerness and swal“ lows the sharp bones.

96 “ The gods are acquainted with no better mortal in “ this world, than the man, of whom the intelligent spirit, “ which pervades his body, has no distrust, when he pre“ pares to give evidence.

97 “Hear, honest man, from a just enumeration in order, how many kinsmen, in evidence of different forts, a false witness kills, or incurs the guilt of killing:

98 “He kills five by false testimony concerning cattle in general; he kills ten by false testimony concerning kine; he kills a hundred by false evidence concerning horses, and a thousand by false evidence concerning the human race:

99 “By speaking falsely in a cause concerning gold, he kills the born and the unborn; by speaking falsely concerning land, he kills every thing animated: beware then of speaking falsely in a cause concerning land!

100 “The sages have held false evidence concerning water, and the possession or enjoyment of women, equal to false evidence concerning land; and it is equally criminal in causes concerning pearls and other precious things formed in water, and concerning all things made of stone.

101 “Marking well all the murders, which are comprehended in the crime of perjury, declare thou the whole truth with precision, as it was heard, and as it was seen by thee.”

102 ‘Bráhmens, who tend herds of cattle, who trade, who practise mechanical arts, who profess dancing and singing, who are hired servants or usurers, let the judge exhort and examine as if they were Súdras.

103 ‘In some cases, a giver of false evidence from a pious motive, even though he know the truth, shall not lose a seat in heaven: such evidence wise men call the speech of the gods.

104 ‘ Whenever the death of a man, who had not been a ‘ grievous offender, either of the fervile, the commercial, the ‘ military, or the sacerdotal, class, would be occasioned by ‘ true evidence, from the known rigour of the king, even though ‘ the fault arose from inadvertence or error, falsehood may be ‘ spoken: it is even preferable to truth.

105 ‘ Such witnesses must offer, as oblations to SARAS-‘ WATĪ, cakes of rice and milk addressed to the goddess
 ‘ of speech; and thus will they fully expiate that venial sin
 ‘ of benevolent falsehood:

106 ‘ Or such a witness may pour clarified butter into ‘ the holy fire, according to the sacred rule, hallowing it ‘ with the texts called cúshmandá, or with those which re‘ late to VARUNA, beginning with ud; or with the three texts ‘ appropriated to the water-gods.

107 ‘ A MAN, who labours not under illness, yet comes ‘ not to give evidence in cases of loans and the like, within ‘ three fortnights after due summons, shall take upon him‘ self the whole debt, and pay a tenth part of it as a fine
 ‘ to the king.

108 ‘ The witness, who has given evidence, and to ‘ whom, within seven days after, a misfortune happens from ‘ disease, fire, or the death of a kinsman, shall be con‘ demned to pay the debt and a fine.

109 ‘ In cases, where no witness can be had, between ‘ two parties opposing each other, the judge may acquire a ‘ knowledge of the truth by the oath of the parties; or if he ‘ cannot otherwise perfectly ascertain it.

110 ‘ By the seven great Rīshis, and by the deities them‘ selves, have oaths been taken for the purpose of judicial

‘ proof; and even VASISHT’HA, being accused by VISWA’MITRA ‘ of murder, took an oath before the king SUDA’MAN, son of ‘ PIYAVANA.

111 ‘ Let no man of sense take an oath in vain, that is, ‘ not in a court of justice, on a trifling occasion; for the man, ‘ who takes an oath in vain, shall be punished in this life and ‘ in the next :

112 ‘ To women, however, at a time of dalliance, or ‘ on a proposal of marriage, in the case of grass or fruit eat‘ en by a cow, of wood taken for a sacrifice, or of a pro‘ mise made for the preservation of a Bráhmén, it is no ‘ deadly sin to take a light oath.

113 ‘ Let the judge cause a priest to swear by his vera‘ city; a foldier, by his horse, or elephant, and his weapons; ‘ a merchant, by his kine, grain, and gold; a mechanick or ‘ servile man, by imprecating on his own head, if he speak falsely, ‘ all possible crimes;

114 ‘ Or, on great occasions, let him cause the party to ‘ hold fire, or to dive under water, or severally to touch
 ‘ the heads of his children and wife :

115 ‘ He, whom the blazing fire burns not, whom the ‘ water soon forces not up, or who meets with no speedy mis‘ fortune, must be held veracious in his testimony on oath.

116 ‘ Of the sage VATSA, whom his younger half bro‘ ther formerly attacked, as the son of a servile woman, the fire, ‘ which pervades the world, burned not even a hair, by ‘ reason of his perfect veracity.

117 ‘ WHENEVER false evidence has been given in any ‘ suit, the king must reverse the judgement; and whatever ‘ has been done, must be considered as undone.

118 ‘ Evidence, given from covetousness, from distraction
 ‘ of mind, from terror, from friendship, from lust, from wrath, ‘ from ignorance, and from inattention, must be held invalid.

119 ‘ THE distinctions of punishment for a false witness ‘ from either of those motives, I will now propound fully ‘ and in order :

120 ‘ If he speak falsely through covetousness, he shall ‘ be fined a thousand panas ; if through distraction of mind, ‘ two hundred and fifty, or the lowest amercement ; if through ‘ terror, two mean amercements ; if through friendship, four ‘ times the lowest ;

121 ‘ If through lust, ten times the lowest amercement ; ‘ if through wrath, three times the next, or middlemost ; if ‘ through ignorance, two hundred complete ; if, through ‘ inattention, a hundred only.

122 ‘ Learned men have specified these punishments,
 ‘ which were ordained by sage legislators for perjured witnesses, ‘ with a view to prevent a failure of justice and to restrain ‘ iniquity.

123 ‘ Let a just prince banish men of the three lower ‘ classes, if they give false evidence, having first levied the ‘ fine ; but a Bráhmén let him only banish.

124 ‘ MENU, son of the Selfexistent, has named ten ‘ places of punishment, which are appropriated to the three ‘ lower classes ; but a Bráhmén must depart from the realm ‘ unhurt in any one of them :

125 ‘ The part of generation, the belly, the tongue, the ‘ two hands, and, fifthly, the two feet, the eye, the nose, ‘ both ears, the property, and, in a capital case, the whole ‘ body.

126 ‘ Let the king, having considered and ascertained
 ‘ the frequency of a similar offence, the place and time,
 ‘ the ability of the criminal to pay or suffer, and the crime ‘ itself, cause punishment to fall on those alone, who de‘ serve it.

127 ‘ Unjust punishment destroys reputation during life
 ‘ and fame after death; it even obstructs, in the next life, ‘ the path to heaven: unjust punishment, therefore, let the ‘ king by all means avoid.

128 ‘ A king, who inflicts punishment on such as de‘ serve it not, and inflicts no punishment on such as deserve ‘ it, brings infamy on himself, while he lives, and shall ‘ sink, when he dies, to a region of torment.

129 ‘ First, let him punish by gentle admonition; af‘ terwards, by harsh reproof; thirdly, by deprivation of ‘ property; after that, by corporal pain:

130 ‘ But, when even by corporal punishment he can‘ not restrain such offenders, let him apply to them all the ‘ four modes with rigour.

131 ‘ THOSE names of copper, silver, and gold weights, ‘ which are commonly used among men for the purpose
 ‘ of worldly business, I will now comprehensively ex‘ plain.

132 ‘ The very small mote, which may be discerned in ‘ a sunbeam passing through a lattice, is the least visible ‘ quantity, and men call it a trasarénu:

133 ‘ Eight of those *trasarénu*s are supposed equal in ‘ weight to one minute poppyseed; three of those seeds are ‘ equal to one black mustardseed; and three of those last,
 ‘ to a white mustardseed:

134 ‘ Six white mustardseeds are equal to a middle ‘ sized barleycorn; three such barleycorns to one raṭṭicā,
 ‘ or seed of the Gunjā; five raṭṭicas of gold are one māśha,
 ‘ and sixteen such māśhas, one suverna;

135 ‘ Four suvernas make a pala; ten palas, a dharana; ‘ but two raṭṭicas of silver, weighed together, are consider‘ ed as one māśhaca;

136 ‘ Sixteen of those māśhacas are a silver dharana, or ‘ purāna; but a carśha, or eighty raṭṭicas, of copper is called ‘ a pana or cārśhāpana.

137 ‘ Ten dharanas of silver are known by the name ‘ of a śatamāna; and the weight of four suvernas has also ‘ the appellation of a nishca.

138 ‘ Now two hundred and fifty panas are declared to ‘ be the first or lowest amercement; five hundred of them ‘ are considered as the mean; and a thousand, as the highest.

139 ‘ A DEBT being admitted by the defendant, he must ‘ pay five in the hundred, as a fine to the king; but, if it be ‘ denied and proved, twice as much: this law was enacted ‘ by MENU.

140 ‘ A LENDER of money may take, in addition to his ‘ capital, the interest allowed by VASISHT’HA, that is, an eigh‘ tieth part of a hundred, or one and a quarter, by the ‘ month, if he have a pledge;

141 ‘ Or, if he have no pledge, he may take two in the ‘ hundred by the month, remembering the duty of good men:
 ‘ for, by thus taking two in the hundred, he becomes not ‘ a sinner for gain.

142 ‘ He may thus take, in proportion to the risk, and in ‘ the direct order of the classes, two in the hundred from a

‘ priest, three from a soldier, four from a merchant, and five ‘ from a mechanick or servile man, but never more, as inte‘ rest by the month.

143 ‘ If he take a beneficial pledge, or a pledge to be ‘ used for his profit, he must have no other interest on the ‘ loan; nor, after a great length of time, or when the profits
 ‘ have amounted to the debt, can he give or sell such a pledge, ‘ though he may assign it in pledge to another.

144 ‘ A pledge to be kept only must not be used by force,
 ‘ that is against consent: the pawnee so using it must give up ‘ his whole interest, or must satisfy the pawner, if it be ‘ spoiled or worn out, by paying him the original price of it; ‘ otherwise, he commits a theft of the pawn.

145 ‘ Neither a pledge without limit, nor a deposit, are ‘ lost to the owner by lapse of time: they are both recover‘ able, though they have long remained with the bailee.

146 ‘ A milch cow, a camel, a riding horse, a bull or ‘ other beast, which has been sent to be tamed for labour, ‘ and other things used with friendly assent, are not lost, by ‘ length of time to the owner.

147 ‘ In general, whatever chattel the owner sees en‘ joyed by others for ten years, while, though present, he ‘ says nothing, that chattel he shall not recover:

148 ‘ If he be neither an idiot, nor an infant under ‘ the full age of fifteen years, and if the chattel be ad‘ versely possessed in a place, where he may see it, his pro‘ perty in it is extinct by law, and the adverse possessor shall ‘ keep it.

149 ‘ A pledge, a boundary of land, the property of ‘ an infant, a deposit either open or in a chest sealed, fe-

‘ male slaves, the wealth of a king, and of a learned Bráhmén, ‘ are not lost in consequence of adverse enjoyment.

150 ‘ The fool, who secretly uses a pledge without, ‘ though not against, the assent of the owner, shall give up ‘ half of his interest, as a compensation for such use.

151 ‘ INTEREST on money, received at once, not month
 ‘ by month, or day by day, as it ought, must never be more than ‘ enough to double the debt, that is, more than the amount of ‘ the principal paid at the same time: on grain, on fruit, on ‘ wool or hair, on beasts of burden, lent to be paid in the ‘ same kind of equal value, it must not be more than enough ‘ to make the debt quintuple.

152 ‘ Stipulated interest beyond the legal rate, and dif‘ ferent from the preceding rule, is invalid; and the wife call ‘ it an usurious way of lending: the lender is entitled at most ‘ to five in the hundred.

153 ‘ Let no lender for a month, or for two or three months, ‘ at a certain interest, receive such interest beyond the year; ‘ nor any interest, which is unapproved; nor interest upon ‘ interest by previous agreement; nor monthly interest exceed‘ ing in time the amount of the principal; nor interest ‘ exacted from a debtor as the price of the risk, when there is ‘ no publick danger or distress; nor immoderate profits from ‘ a pledge to be used by way of interest.

154 ‘ He, who cannot pay the debt at the fixed time,
 ‘ and wishes to renew the contract, may renew it in wri‘ ting, with the creditor's assent, if he pay all the interest then ‘ due;

155 ‘ But if, by some unavoidable accident, he cannot pay
 ‘ the whole interest, he may insert as principal in the renew-

‘ ed contract so much of the interest accrued as he ought ‘ to pay.

156 ‘ A lender at interest on the risk of safe carriage, ‘ who has agreed on the place and time, shall not ‘ receive such interest, if by accident the goods are not ‘ carried to the place, or within the time :

157 ‘ Whatever interest, or price of the risk, shall be ‘ settled between the parties, by men well acquainted with sea-‘ voyages or journies by land, with times and with places, ‘ such interest shall have legal force.

158 ‘ THE man, who becomes surety for the appearance ‘ of a debtor in this world, and produces him not, shall pay
 ‘ the debt out of his own property ;

159 ‘ But money, due by a surety, or idly promised to ‘ musicians and actresses, or lost at play, or due for spirituous ‘ liquors, or what remains unpaid of a fine or toll, the son ‘ of the surety shall not in general be obliged to pay :

160 ‘ Such is the rule in cases of a surety for appearance ‘ or good behaviour ; but, if a surety for payment should die,
 ‘ the judge may compel even his heirs to discharge the debt.

161 ‘ On what account then is it, that, after the death ‘ of a surety other than for payment, the creditor may ‘ in one case demand the debt of the heir, all the affairs of ‘ the deceased being known and proved ?

162 ‘ If the surety had received money from the debt‘ or, and had enough to pay the debt, the son of him, who ‘ so received it, shall discharge the debt out of his inherited ‘ property : this is a sacred ordinance.

163 ‘ A contract made by a person intoxicated or in‘ sane, or grievously disordered, or wholly dependent, by an ‘ infant or a decrepit old man, or in the name of another by ‘ a person without authority, is utterly null.

164 ‘ That plaint can have no effect, though it may be ‘ supported by evidence, which contains a cause of action ‘ inconsistent with positive law or with settled usage.

165 ‘ When the judge discovers a fraudulent pledge ‘ or sale, a fraudulent gift and acceptance, or in whatever ‘ other case he detects fraud, let him annul the whole ‘ transaction.

166 ‘ If the debtor be dead, and if the money borrowed ‘ was expended for the use of his family, it must be paid ‘ by that family, divided or undivided, out of their own ‘ estate.

167 ‘ Should even a slave make a contract in the name ‘ of his absent master for the behoof of the family, that ‘ master, whether in his own country or abroad, shall not ‘ rescind it.

168 ‘ What is given by force to a man who cannot accept ‘ it legally, what is by force enjoyed, by force caused to be ‘ written, and all other things done by force or against free
 ‘ consent, MENU has pronounced void.

169 ‘ Three are troubled by means of others, namely ‘ witnesses, sureties, and inspectors of causes, and four col‘ lect wealth slowly, with benefit to others, a Bráhmén, a ‘ moneylender, a merchant, and a king.

170 ‘ Let no king, how indigent soever, take any thing, ‘ which ought not to be taken; nor let him, how wealthy ‘ soever, decline taking that, which he ought to take, be ‘ it ever so small:

171 ‘ By taking what ought not to be taken, and by re-

‘ fufing what ought to be received, the king betrays his own ‘ weaknefs, and is loft both in this world and in the next;

172 ‘ But by taking his due, by adminiftering juftice,
 ‘ and by protecting the weak, the king augments his own ‘ force, and is exalted in the next world and in this.

173 ‘ Therefore, let the king, like YAMA, refigning ‘ what may be pleafing or unpleafing to himfelf, live by the ‘ ftrict rules of YAMA, his anger being repressed, and his or‘ gans kept in fubjection.

174 ‘ That evilminded king, who, through infatuation, ‘ decides caufes with injuftice, his enemies, through the difaf- ‘ fection of his people, quickly reduce to a ftate of depen‘ dence;

175 ‘ But him, who, fubduing both luft and wrath, ex‘ amines caufes with juftice, his people naturally feek, as ri‘ vers the ocean.

176 ‘ THE debtor, who complains before the king, that ‘ his creditor has recovered the debt by his own legal act,
 ‘ as beforementioned, fhall be compelled by the king to pay a ‘ quarter of the fum as a fine, and the creditor fhall be left in ‘ poffeffion of his own.

177 ‘ Even by perfonal labour fhall the debtor pay ‘ what is adjudged, if he be of the fame clafs with the cre‘ ditor, or of a lower; but a debtor of a higher clafs muft ‘ pay it according to his income by little and little.

178 ‘ By this fyftem of rules let the king decide, with ‘ equal juftice, all difputes between men oppofing each other, ‘ having afcertained the truth by evidence or the oaths of ‘ the parties.

179 ‘ A SENSIBLE man fhould make a deposit with ‘ some person of high birth, and of good morals, well acquainted with law, habitually veracious, having a large family, wealthy and venerable.

180 ‘ Whatever thing, and in whatever manner, a person shall deposit in the hands of another, the same thing, and in the same manner, ought to be received back by the owner: as the delivery was, so must be the receipt.

181 ‘ He, who restores not to the depositor, on his request, what has been deposited, may first be tried by the judge in the following manner, the depositor himself being absent.

182 ‘ On failure of witnesses, let the judge actually deposit gold, or precious things, with the defendant by the artful contrivance of spies, who have passed the age of childhood, and whose persons are engaging:

183 ‘ Should the defendant restore that deposit in the manner and shape, in which it was bailed by the spies, there is nothing in his hands, for which others can justly accuse him;

184 ‘ But if he restore not the gold, or precious things, as he ought, to those emissaries, let him be apprehended and compelled to pay the value of both deposits: this is a settled rule.

185 ‘ A deposit, whether sealed up or not, should never be redelivered, while the depositor is alive, to his heir apparent or presumptive: both sorts of deposits, indeed, are extinct, or cannot be demanded by the heir, if the depositor die, in that case; but not, unless he die, for, should the heir apparent keep them, the depositor himself may sue the bailee:

186 ‘ But, if a depositary by his own free act shall ‘ deliver a deposit to the heir of a deceased bailor, he must ‘ not be harassed with claims of a similar kind, either by ‘ the king, or by that heir;

187 ‘ And, if similar claims be made, the king must de‘ cide the questions after friendly admonition, without having ‘ recourse to artifice; for, the honest disposition of the man ‘ being proved, the judge must proceed with mildness.

188 ‘ Such is the mode of ascertaining the right in all ‘ these cases of a deposit: in the case of a deposit sealed ‘ up, the bailee shall incur no censure on the redelivery, ‘ unless he have altered the seal or taken out something.

189 ‘ If a deposit be seized by thieves, or destroyed by ‘ vermine, or washed away by water, or consumed by fire, ‘ the bailee shall not be obliged to make it good, unless he ‘ took part of it for himself.

190 ‘ The defendant, who denies a deposit, and the ‘ plaintiff, who asserts it, let the king try by all sorts of ex‘ pedients, and by the modes of ordeal prescribed in the Véda.

191 ‘ He, who restores not a thing really deposited, and ‘ he, who demands what he never bailed, shall both, for a ‘ second offence, be punished as thieves, if gold, pearls, or the ‘ like be demanded; or, in the case of a trifling demand, shall ‘ pay a fine equal to the value of the thing claimed:

192 ‘ For the first offence, the king should compel a ‘ fraudulent depositary, without any distinction between a ‘ deposit under seal or open, to pay a fine equal to its value.

193 ‘ That man, who, by false pretences, gets into his ‘ hands the goods of another, shall, together with his ac‘ complices, be punished by various degrees of whipping or ‘ mutilation, or even by death.

194 ‘ Regularly, a deposit should be produced, the same ‘ in kind and quantity as it was bailed, by the same and ‘ to the same person, by whom and from whom it was re‘ ceived, and before the same company, who were witnesses
 ‘ to the deposit: he who produces it in a different manner, ‘ ought to be fined;

195 ‘ But a thing, privately deposited, should be private‘ ly restored by and to the person, by and from whom it ‘ was received: as the bailment was, so should be the deli‘ very, according to a rule in the Vêda.

196 ‘ Thus let the king decide causes concerning a de‘ posit, or a friendly loan for use, without showing rigour ‘ to the depositary.

197 ‘ Him, who sells the property of another man, ‘ without the assent of the owner, the judge shall not admit ‘ as a competent witness, but shall treat as a thief, who ‘ pretends that he has committed no theft:

198 ‘ If, indeed, he be a near kinsman of the owner, ‘ he shall be fined six hundred panas; but, if he be neither ‘ his kinsman nor a claimant under him, he commits an ‘ offence equal to larceny.

199 ‘ A gift or sale, thus made by any other than the ‘ true owner, must, by a settled rule, be considered, in ju‘ dicial proceedings, as not made.

200 ‘ Where occupation for a time shall be proved,
 ‘ but no sort of title shall appear, the sale cannot be supported: ‘ title, not occupation, is essential to its support; and this ‘ rule also is fixed.

201 ‘ He, who has received a chattel, by purchase in ‘ open market, before a number of men, justly acquires the ‘ absolute property, by having paid the price of it, if he can produce the vendor ;

202 ‘ But, if the vendor be not producible, and the vendee prove the publick sale, the latter must be dismissed by the king without punishment ; and the former owner, who lost the chattel, may take it back on paying the vendee half its value.

203 ‘ One commodity, mixed with another, shall never be sold as unmixed ; nor a bad commodity, as good ; nor less than agreed on ; nor any thing kept at a distance or concealed, lest some defect in it should be discovered.

204 ‘ If, after one damsel has been shown, another be offered to the bridegroom, who had purchased leave to marry her from her next kinsman, he may become the husband of both for the same price : this law MENU ordained.

205 ‘ The kinsman, who gives a damsel in marriage, having first openly told her blemishes, whether she be insane, or disordered with elephantiasis, or defiled by connexion with a man, shall suffer no punishment.

206 ‘ If an officiating priest, actually engaged in a sacrifice, abandon his work, a share only, in proportion to his work done, shall be given to him by his partners in the business, out of their common pay :

207 ‘ But, if he discontinue his work without fraud, after the time of giving the sacrificial fees, he may take his full share, and cause what remains to be performed by another priest.

208 ‘ Where, on the performance of solemn rites, a specifick fee is ordained for each part of them, shall he ‘ alone, who performs that part, receive the fee; or shall ‘ all the priests take the perquisites jointly ?

209 ‘ At some holy rites, let the reader of the Yajurveda ‘ take the car, and the Brahmá, or superintending priest, the ‘ horse ; or, on another occasion, let the reader of the Rigvéda
 ‘ take the horse, and the chanter of the Sámvéda receive ‘ the carriage, in which the purchased materials of the sa‘ crifice had been brought.

210 ‘ A hundred cows being distributable among sixteen priests, ‘ the four chief, or first set, are entitled to near half, or ‘ forty-eight ; the next four, to half of that number; the ‘ third set, to a third part of it ; and the fourth set, to a ‘ quarter :

211 ‘ According to this rule, or in proportion to the ‘ work, must allotments of shares be given to men here be‘ low, who, though in conjunction, perform their several parts ‘ of the business.

212 ‘ SHOULD money or goods be given, or promised
 ‘ as a gift, by one man to another, who asks it for some re‘ ligious act, the gift shall be void, if that act be not after‘ wards performed :

213 ‘ If the money be delivered, and the receiver, ‘ through pride or avarice, refuse in that case to return it, ‘ he shall be fined one suverna by the king, as a punishment ‘ for his theft.

214 ‘ Such, as here declared, is the rule ordained for ‘ withdrawing what has been given : I will, next, propound
 ‘ the law for nonpayment of wages.

215 ‘ THAT hired servant or workman, who, not ‘ from any disorder but from insolence, fails to perform his ‘ work according to his agreement, shall be fined eight ‘ rañticas, and his wages or hire shall not be paid.

216 ‘ But, if he be really ill, and, when restored to ‘ health, shall perform his work according to his original ‘ bargain, he shall receive his pay even for a very long time :

217 ‘ Yet, whether he be sick or well, if the work sti‘ pulated be not performed by another for him or by himself, ‘ his whole wages are forfeited, though the work want but ‘ a little of being complete.

218 ‘ This is the general rule concerning work under‘ taken for wages or hire: next, I will fully declare the ‘ law concerning such men as break their promises.

219 ‘ THE man, among the traders and other in‘ habitants of a town or district, who breaks a promise ‘ through avarice, though he had taken an oath to perform ‘ it, let the king banish from his realm:

220 ‘ Or, according to circumstances, let the judge, hav‘ ing arrested the promisebreaker, condemn him to pay six ‘ nishcas, or four suvernas, or one satamána of silver, or ‘ all three if he deserve such a fine.

221 ‘ Among all citizens and in all classes, let a just ‘ king observe this rule for imposing fines on men, who ‘ shall break their engagements.

222 ‘ A MAN, who has bought or sold any thing ‘ in this world, that has a fixed price and is not perishable, as ‘ land or metals, and wishes to rescind the contract, may ‘ give or take back such a thing within ten days;

223 ‘ But, after ten days, he shall neither give nor ‘ take it back: the giver or the taker, except by consent, shall ‘ be fined by the king six hundred panas.

224 ' The king himself shall take a fine of ninety-six
' panas from him, who gives a blemished girl in marriage for
' a reward, without avowing her blemish;

225 ' But the man, who, through malignity, says of ' a damsel, that she is no virgin, shall be fined a hundred
' panas, if he cannot prove her defilement.

226 ' The holy nuptial texts are applied solely to vir-
' gins, and no where on earth to girls, who have lost their
' virginity; since those women are in general excluded from
' legal ceremonies :

227 ' The nuptial texts are a certain rule in regard to
' wedlock; and the bridal contract is known by the learned
' to be complete and irrevocable on the seventh step of the ' married pair, hand in hand, after those texts have been pro-
' nounced.

228 ' By this law, in all business whatever here below,
' must the judge confine, within the path of rectitude, a per-
' son inclined to rescind his contract of sale and purchase.

229 ' I now will decide exactly, according to prin' ciples of law, the contests usually arising from the fault
' of such as own herds of cattle, and of such as are hired
' to keep them.

230 ' By day the blame falls on the herdsman; by ' night on the owner, if the cattle be fed and kept in his own
' house; but, if the place of their food and custody be differ-
' ent, the keeper incurs the blame.

231 ' That hired servant, whose wages are paid with ' milk, may, with the assent of the owner, milk the best
' cow out of ten: such are the wages of herdsmen, unless
' they be paid in a different mode.

232 ‘ The herdsman himself shall make good the loss ‘ of a beast, which through his want of due care has strayed, ‘ has been destroyed by reptiles, or killed by dogs, or has ‘ died by falling into a pit;

233 ‘ But he shall not be compelled to make it good,
 ‘ when robbers have carried it away, if, after fresh procla‘ mation and pursuit, he give notice to his master in a pro‘ per place and season.

234 ‘ When cattle die, let him carry to his mas‘ ter their ears, their hides, their tails, the skin be‘ low their navels, their tendons, and the liquor exuding ‘ from their foreheads : let him also point out their ‘ limbs.

235 ‘ A flock of goats or of sheep being attacked by ‘ wolves, and the keeper not going to repel the attack, he shall ‘ be responsible for every one of them, which a wolf shall ‘ violently kill;

236 ‘ But, if any one of them, while they graze toge‘ ther near a wood, and the shepherd keeps them in or‘ der, shall be suddenly killed by a wolf springing on it, he ‘ shall not in that case be responsible.

237 ‘ On all sides of a village or small town, let a space ‘ be left for pasture, in breadth either four hundred cubits,
 ‘ or three casts of a large stick ; and thrice that space round
 ‘ a city or considerable town :

238 ‘ Within that pasture ground, if cattle do any da‘ mage to grain in a field unenclosed with a hedge, the king ‘ shall not punish the herdsmen.

239 ‘ Let the owner of the field enclose it with a hedge ‘ of thorny plants, over which a camel could not look ; and ‘ let him stop every gap, through which a dog or a boar

‘ could thrust his head.

240 ‘ Should cattle, attended by a herdsman, do mischief near a highway, in an enclosed field or near the village; he shall be fined a hundred panas; but against cattle, which have no keeper, let the owner of the field secure it.

241 ‘ In other fields, the owner of cattle doing mischief shall be fined one pana and a quarter; but, in all places, the value of the damaged grain must be paid: such is the fixed rule concerning a husbandman.

242 ‘ For damage by a cow before ten days have passed since her calving, by bulls kept for impregnation, and by cattle consecrated to the deity, whether attended or unattended, MENU has ordained no fine.

243 ‘ If land be injured, by the fault of the farmer himself, as if he fails to sow it in due time, he shall be fined ten times as much as the king's share of the crop, that might otherwise have been raised; but only five times as much, if it was the fault of his servants without his knowledge.

244 ‘ These rules let a just prince observe in all cases of transgression by masters, their cattle, and their herdsmen.

245 ‘ If a contest arise between two villages, or landholders, concerning a boundary, let the king, or his judge, ascertain the limits in the month of Jyaisht'ha, when the landmarks are seen more distinctly.

246 ‘ When boundaries first are established, let strong trees be planted on them, Vatas, Pippalas, Palásas, Sálmalis, Sálas, or Tálas; or such trees (like the Udumbara or Vajradru) as abound in milk;

247 ‘ Or clustering shrubs, or Vénus of different sorts,

H h h

‘ or Sami-trees, and creepers, or Saras, and clumps of Cubja- ‘ cas: and mounds of earth should be raised on them; so ‘ that the landmark may not easily perish:

248 ‘ Lakes and wells, pools and streams, ought also ‘ to be made on the common limits, and temples dedicated ‘ to the gods.

249 ‘ The persons concerned, reflecting on the perpe‘ tual trespasses committed by men here below through ‘ ignorance of boundaries, should cause other landmarks
 ‘ to be concealed under ground:

250 ‘ Large pieces of stone, bones, tails of cows, bran, ‘ ashes, potsherds, dried cowdung, bricks and tiles, char‘ coal, pebbles, and sand,

251 ‘ And substances of all sorts, which the earth cor‘ rodes not even in a long time, should be placed in jars
 ‘ not appearing above ground on the common boundary.

252 ‘ By such marks, or by the course of a stream, and ‘ long continued possession, the judge may ascertain the ‘ limit between the lands of two parties in litigation:

253 ‘ Should there be a doubt, even on the inspection ‘ of those marks, recourse must be had, for the decision of ‘ such a contest, to the declarations of witnesses.

254 ‘ Those witnesses must be examined concerning ‘ the landmarks, in the presence of all the townsmen or ‘ villagers, or of both the contending parties:

255 ‘ What the witnesses, thus assembled and interro‘ gated, shall positively declare concerning the limits, must ‘ be recorded in writing, together with all their names.

256 ‘ Let them, putting earth on their heads, wearing ‘ chaplets of red flowers and clad in red mantles, be sworn

‘ by the reward of all their several good actions, to give ‘ correct evidence concerning the metes and bounds.

257 ‘ Veracious witnesses, who give evidence as the ‘ law requires, are absolved from their sins; but such, as ‘ give it unjustly, shall each be fined two hundred panas.

258 ‘ If there be no witnesses, let four men, who dwell ‘ on all the four sides of the two villages, make a decision ‘ concerning the boundary, being duly prepared, like the ‘ witnesses, in the presence of the king.

259 ‘ If there be no such neighbours on all sides, nor ‘ any men, whose ancestors had lived there since the vil‘ lages were built, nor other inhabitants of towns, who can ‘ give evidence on the limits, the judge must examine the ‘ following men, who inhabit the woods;

260 ‘ Hunters, fowlers, herdsmen, fishers, diggers for ‘ roots, catchers of snakes, gleaners, and other foresters:

261 ‘ According to their declaration, when they are ‘ duly examined, let the king with precision order land‘ marks to be fixed on the boundary line between the two ‘ villages.

262 ‘ As to the bounds of arable fields, wells or pools, ‘ gardens and houses, the testimony of next neighbours on ‘ every side must be considered as the best means of deci‘ sion:

263 ‘ Should the neighbours say any thing untrue, ‘ when two men dispute about a landmark, the king shall ‘ make each of those witnesses pay the middlemost of the ‘ three usual amercements.

264 ‘ He, who, by means of intimidation, shall possess ‘ himself of a house, a pool, a field, or a garden, shall be ‘ fined five hundred panas; but only two hundred, if he ‘ trespassed through ignorance of the right.

265 ‘ If the boundary cannot be otherwise ascertain‘ ed, let the king, knowing what is just, that is, without ‘ partiality, and consulting the future benefit of both parties, ‘ mark a boundline between their lands: this is a settled ‘ law.

266 ‘ Thus has the rule been propounded for decisions ‘ concerning landmarks: I, next, will declare the law ‘ concerning defamatory words.

267 ‘ A SOLDIER, defaming a priest, shall be fined a ‘ hundred panas; a merchant, thus offending, an hundred ‘ and fifty, or two hundred: but, for such an offence, a me-‘ chanick or servile man shall be whipped.

268 ‘ A priest shall be fined five hundred, if he slan‘ der a soldier; twenty-five, if a merchant; and twelve, ‘ if he slander a man of the servile class.

269 ‘ For abusing one of the same class, a twiceborn ‘ man shall be fined only twelve; but for ribaldry not to be ‘ uttered, even that and every fine shall be doubled.

270 ‘ A onceborn man, who insults the twiceborn with ‘ gross invectives, ought to have his tongue slit; for he ‘ sprang from the lowest part of BRAHMA:

271 ‘ If he mention their names and classes with con‘ tumely, as if he say “ Oh! DE’VADATTA, thou refuse of ‘ “ Bráhmens,” an iron style, ten fingers long, shall be thrust ‘ redhot into his mouth.

272 ‘ Should he, through pride, give instruction to ‘ priests concerning their duty, let the king order some ‘ hot oil to be dropped into his mouth and his ear.

273 ‘ He, who falsely denies, through insolence, the ‘ sacred knowledge, the country, the class, or the corporeal ‘ investiture of a man equal in rank, shall be compelled to ‘ pay a fine of two hundred panas.

274 ‘ If a man call another blind with one eye, or ‘ lame, or defective in any similar way, he shall pay the ‘ small fine of one pana, even though he speak truth.

275 ‘ He shall be fined a hundred, who defames his ‘ mother, his father, his wife, his brother, his son, or his ‘ preceptor; and he, who gives not his preceptor the way.

276 ‘ For mutual abuse by a priest and a soldier, this ‘ fine must be imposed by a learned king; the lowest ‘ amercement on the priest, and the middlemost on the ‘ soldier.

277 ‘ Such exactly, as before mentioned, must be the pu‘ nishment of a merchant and a mechanick, in respect of ‘ their several classes, except the flitting of the tongue: this ‘ is a fixed rule of punishment.

278 ‘ Thus fully has the law been declared for the ‘ punishment of defamatory speech: I will, next, propound
 ‘ the established law concerning assault and battery.

279 ‘ With whatever member a lowborn man shall ‘ assault or hurt a superiour, even that member of his must ‘ be slit, or cut more or less in proportion to the injury: this ‘ is an ordinance of MENU.

280 ‘ He, who raises his hand or a staff against another, ‘ shall have his hand cut; and he, who kicks another in ‘ wrath, shall have an incision made in his foot.

281 ‘ A man of the lowest class, who shall insolently ‘ place himself on the same seat with one of the highest,

‘ shall either be banished with a mark on his hinder parts,
 ‘ or the king shall cause a gash to be made on his buttock:

282 ‘ Should he spit on him through pride, the king ‘ shall order both of his lips to be gashed; should he urine ‘ on him, his penis; should he break wind against him, his ‘ anus.

283 ‘ If he seize the Bráhmén by the locks, or by the ‘ feet, or by the beard, or by the throat, or by the scrotum, ‘ let the king without hesitation cause incisions to be made ‘ in his hands.

284 ‘ If any man scratch the skin of his equal in class, or ‘ fetch blood from him, he shall be fined a hundred panas;
 ‘ if he wound a muscle, six nishcas: but, if he break a bone, ‘ let him be instantly banished.

285 ‘ ACCORDING to the use and value of all great ‘ trees, must a fine be set for injuring them: this is an esta‘ blished rule.

286 ‘ IF a blow, attended with much pain, be given ‘ either to human creatures or cattle, the king shall inflict ‘ on the striker a punishment as heavy as the presumed ‘ suffering.

287 ‘ IN all cases of hurting a limb, wounding, or ‘ fetching blood, the assailant shall pay the expense of a ‘ perfect cure; or, on his failure, both full damages and a ‘ fine to the same amount.

288 ‘ HE, who injures the goods of another, whether ‘ acquainted or unacquainted with the owner of them, shall ‘ give satisfaction to the owner, and pay a fine to the king ‘ equal to the damage.

289 ‘ If injury be done to leather, or to leathern bags,

‘ or to utensils made of wood or clay, the fine shall be five ‘ times their value.

290 ‘ THE wise reckon ten occasions, in regard to a ‘ carriage, its driver, and its owner, on which the fine is ‘ remitted; on other occasions a fine is ordained by law:

291 ‘ The noscord or bridle being cut, by some acci- ‘ dent without negligence, or the yoke being snapped, on a ‘ sudden overturn, or running against any thing without fault, ‘ the axle being broken, or the wheel cracked;

292 ‘ On the breaking of the thongs, of the halter, ‘ or of the reins, and when the driver has called aloud to ‘ make way, on these occasions has MENU declared that no ‘ fine shall be set:

293 ‘ But, where a carriage has been overturned by ‘ the unskilfulness of the driver, there, in the case of any ‘ hurt, the master shall be fined two hundred panas.

294 ‘ If the driver be skilful, but negligent, the driver ‘ alone shall be fined; and those in the carriage shall be ‘ fined each a hundred, if the driver be clearly unskilful.

295 ‘ Should a driver, being met in the way by another ‘ carriage or by cattle, kill any animal by his negligence, a ‘ fine shall, without doubt, be imposed by the following rule:

296 ‘ For killing a man, a fine, equal to that for theft,
‘ shall be instantly set; half that amount, for large brute ‘ animals, as for a bull or cow, an elephant, a camel, or a ‘ horse;

297 ‘ For killing very young cattle, the fine shall be ‘ two hundred panas; and fifty, for elegant quadrupeds or ‘ beautiful birds, as antelopes, parrots, and the like;

298 ‘ For an ass, a goat, or a sheep, the fine must be ‘ five silver máshas; and one másha, for killing a dog or a ‘ boar.

299 ‘ A WIFE, a son, a servant, a pupil, and a younger
 ‘ whole brother, may be corrected, when they commit ‘ faults, with a rope or the small shoot of a cane;

300 ‘ But on the back part only of their bodies, and ‘ not on a noble part by any means: he, who strikes them ‘ otherwise than by this rule, incurs the guilt, or shall pay
 ‘ the fine, of a thief.

301 ‘ This law of assault and battery has been com‘ pletely declared: I proceed to declare the rule for the ‘ settled punishment of theft.

302 ‘ IN restraining thieves and robbers, let the king ‘ use extreme diligence; since, by restraining thieves and ‘ robbers, his fame and his domain are increased.

303 ‘ Constantly, no doubt, is that king to be honoured, ‘ who bestows exemption from fear; since he performs, as ‘ it were, a perpetual sacrifice, giving exemption from fear ‘ as a constant sacrificial present.

304 ‘ A sixth part of the reward for virtuous deeds, ‘ performed by the whole people, belongs to the king, who ‘ protects them; but, if he protect them not, a sixth part ‘ of their iniquity lights on him:

305 ‘ Of the reward for what every subject reads
 ‘ in the Véda, for what he sacrifices, for what he gives ‘ in charity, for what he performs in worship, the ‘ king justly takes a sixth part in consequence of protec‘ tion.

306 ‘ A king, who acts with justice in defending all ‘ creatures, and slays only those, who ought to be slain,

‘ performs, as it were, each day a sacrifice with a hundred ‘ thousand gifts ;

307 ‘ But a king, who gives no such protection, yet ‘ receives taxes in kind or in value, market duties and tolls, ‘ the small daily presents for his household, and fines for ‘ offences, falls directly on his death to a region of horror.

308 ‘ That king, who gives no protection, yet takes a ‘ sixth part of the grain as his revenue, wise men have con‘ sidered as a prince, who draws to him the foulness of all
 ‘ his people.

309 ‘ Be it known, that a monarch, who pays no regard ‘ to the scriptures, who denies a future state, who acts with ‘ rapacity, who protects not his people, yet swallows up ‘ their possessions, will sink low indeed after death.

310 ‘ WITH great care and by three methods let him ‘ restrain the unjust ; by imprisonment, by confinement in ‘ fetters, and by various kinds of corporal punishment ;

311 ‘ Since, by restraining the bad, and by encourag‘ ing the good, kings are perpetually made pure, as the ‘ twiceborn are purified by sacrificing.

312 ‘ A KING, who seeks benefit to his own soul, must ‘ always forgive parties litigant, children, old men, and sick ‘ persons, who inveigh against him :

313 ‘ He, who forgives persons in pain, when they ‘ abuse him, shall on that account be exalted in heaven ;
 ‘ but he, who excuses them not, through the pride of domi‘ nion, shall for that reason sink into hell.

314 ‘ THE stealer of gold from a priest must run hastily ‘ to the king, with loosened hair, proclaiming the theft, and ‘ adding : “ Thus have I sinned ; punish me.”

315 ‘ He must bear on his shoulder a pestle of stone, ‘ or a club of c’hadira-wood, or a javelin pointed at both ‘ ends, or an iron mace :

316 ‘ Whether the king strike him with it, or dismiss ‘ him unhurt, the thief is then absolved from the crime ;
 ‘ but the king, if he punish him not, shall incur the guilt
 ‘ of the thief.

317 ‘ The killer of a priest, or destroyer of an embryo, ‘ casts his guilt on the willing eater of his provisions ; an ‘ adulterous wife, on her negligent husband ; a bad scholar ‘ and sacrificer, on their ignorant preceptor ; and a thief, on ‘ the forgiving prince :

318 ‘ But men, who have committed offences, and ‘ have received from kings the punishment due to them, go ‘ pure to heaven, and become as clear as those who have ‘ done well.

319 ‘ HE, who steals the rope or the waterpot from a ‘ well, and he, who breaks down a cistern, shall be fined
 ‘ a másha of gold ; and that, which he has taken or injured, ‘ he must restore to its former condition.

320 ‘ Corporal punishment shall be inflicted on him,
 ‘ who steals more than ten cumbhas of grain (a cumbha is twen‘ ty drónas, and a dróna, two hundred palas) : for less he ‘ must be fined eleven times as much, and shall pay to the ‘ owner the amount of his property.

321 ‘ So shall corporal punishment be inflicted for steal‘ ing commodities usually sold by weight, or more than a ‘ hundred head of cattle, or gold, or silver, or costly ap‘ parel :

322 ‘ For stealing more than fifty palas, it is enacted,

‘ that a hand shall be amputated ; for less, the king shall set ‘ a fine eleven times as much as the value.

323 ‘ For stealing men of high birth, and women above ‘ all, and the most precious gems, as diamonds or rubies, the ‘ thief deserves capital punishment.

324 ‘ For stealing large beasts, weapons, or medicines, ‘ let the king inflict adequate punishment, considering the ‘ time and the act.

325 ‘ For taking kine belonging to priests, and boring
 ‘ their nostrils, or for stealing their other cattle, the offender ‘ shall instantly lose half of one foot.

326 For stealing thread, raw cotton, materials to make ‘ spirituous liquor, cowdung, molasses, curds, milk, butter‘ milk, water, or grafs,

327 ‘ Large canes, baskets of canes, salt of every kind, ‘ earthen pots, clay or ashes,

328 ‘ Fish, birds, oil, or clarified butter, fleshmeat, honey,
 ‘ or any thing, as leather, horn, or ivory, that came from a beast,

329 ‘ Or other things not precious, or spirituous liquors, ‘ rice dressed with clarified butter, or other messes of boiled ‘ rice, the fine must be twice the value of the commodity ‘ stolen.

330 ‘ For stealing as much as a man can carry of flowers, ‘ green corn, shrubs, creepers, small trees, or other vegeta‘ bles, enclosed by a hedge, the fine shall be five raṭṭicas
 ‘ of gold or silver ;

331 ‘ But for corn, potherbs, roots, and fruit, unenclosed ‘ by a fence, the fine is a hundred panas, if there be no sort of ‘ relation between the taker and owner ; or half a hundred, if ‘ there be such relation.

332 ‘ If the taking be violent, and in the sight of the owner, it is robbery; if privately in his absence, it is only theft; and it is considered as theft, when a man, having received any thing, refuses to give it back.

333 ‘ On him, who steals the beforementioned things, when they are prepared for use, let the king set the lowest amercement of the three; and the same on him, who steals holy fire from the temple.

334 ‘ With whatever limb a thief commits the offence by any means in this world, as if he break a wall with his hand or his foot, even that limb shall the king amputate, for the prevention of a similar crime.

335 ‘ NEITHER a father, nor a preceptor, nor a friend, nor a mother, nor a wife, nor a son, nor a domestick priest, must be left unpunished by the king, if they adhere not with firmness to their duty.

336 ‘ WHERE another man of lower birth would be fined one pana, the king shall be fined a thousand, and he shall give the fine to the priests, or cast it into the river: this is a sacred rule.

337 ‘ But the fine of a Súdra for theft shall be eightfold; that of a Vaisya, sixteenfold; that of a Cshatriya, two and thirty fold;

338 ‘ That of a Bráhmen, four and sixtyfold, or a hundredfold complete, or even twice four and sixtyfold; each of them knowing the nature of his offence.

339 ‘ The taking of roots, and fruit from a large tree, in a field or a forest unenclosed, or of wood for a sacrificial fire, or of grafs to be eaten by cows, MENU has pronounced no theft.

340 ‘ A PRIEST who willingly receives any thing, either ‘ for sacrificing or for instructing, from the hand of a man, ‘ who had taken what the owner had not given, shall be ‘ punished even as the thief.

341 ‘ A twiceborn man, who is travelling, and whose ‘ provisions are scanty, shall not be fined, for taking only ‘ two sugar canes, or two esculent roots, from the field of ‘ another man.

342 ‘ He, who ties the unbound, or looses the bound,
 ‘ cattle of another, and he, who takes a slave, a horse, or a ‘ carriage without permission, shall be punished as for theft.

343 ‘ A king, who, by enforcing these laws, restrains men ‘ from committing theft, acquires in this world fame, and, ‘ in the next, beatitude.

344 ‘ LET not the king, who ardently desires a seat with ‘ INDRA, and wishes for glory, which nothing can change or ‘ diminish, endure for a moment the man, who has com‘ mitted atrocious violence, as by robbery, arson, or homi‘ cide.

345 ‘ He, who commits great violence, must be confi‘ dered as a more grievous offender than a defamer, a thief,
 ‘ or a striker with a staff:

346 ‘ That king, who endures a man convicted of such ‘ atrocity, quickly goes to perdition and incurs publick hate.

347 ‘ Neither on account of friendship, nor for the ‘ sake of great lucre, shall the king dismiss the perpetrators ‘ of violent acts, who spread terror among all creatures.

348 ‘ THE twiceborn may take arms, when their duty ‘ is obstructed by force; and when, in some evil time, a dis‘ aster has befallen the twiceborn classes;

349 ‘ And in their own defence; and in a war for just ‘ cause; and in defence of a woman or a priest: he, who ‘ kills justly, commits no crime.

350 ‘ Let a man, without hesitation, slay another, if he ‘ cannot otherwise escape, who assails him with intent to mur‘ der, whether young or old, or his preceptor, or a Bráh-
 ‘ men deeply versed in the scripture.

351 ‘ By killing an assassin, who attempts to kill, whe‘ ther in publick or in private, no crime is committed by the ‘ slayer: fury recoils upon fury.

352 ‘ MEN, who commit overt acts of adulterous incli‘ nations for the wives of others, let the king banish from ‘ his realm, having punished them with such bodily marks, ‘ as excite aversion;

353 ‘ Since adultery causes, to the general ruin, a ‘ mixture of classes among men: thence arises violation ‘ of duties; and thence is the root of felicity quite de‘ stroyed.

354 ‘ A man, before noted for such an offence, who ‘ converses in secret with the wife of another, shall pay the ‘ first of the three usual amercements;

355 ‘ But a man, not before noted, who thus converses ‘ with her for some reasonable cause, shall pay no fine; ‘ since in him there is no transgression.

356 ‘ He, who talks with the wife of another man at a ‘ place of pilgrimage, in a forest or a grove, or at the con‘ fluence of rivers, incurs the guilt of an adulterous incli‘ nation:

357 ‘ To send her flowers or perfumes, to sport and jest ‘ with her, to touch her apparel and ornaments, to sit with ‘ her on the same couch, are all held adulterous acts on his ‘ part.

358 ‘ To touch a married woman on her breasts or any ‘ other place, which ought not to be touched, or, being ‘ touched unbecomingly by her, to bear it complacently, ‘ are adulterous acts with mutual assent.

359 ‘ A man of the servile class, who commits actual ‘ adultery with the wife of a priest, ought to suffer death :
‘ the wives, indeed, of all the four classes must ever be most ‘ especially guarded.

360 ‘ Mendicants, encomiasts, men prepared for a sa‘ crifice, and cooks and other artificers, are not prohibited from ‘ speaking to married women.

361 ‘ Let no man converse, after he has been forbidden, ‘ with the wives of others : he, who thus converses, after a ‘ husband or father has forbidden him, shall pay a fine of one ‘ suverna.

362 ‘ These laws relate not to the wives of publick dan‘ cers or singers, or of such base men, as live by intrigues
‘ of their wives ; men, who either carry women to others,
‘ or, lying concealed at home, permit them to hold a culpa‘ ble intercourse :

363 ‘ Yet he, who has a private connexion with such ‘ women, or with servant girls kept by one master, or with fe‘ male anchorites of an heretical religion, shall be compelled ‘ to pay a small fine.

364 ‘ He, who vitiates a damsel without her consent, ‘ shall suffer corporal punishment instantly ; but he, who ‘ enjoys a willing damsel, shall not be corporally punished, ‘ if his class be the same with hers.

365 ' From a girl, who makes advances to a man of a
 ' high class, let not the king take the smallest fine ; but her;
 ' who first addresses a low man, let him constrain to live in
 ' her house well guarded.

366 ' A low man, who makes love to a damsel of high
 ' birth, ought to be punished corporally ; but he, who ad-
 ' dresses a maid of equal rank, shall give the nuptial present
 ' and marry her, if her father please.

367 ' OF the man, who through insolence forcibly con-
 ' taminates a damsel, let the king instantly order two fingers
 ' to be amputated, and condemn him to pay a fine of six
 ' hundred panas:

368 ' A man of equal rank, who defiles a consenting
 ' damsel, shall not have his fingers amputated, but shall pay
 ' a fine of two hundred panas, to restrain him from a repeti-
 ' tion of his offence.

369 ' A damsel, polluting another damsel, must be fined
 ' two hundred panas, pay the double value of her nuptial
 ' present, and receive ten lashes with a whip ;

370 ' But a woman, polluting a damsel, shall have her
 ' head instantly shaved, and two of her fingers chopped off ;
 ' and shall ride, mounted on an ass, through the publick street.

371 ' SHOULD a wife, proud of her family and the ' great qualities of her kinsmen, actually violate the duty,
 ' which she owes to her lord, let the king condemn her to
 ' be devoured by dogs in a place much frequented ;

372 ' And let him place the adulterer on an iron bed
 ' well heated, under which the executioners shall throw logs
 ' continually, till the sinful wretch be there burned to death.

373 ' OF a man once convicted, and a year after guilty

‘ of the same crime, the fine must be doubled; so it must, if he ‘ be connected with the daughter of an outcast or with a ‘ Chándalí woman.

374 ‘ A mechanick or servile man, having an adulterous ‘ connexion with a woman of a twiceborn class, whether ‘ guarded at home or unguarded, shall thus be punished: if she ‘ was unguarded, he shall lose the part offending, and his ‘ whole substance; if guarded, and a priestess, every thing, ‘ even his life.

375 ‘ For adultery with a guarded priestess, a merchant ‘ shall forfeit all his wealth after imprisonment for a year;
 ‘ a soldier shall be fined a thousand panas, and be shaved ‘ with the urine of an ass;

376 ‘ But, if a merchant or soldier commit adultery ‘ with a woman of the sacerdotal class, whom her husband ‘ guards not at home, the king shall only fine the merchant ‘ five hundred, and the soldier a thousand:

377 ‘ Both of them, however, if they commit that offence ‘ with a priestess not only guarded but eminent for good qualities, ‘ shall be punished like men of the servile class, or be burn‘ ed in a fire of dry grass or reeds.

378 ‘ A Bráhmén, who carnally knows a guarded wo‘ man without her free will, must be fined a thousand panas; ‘ but only five hundred, if he knew her with her free ‘ consent.

379 ‘ Ignominious tonsure is ordained, instead of ca‘ pital punishment, for an adulterer of the priestly class, ‘ where the punishment of other classes may extend to loss ‘ of life.

380 ‘ Never shall the king slay a Bráhmén, though con‘ victed of all possible crimes: let him banish the offender ‘ from his realm, but with all his property secure and his ‘ body unhurt:

381 ‘ No greater crime is known on earth than slaying
 ‘ a Bráhmén; and the king, therefore, must not even form
 ‘ in his mind an idea of killing a priest.

382 ‘ If a merchant converse criminally with a guarded ‘ woman of the military, or a soldier with one of the mer‘ cantile, class, they both deserve the same punishment as in ‘ the case of a priestess unguarded:

383 ‘ But a Bráhmén, who shall commit adultery with ‘ a guarded woman of those two classes, must be fined a ‘ thousand panas; and, for the like offence with a guarded ‘ woman of the servile class, the fine of a soldier or a mer‘ chant shall be also one thousand.

384 ‘ For adultery with a woman of the military class, ‘ if unguarded, the fine of a merchant is five hundred; but ‘ a soldier, for the converse of that offence, must be shaved with ‘ urine, or pay the fine just mentioned.

385 ‘ A priest shall pay five hundred panas, if he con‘ nect himself criminally with an unguarded woman of the ‘ military, commercial, or servile class; and a thousand, for ‘ such a connexion with a woman of a vile mixed breed.

386 ‘ THAT king, in whose realm lives no thief, no ‘ adulterer, no defamer, no man guilty of atrocious vio‘ lence, and no committer of assaults, attains the mansion of ‘ SACRA.

387 ‘ By suppressing those five in his dominion, he ‘ gains royalty paramount over men of the same kingly ‘ rank, and spreads his fame through the world.

388 ' THE sacrificer, who forsakes the officiating priest,
 ' and the officiating priest, who abandons the sacrificer, each
 ' being able to do his work, and guilty of no grievous of-
 ' fence, must each be fined a hundred panas.

389 ' A mother, a father, a wife, and a son shall not ' be forsaken: he, who forsakes either of them, unless guilty
 ' of a deadly sin, shall pay six hundred panas as a fine to
 ' the king.

390 ' LET not a prince, who seeks the good of his own
 ' soul, hastily and alone pronounce the law, on a dispute con' cerning any legal observance, among twiceborn men in
 ' their several orders;

391 ' But let him, after giving them due honour ac' cording to their merit, and, at first, having soothed them
 ' by mildness, apprise them of their duty with the assistance
 ' of Bráhmens.

392 ' THE priest, who, gives an entertainment to twen' ty men of the three first classes, without inviting his next
 ' neighbour, and his neighbour next but one, if both be
 ' worthy of an invitation, shall be fined one másha of silver.

393 ' A Bráhmen of deep learning in the Véda, who in' vites not another Bráhmen, both learned and virtuous, to
 ' an entertainment given on some occasion relating to his
 ' wealth, as the marriage of his child, and the like, shall be ' made to pay him twice the value of the repast, and be
 ' fined a másha of gold.

394 ' NEITHER a blind man, nor an idiot, nor a crip-
 ' ple, nor a man full seventy years old, nor one who con-
 ' fers great benefits on priests of eminent learning, shall be
 ' compelled by any king to pay taxes.

395 ‘ Let the king always do honour to a learned theo‘ logian, to a man either sick or grieved, to a little child,
‘ to an aged or indigent man, to a man of exalted birth,
‘ and to a man of distinguished virtue.

396 ‘ LET a washerman wash the clothes of his employers
‘ by little and little, or piece by piece, and not hastily, on a ‘ smooth board of Sálmali-wood: let him never mix the ‘ clothes of one person with the clothes of another, nor suffer ‘ any but the owner to wear them.

397 ‘ LET a weaver, who has received ten palas of cot‘ ton thread, give them back increased to eleven by the rice-
‘ water and the like used in weaving: he, who does otherwise, ‘ shall pay a fine of twelve panas.

398 ‘ As men versed in cases of tolls, and acquainted ‘ with all marketable commodities, shall establish the price ‘ of saleable things, let the king take a twentieth part of the ‘ profit on sales at that price.

399 ‘ Of the trader, who, through avarice, exports ‘ commodities, of which the king justly claims the preemp-
‘ tion, or on which he has laid an embargo, let the sove‘ reign confiscate the whole property.

400 ‘ Any seller or buyer, who fraudulently passes by ‘ the toll office at night or any other improper time, or who ‘ makes a false enumeration of the articles bought, shall be fi‘ ned eight times as much as their value.

401 ‘ Let the king establish rules for the sale and purchase ‘ of all marketable things, having duly considered whence ‘ they come, if imported; and, if exported, whither they must ‘ be sent; how long they have been kept; what may be ‘ gained by them; and what has been expended on them.

402 ‘ Once in five nights, or at the close of every half ‘ month, according to the nature of the commodities, let the king ‘ make a regulation for market prices in the presence of ‘ those experienced men :

403 ‘ Let all weights and measures be well ascertained ‘ by him; and once in six months let him re-examine ‘ them.

404 ‘ The toll at a ferry is one pana for an empty cart ;
 ‘ half a pana, for a man with a load; a quarter, for a ‘ beast used in agriculture, or for a woman; and an eighth, ‘ for an unloaded man.

405 ‘ Waggons, filled with goods packed up, shall pay ‘ toll in proportion to their value; but for empty vessels and ‘ bags, and for poor men ill-apparelled, a very small toll shall ‘ be demanded.

406 ‘ For a long passage, the freight must be proportion‘ ed to places and times; but this must be understood of ‘ passages up and down rivers: at sea there can be no set‘ tled freight.

407 ‘ A woman, who has been two months pregnant, ‘ a religious beggar, a forester in the third order, and Bráh- ‘ mens, who are students in theology, shall not be obliged to ‘ pay toll for their passage.

408 ‘ Whatever shall be broken in a boat, by the fault
 ‘ of the boatmen, shall be made good by those men collec‘ tively, each paying his portion.

409 ‘ This rule, ordained for such as pass rivers in boats, ‘ relates to the culpable neglect of boatmen on the water:
 ‘ in the case of inevitable accident, there can be no damages ‘ recovered.

410 ' THE king should order each man of the mercantile
 ' class to practise trade, or moneylending, or agriculture
 ' and attendance on cattle; and each man of the servile
 ' class to act in the service of the twiceborn.

411 ' Both him of the military, and him of the commer' cial class, if distressed for a livelihood, let some wealthy
 ' Bráhmén support, obliging them without harshness to dis-
 ' charge their several duties.

412 ' A Bráhmén, who, by his power and through ava-
 ' rice, shall cause twiceborn men, girt with the sacrificial
 ' thread, to perform servile acts, such as washing his feet,
 ' without their consent, shall be fined by the king six hun-
 ' dred panas;

413 ' But a man of the servile class, whether bought
 ' or unbought, he may compel to perform servile duty;
 ' because such a man was created by the Self-existent for
 ' the purpose of serving Bráhméns:

414 ' A Súdra, though emancipated by his master, is ' not released from a state of servitude; for of a state, which
 ' is natural to him, by whom can he be divested?

415 ' THERE are servants of seven sorts; one made
 ' captive under a standard or in battle, one maintained in ' consideration of service, one born of a female slave in
 ' the house, one sold, or given, or inherited from ancestors,
 ' and one enslaved by way of punishment on his inability to
 ' pay a large fine.

416 ' Three persons, a wife, a son, and a slave, are ' declared by law to have in general no wealth exclusively
 ' their own: the wealth, which they may earn, is regularly
 ' acquired for the man, to whom they belong.

417 ‘ A Bráhmén may seize without hesitation, if he be ‘ distressed for a subsistence, the goods of his Súdra slave ; for,
‘ as that slave can have no property, his master may take ‘ his goods.

418 ‘ With vigilant care should the king exert himself ‘ in compelling merchants and mechanicks to perform their ‘ respective duties ; for, when such men swerve from their ‘ duty, they throw this world into confusion.

419 ‘ Day by day must the king, though engaged in fo-
‘ renfick business, consider the great objects of publick mea‘ sures, and inquire into the state of his carriages, elephants, ‘ horses, and cars, his constant revenues and necessary expen‘ ses, his mines of precious metals or gems, and his treasury :

420 ‘ Thus, bringing to a conclusion all these weighty ‘ affairs, and removing from his realm and from himself every ‘ taint of sin, a king reaches the supreme path of beatitude.

CHAPTER THE NINTH:

ON THE SAME; AND ON THE COMMERCIAL AND SERVILE CLASSES.

1    I NOW will propound the immemorial duties of ‘ man and woman, who must both remain firm
 ‘ in the legal path, whether united or separated.

2    ‘ Day and night must women be held by their pro‘ tectors in a state of dependence; but in lawful and innocent ‘ recreations, though rather addicted to them, they may be ‘ left at their own disposal.

3    ‘ Their fathers protect them in childhood; their hus‘ bands protect them in youth; their sons protect them ‘ in age: a woman is never fit for independence.

4    ‘ Reprehensible is the father, who gives not his daugh‘ ter in marriage at the proper time; and the husband, who ‘ approaches not his wife in due season; reprehensible also ‘ is the son, who protects not his mother after the death of ‘ her lord.

5    ‘ Women must, above all, be restrained from the

O o o

21 ‘ And this expiation has been declared for every un‘ becoming thought, which enters her mind, concerning in‘ fidelity to her husband; since that is the beginning of adul- ‘ tery.

22 ‘ Whatever be the qualities of the man, with whom ‘ a woman is united by lawful marriage, such qualities even ‘ she assumes; like a river united with the sea.

23 ‘ ACSHAMA’LA, a woman of the lowest birth, being ‘ thus united to VASISHT’HA, and SA’RANGÍ, being united to ‘ MANDAPA’LA, were entitled to very high honour :

24 ‘ These, and other females of low birth, have at‘ tained eminence in this world by the respective good qua‘ lities of their lords.

25 ‘ Thus has the law, ever pure, been propounded ‘ for the civil conduct of men and women: hear, next, the ‘ laws concerning children, by obedience to which may ‘ happiness be attained in this and the future life.

26 ‘ WHEN good women, united with husbands in ex‘ pectation of progeny, eminently fortunate and worthy of ‘ reverence, irradiate the houses of their lords, between ‘ them and goddesses of abundance there is no diversity ‘ whatever.

27 ‘ The production of children, the nurture of them, ‘ when produced, and the daily superintendence of domef-
 ‘ tick affairs are peculiar to the wife:

28 ‘ From the wife alone proceed offspring, good house‘ hold management, solicitous attention, most exquisite ca‘ resses, and that heavenly beatitude, which she obtains for ‘ the manes of ancestors, and for the husband himself.

29 ‘ She, who deserts not her lord, but keeps in sub-

‘ jection to him her heart, her speech, and her body, shall ‘ attain his mansion in heaven, and, by the virtuous in this ‘ world, be called Sádhwi, or good and faithful;

30 ‘ But a wife, by disloyalty to her husband, shall incur ‘ disgrace in this life, and be born in the next from the ‘ womb of a shakal, or be tormented with horrible diseases, ‘ which punish vice.

31 ‘ LEARN now that excellent law, universally salutary, ‘ which was declared, concerning issue, by great and good ‘ sages formerly born.

32 ‘ They consider the male issue of a woman as the ‘ son of the lord; but, on the subject of that lord, a differ‘ ence of opinion is mentioned in the Véda; some giving ‘ that name to the real procreator of the child, and others ‘ applying it to the married possessor of the woman.

33 ‘ The woman is considered in law as the field, and ‘ the man as the grain: now vegetable bodies are formed ‘ by the united operation of the seed and the field.

34 ‘ In some cases the prolific power of the male is ‘ chiefly distinguished; in others, the receptacle of the fe‘ male; but, when both are equal in dignity, the offspring
 ‘ is most highly esteemed:

35 ‘ In general, as between the male and female powers
 ‘ of procreation, the male is held superiour; since the off‘ spring of all procreant beings is distinguished by marks of ‘ the male power.

36 ‘ Whatever be the quality of seed, scattered in a ‘ field prepared in due season, a plant of the same quality ‘ springs in that field, with peculiar visible properties.

37 ‘ Certainly this earth is called the primeval womb of ‘ many beings; but the seed exhibits not in its vegetation ‘ any properties of the womb.

38 ‘ On earth here below, even in the same ploughed ‘ field, seeds of many different forms, having been sown by ‘ husbandmen in the proper season, vegetate according to ‘ their nature :

39 ‘ Riceplants, mature in sixty days, and those, which ‘ require transplantation, mudga, tila, másha, barley, leeks, and ‘ sugarcane, all spring up according to the seeds.

40 ‘ That one plant should be sown, and another pro‘ duced, cannot happen : whatever seed may be sown, even ‘ that produces its proper stem.

41 ‘ Never must it be sown in another man’s field by ‘ him, who has natural good sense, who has been well in‘ structed, who knows the Véda and its Angas, who desires ‘ long life :

42 ‘ They, who are acquainted with past times, have ‘ preserved, on this subject, holy strains chanted by every ‘ breeze, declaring, that “ seed must not be sown in the field ‘ of another man.”

43 ‘ As the arrow of that hunter is vain, who shoots it ‘ into the wound, which another had made just before in the ‘ antelope, thus instantly perishes the seed, which a man ‘ throws into the soil of another :

44 ‘ Sages, who know former times, consider this earth
 ‘ (Prīthivī) as the wife of king PRĪTHU ; and thus they pro‘ nounce cultivated land to be the property of him, who ‘ cut away the wood, or who cleared and tilled it ; and the ‘ antelope, of the first hunter, who mortally wounded
 ‘ it.

45 ‘ Then only is a man perfect, when he consists of ‘ three persons united, his wife, himself, and his son; and thus ‘ have learned Bráhmens announced this maxim: “The hus‘ band is even one person with his wife”, for all domestick
 ‘ and religious, not for all civil, purposes.

46 ‘ Neither by sale nor desertion can a wife be releas‘ ed from her husband: thus we fully acknowledge the law ‘ enacted of old by the lord of creatures.

47 ‘ Once is the partition of an inheritance made; once ‘ is a damsel given in marriage; and once does a man say ‘ “I give”: these three are, by good men, done once for ‘ all and irrevocably.

48 ‘ As with cows, mares, female camels, slavegirls, ‘ milch buffalos, shegoats, and ewes, it is not the owner of ‘ the bull or other father, who owns the offspring, even thus ‘ is it with the wives of others.

49 ‘ They, who have no property in the field, but, ‘ having grain in their possession, sow it in soil owned by ‘ another, can receive no advantage whatever from the corn, ‘ which may be produced:

50 ‘ Should a bull beget a hundred calves on cows not ‘ owned by his master, those calves belong solely to the pro‘ prietors of the cows; and the strength of the bull was ‘ wasted:

51 ‘ Thus men, who have no marital property in wo‘ men, but sow in the fields owned by others, may raise up ‘ fruit to the husbands; but the procreator can have no ‘ advantage from it.

52 ‘ Unless there be a special agreement between the ‘ owners of the land and of the seed, the fruit belongs clear-

‘ ly to the landowner; for the receptacle is more important than the seed:

53 ‘ But the owners of the seed and of the soil may be considered in this world as joint owners of the crop, which they agree, by special compact in consideration of the seed, to divide between them.

54 ‘ Whatever man owns a field, if seed, conveyed into it by water or wind, should germinate, the plant belongs to the landowner: the mere sower takes not the fruit.

55 ‘ Such is the law concerning the offspring of cows, and mares, of female camels, goats, and sheep, of slave girls, hens, and milch buffalos, unless there be a special agreement.

56 ‘ Thus has the comparative importance of the soil and the seed been declared to you: I will next propound the law concerning women, who have no issue by their husbands.

57 ‘ The wife of an elder brother is considered as mother in law to the younger; and the wife of the younger as daughter in law to the elder:

58 ‘ The elder brother, amorously approaching the wife of the younger, and the younger, caressing the wife of the elder, are both degraded, even though authorized by the husband or spiritual guide, except when such wife has no issue.

59 ‘ On failure of issue by the husband, if he be of the servile class, the desired offspring may be procreated, either by his brother or some other sapinda, on the wife, who has been duly authorized:

60 ‘ Sprinkled with clarified butter, silent, in the night, ‘ let the kinsman thus appointed beget one son, but a second ‘ by no means, on the widow or childless wife:

61 ‘ Some sages, learned in the laws concerning women, ‘ thinking it possible, that the great object of that appoint‘ ment may not be obtained by the birth of a single son, are of ‘ opinion, that the wife and appointed kinsman may legally ‘ procreate a second.

62 ‘ The first object of the appointment being obtained
 ‘ according to law, both the brother and the widow must live ‘ together like a father and a daughter by affinity.

63 ‘ Either brother, appointed for this purpose, who de‘ viates from the strict rule, and acts from carnal desire, shall ‘ be degraded, as having defiled the bed of his daughter in law ‘ or of his father.

64 ‘ By men of twiceborn classes no widow, or child- ‘ less wife, must be authorized to conceive by any other ‘ than her lord; for they, who authorize her to conceive by ‘ any other, violate the primeval law.

65 ‘ Such a commission to a brother or other near kinsman
 ‘ is nowhere mentioned in the nuptial texts of the Véda; ‘ nor is the marriage of a widow even named in the laws ‘ concerning marriage.

66 ‘ This practice, fit only for cattle, is reprehended ‘ by learned Bráhmens; yet it is declared to have been the ‘ practice even of men, while VE'NA had sovereign power:

67 ‘ He, possessing the whole earth, and thence only called ‘ the chief of sage monarchs, gave rise to a confusion of ‘ classes, when his intellect became weak through lust.

68 ‘ Since his time the virtuous disapprove of that man,

‘ who, through delusion of mind, directs a widow to receive ‘ the caresses of another for the sake of progeny.

69 ‘ The damsel, indeed, whose husband shall die after ‘ troth verbally plighted, but before consummation, his brother ‘ shall take in marriage according to this rule:

70 ‘ Having espoused her in due form of law, she being ‘ clad in a white robe, and pure in her moral conduct, let ‘ him approach her once in each proper season, and until ‘ issue be had.

71 ‘ LET no man of sense, who has once given his ‘ daughter to a suitor, give her again to another; for he,
‘ who gives away his daughter, whom he had before given, ‘ incurs the guilt and fine of speaking falsely in a cause con‘ cerning mankind.

72 ‘ EVEN though a man have married a young wo‘ man in legal form, yet he may abandon her, if he find ‘ her blemished, afflicted with disease, or previously deflow-
‘ ered, and given to him with fraud:

73 ‘ If any man give a faulty damsel in marriage, with‘ out disclosing her blemish, the husband may annul that act
‘ of her illminded giver.

74 ‘ SHOULD a man have business abroad, let him assure ‘ a fit maintenance to his wife, and then reside for a time in ‘ a foreign country; since a wife, even though virtuous, may ‘ be tempted to act amiss, if she be distressed by want of ‘ subsistence:

75 ‘ While her husband, having settled her maintenance, ‘ resides abroad, let her continue firm in religious austerities;
‘ but, if he leave her no support, let her subsist by spinning
‘ and other blameless arts.

76 ‘ If he live abroad on account of some sacred duty, ‘ let her wait for him eight years; if on account of know‘ ledge or fame, six; if on account of pleasure, three: after ‘ those terms have expired, she must follow him.

77 ‘ FOR a whole year let a husband bear with his wife, ‘ who treats him with aversion; but, after a year, let him ‘ deprive her of her separate property, and cease to cohabit ‘ with her.

78 ‘ She, who neglects her lord, though addicted to ‘ gaming, fond of spirituous liquors, or diseased, must be ‘ deserted for three months, and deprived of her ornaments
 ‘ and household furniture:

79 ‘ But she, who is averse from a mad husband, or a ‘ deadly sinner, or an eunuch, or one without manly strength, ‘ or one afflicted with such maladies as punish crimes, must ‘ neither be deserted nor stripped of her property.

80 ‘ A WIFE, who drinks any spirituous liquors, who ‘ acts immorally, who shows hatred to her lord, who is incu-
 ‘ rably diseased, who is mischievous, who wastes his property, ‘ may at all times be superseded by another wife.

81 ‘ A barren wife may be superseded by another in the ‘ eighth year: she, whose children are all dead, in the tenth; ‘ she, who brings forth only daughters, in the eleventh; she,
 ‘ who speaks unkindly, without delay;

82 ‘ But she, who, though afflicted with illness, is be‘ loved and virtuous, must never be disgraced, though she ‘ may be superseded by another wife with her own consent.

83 ‘ If a wife, legally superseded, shall depart in wrath ‘ from the house, she must either instantly be confined, or ‘ abandoned in the presence of the whole family:

84 ‘ But she, who, having been forbidden, addicts herself to intoxicating liquor even at jubilees, or mixes in crowds at theatres, must be fined six raṭticás of gold.

85 ‘ WHEN twiceborn men take wives, both of their own class and others, the precedence, honour, and habitation of those wives, must be settled according to the order of their classes :

86 ‘ To all such married men, the wives of the same class only (not wives of a different class by any means) must perform the duty of personal attendance, and the daily business relating to acts of religion ;

87 ‘ For he, who foolishly causes those duties to be performed by any other than his wife of the same class, when she is near at hand, has been immemorially considered as a mere Chandála begotten on a Bráhmēni.

88 ‘ To an excellent and handsome youth of the same class, let every man give his daughter in marriage, according to law ; even though she have not attained her age of eight years:

89 ‘ But it is better, that the damsel, though marriageable, should stay at home till her death, than that he should ever give her in marriage to a bridegroom void of excellent qualities.

90 ‘ Three years let a damsel wait, though she be marriageable ; but, after that term, let her chuse for herself a bridegroom of equal rank :

91 ‘ If, not being given in marriage, she chuse her bridegroom, neither she, nor the youth chosen, commits any offence ;

92 ‘ But a damsel, thus electing her husband, shall not ‘ carry with her the ornaments, which she received from ‘ her father, nor those given by her mother or brethren : if ‘ she carry them away, she commits theft.

93 ‘ He, who takes to wife a damsel of full age, shall ‘ not give a nuptial present to her father ; since the father ‘ lost his dominion over her, by detaining her at a time, ‘ when she might have been a parent.

94 ‘ A man, aged thirty years, may marry a girl of ‘ twelve, if he find one dear to his heart ; or a man of twen‘ ty-four years, a damsel of eight : but, if he finish his stu-
 ‘ dentship earlier, and the duties of his next order would other‘ wise be impeded, let him marry immediately.

95 ‘ A wife, given by the gods, who are named in the ‘ bridal texts, let the husband receive and support constant‘ ly, if she be virtuous, though he married her not from ‘ inclination : such conduct will please the gods.

96 ‘ To be mothers, were women created ; and to be ‘ fathers, men ; religious rites, therefore are ordained in the ‘ Véda to be performed by the husband together with the wife.

97 ‘ If a nuptial gratuity has actually been given to ‘ a damsel, and he, who gave it, should die before marriage,
 ‘ the damsel shall be married to his brother, if she consent ;

98 ‘ But even a man of the servile class ought not to ‘ receive a gratuity, when he gives his daughter in marriage ; ‘ since a father, who takes a fee on that occasion, tacitly sells ‘ his daughter.

99 ‘ Neither ancients nor moderns, who were good ‘ men, have ever given a damsel in marriage, after she had ‘ been promised to another man ;

100 ‘ Nor, even in former creations, have we heard the ‘ virtuous approve the tacit sale of a daughter for a price, under the name of a nuptial gratuity.

101 “ Let mutual fidelity continue till death :” this, in few words, may be considered as the supreme law between husband and wife.

102 ‘ Let a man and woman, united by marriage, constantly beware, lest, at any time disunited, they violate their mutual fidelity.

103 ‘ Thus has been declared to you the law, abounding in the purest affection, for the conduct of man and wife ; together with the practice of raising up offspring to a husband of the servile class on failure of issue by him begotten : learn now the law of inheritance.

104 ‘ AFTER the death of the father and the mother, the brothers, being assembled, may divide among themselves the paternal and maternal estate ; but they have no power over it, while their parents live, unless the father chuse to distribute it.

105 ‘ The eldest brother may take entire possession of the patrimony ; and the others may live under him, as they lived under their father, unless they chuse to be separated.

106 ‘ By the eldest, at the moment of his birth, the father, having begotten a son, discharges his debt to his own progenitors ; the eldest son, therefore, ought before partition to manage the whole patrimony :

107 ‘ That son alone, by whose birth he discharges his debt, and through whom he attains immortality, was begotten from a sense of duty : all the rest are considered by the wife as begotten from love of pleasure.

108 ‘ Let the father alone support his sons ; and the ‘ first born, his younger brothers; and let them behave to ‘ the eldest, according to law, as children should behave to ‘ their father.

109 ‘ The first born, if virtuous, exalts the family, or, ‘ if vitious, destroys it: the first born is in this world the ‘ most respectable; and the good never treat him with ‘ disdain.

110 ‘ If an elder brother act, as an elder brother ought,
 ‘ he is to be revered as a mother, as a father; and, even if he ‘ have not the behaviour of a good elder brother, he should ‘ be respected as a maternal uncle, or other kinsman.

111 ‘ Either let them thus live together, or, if they de‘ sire separately to perform religious rites, let them live apart; ‘ since religious duties are multiplied in separate houses,
 ‘ their separation is, therefore, legal and even laudable.

112 ‘ The portion deducted for the eldest is a twenti‘ eth part of the heritage, with the best of all the chattels; ‘ for the middlemost, half of that, or a fortieth; for the ‘ youngest, a quarter of it, or an eightieth.

113 ‘ The eldest and youngest respectively take their ‘ just mentioned portions; and, if there be more than one ‘ between them, each of the intermediate sons has the mean ‘ portion, or the fortieth.

114 ‘ Of all the goods collected, let the first born, if he ‘ be transcendently learned and virtuous, take the best article, ‘ whatever is most excellent in its kind, and the best of ten ‘ cows or the like:

115 ‘ But, among brothers equally skilled in perform‘ ing their several duties, there is no deduction of the best
 ‘ in ten, or the most excellent chattel; though some trifle, as a ‘ mark of greater veneration, should be given to the first ‘ born.

116 ‘ If a deduction be thus made, let equal shares of ‘ the residue be ascertained and received; but, if there ‘ be no deduction, the shares must be distributed in this ‘ manner:

117 ‘ Let the eldest have a double share, and the next ‘ born, a share and a half, if they clearly surpass the rest in virtue ‘ and learning; the younger sons must have each a share: if all ‘ be equal in good qualities, they must all take share and share alike.

118 ‘ To the unmarried daughters by the same mother, let ‘ their brothers give portions out of their own allotments ‘ respectively, according to the classes of their several mothers: ‘ let each give a fourth part of his own distinct share; and ‘ they, who refuse to give it, shall be degraded.

119 ‘ Let them never divide the value of a single goat ‘ or sheep, or a single beast with uncloven hoofs: a single ‘ goat or sheep remaining after an equal distribution belongs to ‘ the first born.

120 ‘ Should a younger brother in the manner before ‘ mentioned have begotten a son on the wife of his deceased
‘ elder brother, the division must then be made equally ‘ between that son, who represents the deceased, and his natural ‘ father: thus is the law settled.

121 ‘ The representative is not so far wholly substituted ‘ by law in the place of the deceased principal, as to have the ‘ portion of an elder son; and the principal became a father ‘ in consequence of the procreation by his younger brother;
‘ the son, therefore, is entitled by law to an equal share, ‘ but not to a double portion.

122 ‘ A younger son being born of a first married wife, ‘ after an elder son had been born of a wife last married, but
 ‘ of a lower class, it may be a doubt in that case, how the ‘ division shall be made :

123 ‘ Let the son, born of the elder wife, take one ‘ most excellent bull deducted from the inheritance ; the ‘ next excellent bulls are for those, who were born first, but ‘ are inferior on account of their mothers, who were mar- ‘ ried last.

124 ‘ A son, indeed, who was first born, and brought ‘ forth by the wife first married, may take, if learned and vir- ‘ tuous, one bull and fifteen cows ; and the other sons may ‘ then take, each in right of his several mother : such is the ‘ fixed rule.

125 ‘ As between sons, born of wives equal in their ‘ class and without any other distinction, there can be no
 ‘ seniority in right of the mother ; but the seniority ordain‘ ed by law, is according to the birth.

126 ‘ The right of invoking INDRA by the texts, called ‘ śwabrāhmanyá, depends on actual priority of birth ; and
 ‘ and of twins also, if any such be conceived among different ‘ wives, the eldest is he, who was first actually born.

127 ‘ HE, who has no son, may appoint his daughter ‘ in this manner to raise up a son for him, saying : “ the ‘ “ male child, who shall be born from her in wedlock, ‘ “ shall be mine for the purpose of performing my obse-‘ “ quies.”

128 ‘ In this manner DACSHA himself, lord of created ‘ beings, anciently appointed all his fifty daughters to raise ‘ up sons to him, for the sake of multiplying his race :

129 ‘ He gave ten to DHERMA, thirteen to CASYAPA, ‘ twenty seven to SO’MA, king of Bráhmens and medical plants, ‘ after doing honour to them with an affectionate heart.

130 ‘ THE son of a man is even as himself; and as the ‘ son, such is the daughter thus appointed: how then, if he ‘ have no son, can any inherit his property, but a daughter, ‘ who is closely united with his own soul?

131 ‘ Property, given to the mother on her marriage, is ‘ inherited by her unmarried daughter; and the son of a ‘ daughter, appointed in the manner just mentioned, shall in‘ herit the whole estate of her father, who leaves no son by ‘ himself begotten:

132 ‘ The son, however, of such a daughter, who suc‘ ceeds to all the wealth of her father dying without a son, ‘ must offer two funeral cakes, one to his own father, and ‘ one to the father of his mother.

133 ‘ Between a son’s son and the son of such a daugh‘ ter, there is no difference in law; since their father and ‘ mother both sprang from the body of the same man:

134 ‘ But, a daughter having been appointed to pro‘ duce a son for her father, and a son, begotten by himself, be‘ ing afterwards born, the division of the heritage must in ‘ that case be equal; since there is no right of primogeni-‘ ture for a woman.

135 ‘ Should a daughter, thus appointed to raise up a ‘ son for her father, die by any accident without a son, the ‘ husband of that daughter may, without hesitation, possess ‘ himself of her property.

136 ‘ By that male child, whom a daughter thus ap‘ pointed, either by an implied intention or a plain decla-

‘ ration, shall produce from an husband of an equal class,
 ‘ the maternal grandfather becomes in law the father of a ‘ son: let that son give the funeral cake and possess the in‘ heritance.

137 ‘ By a son, a man obtains victory over all people;
 ‘ by a son’s son, he enjoys immortality; and, afterwards,
 ‘ by the son of that grandson, he reaches the solar abode.

138 ‘ Since the son (tráyaté) delivers his father from ‘ the hell named put; he was, therefore, called puttra by ‘ BRAHMA himself:

139 ‘ Now between the sons of his son and of his ‘ daughter thus appointed, there subsists in this world no dif‘ ference; for even the son of such a daughter delivers him ‘ in the next, like the son of his son.

140 ‘ Let the son of such a daughter offer the first fu‘ neral cake to his mother; the second to her father; the ‘ third, to her paternal grandfather.

141 ‘ OF the man, to whom a son has been given, ac- ‘ cording to a subsequent law, adorned with every virtue, that ‘ son shall take a fifth or sixth part of the heritage, though ‘ brought from a different family.

142 ‘ A given son must never claim the family and estate
 ‘ of his natural father: the funeral cake follows the family ‘ and estate; but of him, who has given away his son, the ‘ funeral oblation is extinct.

143 ‘ THE son of a wife, not authorized to have issue ‘ by another, and the son begotten, by the brother of the ‘ husband, on a wife, who has a son then living, are both un‘ worthy of the heritage; one being the child of an adul‘ terer, and the other produced through mere lust.

144 ‘ Even the son of a wife duly authorized, not begotten according to the law already propounded, is unworthy of the paternal estate; for he was procreated by an outcast:

145 But the son legally begotten on a wife, authorized for the purpose before mentioned, may inherit in all respects, if he be virtuous and learned, as a son begotten by the husband; since in that case the seed and the produce belong of right to the owner of the field.

146 ‘ He, who keeps the fixed and moveable estate of his deceased brother, maintains the widow, and raises up a son to that brother, must give to that son, at the age of fifteen, the whole of his brother’s divided property.

147 ‘ Should a wife, even though legally authorized, produce a son by the brother, or any other śapinda, of her husband, that son, if begotten with amorous embraces and tokens of impure desire, the sages proclaim baseborn and incapable of inheriting.

148 ‘ THIS law, which has preceded, must be understood of a distribution among sons begotten on women of the same class: hear now the law concerning sons by several women of different classes.

149 ‘ If there be four wives of a Bráhmén in the direct order of the classes, and sons are produced by them all, this is the rule of partition among them:

150 ‘ The chief servant in husbandry, the bull kept for impregnating cows, the riding horse or carriage, the ring and other ornaments, and the principal messuage, shall be deducted from the inheritance and given to the Bráhmén son, together with a larger share by way of preeminence.

151 ‘ Let the Bráhmén take three shares of the residue;
 ‘ the son of the Cshatriyá wife, two shares; the son of the ‘ Vaisya wife, a share and a half; and the son of the Súdrá ‘ wife, may take one share.

152 ‘ Or, if no deduction be made, let some person learn‘ ed in the law divide the whole collected estate into ten ‘ parts, and make a legal distribution by this following rule:

153 ‘ Let the son of the Bráhmán take four parts;
 ‘ the son of the Cshatriyá, three; let the son of the Vaisya have ‘ two parts; let the son of the Súdrá take a single part, if ‘ he be virtuous.

154 ‘ But, whether the Bráhmén have sons, or have no ‘ sons, by wives of the three first classes, no more than a tenth ‘ part must be given to the son of a Súdrá.

155 ‘ The son of a Bráhmén, a Cshatriya, or a Vaisya by ‘ a woman of the servile class, shall inherit no part of the ‘ estate, unless he be virtuous; nor jointly with other sons, unless ‘ his mother was lawfully married: whatever his father may ‘ give him, let that be his own.

156 ‘ All the sons of twiceborn men, produced by ‘ wives of the same class, must divide the heritage equally, ‘ after the younger brothers have given the first born his de‘ ducted allotment.

157 ‘ For a Súdra is ordained a wife of his own class,
 ‘ and no other: all, produced by her, shall have equal ‘ shares, though she have a hundred sons.

158 ‘ Of the twelve sons of men, whom MENU, sprung ‘ from the Self-existent, has named, six are kinsmen and ‘ heirs; six, not heirs, except to their own fathers, but kinsmen.

159 ‘ The son begotten by a man himself in lawful wed-

‘ lock, the son of his wife begotten in the manner before describ- ‘ ed, a son given to him, a son made or adopted, a son of con‘ cealed birth, or whose real father cannot be known, and a son ‘ rejected by his natural parents, are the six kinsmen and ‘ heirs :

160 ‘ The son of a young woman unmarried, the son of ‘ a pregnant bride, a son bought, a son by a twice married ‘ woman, a son selfgiven, and a son by a Súdrá, are the six ‘ kinsmen, but not heirs to collaterals.

161 ‘ Such advantage, as a man would gain, who should ‘ attempt to pass deep water in a boat made of woven reeds, ‘ that father obtains, who passes the gloom of death, leaving ‘ only contemptible sons, who are the eleven, or at least the six, ‘ last mentioned.

162 ‘ If the two heirs of one man be the son of his own ‘ body and a son of his wife by a kinsman, the former of ‘ whom was begotten after his recovery from an illness thought in- ‘ curable, each of the sons, exclusively of the other, shall ‘ succeed to the whole estate of his natural father.

163 ‘ The son of his own body is the sole heir to his ‘ estate, but, that all evil may be removed, let him allow a ‘ maintenance to the rest ;

164 ‘ And, when the son of the body has taken an ac‘ count of the paternal inheritance, let him give a sixth part ‘ part of it to the son of the wife begotten by a kinsman, ‘ before his father's recovery ; or a fifth part, if that son be ‘ eminently virtuous.

165 ‘ The son of the body, and the son of the wife ‘ may succeed immediately to the paternal estate in the manner
 ‘ just mentioned ; but the ten other sons can only succeed in ‘ order to the family duties and to their share of the inheritance, those last named being excluded by any one of the preceding.

166 ‘ HIM, whom a man has begotten on his own wedded wife, let him know to be the first in rank, as the son of his body.

167 ‘ He, who was begotten, according to law, on the wife of a man deceased, or impotent, or disordered, after due authority given to her, is called the lawful son of the wife.

168 ‘ He, whom his father, or mother with her husband's assent, gives to another as his son, provided that the donee have no issue, if the boy be of the same class and affectionately disposed, is considered as a son given, the gift being confirmed by pouring water.

169 ‘ He is considered as a son made or adopted, whom a man takes as his own son, the boy being equal in class, endued with filial virtues, acquainted with the merit of performing obsequies to his adopter, and with the sin of omitting them.

170 ‘ In whose mansion soever a male child shall be brought forth by a married woman, whose husband has long been absent, if the real father cannot be discovered, but if it be probable that he was of an equal class, that child belongs to the lord of the unfaithful wife, and is called a son of concealed birth in his mansion.

171 ‘ A boy, whom a man receives as his own son, after he has been deserted without just cause by his parents, or by either of them, if one be dead, is called a son rejected.

172 ‘ A son, whom the daughter of any man private‘ ly brings forth in the house of her father, if she afterwards
 ‘ marry her lover, is described as a son begotten on an un‘ married girl.

173 ‘ If a pregnant young woman marry, whether her ‘ pregnancy be known or unknown, the male child in her ‘ womb belongs to the bridegroom, and is called a son re‘ ceived with his bride.

174 ‘ He is called a son bought, whom a man, for the ‘ sake of having a son to perform his obsequies, purchases from ‘ his father and mother, whether the boy be equal or un‘ equal to himself in good qualities, for in class all adopted sons ‘ must be equal.

175 ‘ He, whom a woman, either forsaken by her lord ‘ or a widow, conceived by a second husband, whom she ‘ took by her own desire, though against law, is called the ‘ son of a woman twice married:

176 ‘ If, on her second marriage, she be still a virgin, or ‘ if she left her husband under the age of puberty and ‘ return to him at his full age, she must again perform the ‘ nuptial ceremony, either with her second, or her young and ‘ deserted, husband.

177 ‘ He, who has lost his parents, or been abandon‘ ed by them without just cause, and offers himself to a man
 ‘ as his son, is called a son selfgiven.

178 ‘ A son, begotten through lust on a Súdrá by a ‘ man of the priestly class, is even as a corpse, though alive,
 ‘ and is thence called in law a living corpse:

179 ‘ But a son, begotten by a man of the servile class ‘ on his female slave, or on the female slave of his male

‘ slave, may take a share of the heritage, if permitted by the other sons: thus is the law established.

180 ‘ These eleven sons (the son of the wife, and the rest as enumerated) are allowed by wise legislators to be substitutes in order for sons of the body, for the sake of preventing a failure of obsequies;

181 ‘ Though such, as are called sons for that purpose, but were produced from the manhood of others, belong in truth to the father, from whose manhood they severally sprang, and to no other, except by a just fiction of law.

182 ‘ If, among several brothers of the whole blood, one have a son born, MENU pronounces them all fathers of a male child by means of that son; so that, if such nephew would be the heir, the uncles have no power to adopt sons:

183 ‘ Thus if, among all the wives of the same husband, one bring forth a male child, MENU has declared them all, by means of that son, to be mothers of male issue.

184 ‘ On failure of the best, and of the next best, among those twelve sons, let the inferior in order take the heritage; but, if there be many of equal rank, let all be sharers of the estate.

185 ‘ Not brothers, nor parents, but sons, if living, or their male issue, are heirs to the deceased, but of him, who leaves no son, nor a wife, nor a daughter, the father shall take the inheritance; and, if he leave neither father, nor mother, the brothers.

186 ‘ To three ancestors must water be given at their obsequies; for three (the father, his father, and the paternal grandfather) is the funeral cake ordained: the fourth in ‘ descent is the giver of oblations to them, and their heir, if they ‘ die without nearer descendants; but the fifth has no concern ‘ with the gift of the funeral cake.

187 ‘ To the nearest sapinda, male or female, after him in ‘ the third degree, the inheritance next belongs; then, on ‘ failure of sapindas and of their issue, the samánódaca, or ‘ distant kinsman, shall be the heir; or the spiritual preceptor, ‘ or the pupil, or the fellowstudent, of the deceased:

188 ‘ On failure of all those, the lawful heirs are such ‘ Bráhmens, as have read the three Védas, as are pure in bo‘ dy and mind, as have subdued their passions; and they must ‘ consequently offer the cake: thus the rites of obsequies can‘ not fail.

189 ‘ The property of a Bráhmen shall never be taken ‘ as an escheat by the king; this is a fixed law: but the ‘ wealth of the other classes, on failure of all heirs, the ‘ king may take.

190 ‘ If the widow of a man, who died without a son, ‘ raise up a son to him by one of his kinsmen, let her deli‘ ver to that son at his full age the collected estate of the ‘ deceased, whatever it be.

191 ‘ If two sons, begotten by two successive husbands, who ‘ are both dead, contend for their property, then in the hands ‘ of their mother, let each take, exclusively of the other, his ‘ own father’s estate.

192 ‘ ON the death of the mother, let all the uterine ‘ brothers and the uterine sisters, if unmarried, equally divide
 ‘ the maternal estate: each married sister shall have a fourth ‘ part of a brother’s allotment.

193 ‘ Even to the daughters of those daughters, it is fit, that something should be given, from the affets of their maternal grandmother, on the score of natural affection.

194 ' WHAT was given before the nuptial fire, what was given on the bridal proceffion, what was given in token of love, and what was received from a brother, a mother, or a father, are confidered as the fixfold feperate property of a married woman :

195 ' What ſhe received after marriage from the family of her husband, and what her affectionate lord may have given her, ſhall be inherited, even if ſhe die in his lifetime, by her children.

196 ' It is ordained, that the property of a woman, married by the ceremonies called Bráhma, Daiva, Ársha, Gándharva, or Prájápatya, ſhall go to her husband, if ſhe die without iſſue ;

197 ' But her wealth given on the marriage called Ásura, or on either of the two others, is ordained, on her death without iſſue, to become the property of her father and mother.

198 ' If a widow, whoſe husband had other wives of different claſſes, ſhall have received wealth at any time as a gift from her father, and ſhall die without iſſue, it ſhall go to the daughter of the Bráhmani wife, or to the iſſue of that daughter.

199 ' A woman ſhould never make a hoard from the goods of her kindred, which are common to her and many; or even from the property of her lord, without his aſſent.

200 ' Such ornamental apparel, as women wear during the lives of their husbands, the heirs of thoſe husbands ſhall not divide among themſelves: they, who divide it among themſelves, fall deep into ſin.

201 ‘ Eunuchs and outcasts, persons born blind or ‘ deaf, madmen, idiots, the dumb, and such as have lost
‘ the use of a limb, are excluded from a share of the heri‘ tage;

202 ‘ But it is just, that the heir, who knows his duty, ‘ should give all of them food and raiment for life without ‘ stint, according to the best of his power: he, who gives ‘ them nothing, sinks assuredly to a region of punishment.

203 ‘ If the eunuch and the rest should at any time de‘ sire to marry, and if the wife of the eunuch should raise up a ‘ son to him by a man legally appointed, that son and the issue of ‘ such, as have children, shall be capable of inheriting.

204 ‘ After the death of the father, if the eldest bro‘ ther acquire wealth by his own efforts before partition, a share ‘ of that acquisition shall go to the younger brothers, if they ‘ have made a due progress in learning;

205 ‘ And if all of them, being unlearned, acquire pro‘ perty before partition by their own labour, there shall be ‘ an equal division of that property without regard to the first ‘ born; for it was not the wealth of their father: this rule is ‘ clearly settled.

206 ‘ Wealth, however, acquired by learning, belongs ‘ exclusively to any one of them, who acquired it; so does any ‘ thing given by a friend, received on account of marriage, ‘ or presented as a mark of respect to a guest.

207 ‘ If any one of the brethren has a competence ‘ from his own occupation, and wants not the property of ‘ his father, he may debar himself from his own share, some ‘ trifle being given him as a consideration, to prevent future ‘ strife.

208 ‘ What a brother has acquired by labour or skill, ‘ without using the patrimony, he shall not give up without ‘ his assent; for it was gained by his own exertion :

209 ‘ And if a son, by his own efforts, recover a ‘ debt or property unjustly detained, which could not be reco‘ vered before by his father, he shall not, unless by his ‘ free will, put it into parcenary with his brethren, since in ‘ fact it was acquired by himself.

210 ‘ If brethren, once divided and living again toge‘ ther as parceners, make a second partition, the shares must ‘ in that case be equal; and the first born shall have no right ‘ of deduction.

211 ‘ Should the eldest or youngest of several brothers ‘ be deprived of his share by a civil death on his entrance into ‘ the fourth order, or should any one of them die, his vested ‘ interest in a share shall not wholly be lost ;

212 ‘ But, if he leave neither son, nor wife, nor daughter, nor ‘ father, nor mother, his uterine brothers and sisters, and such ‘ brothers as were reunited after a separation, shall assemble ‘ and divide his share equally.

213 ‘ Any eldest brother, who from avarice shall de‘ fraud his younger brother, shall forfeit the honours of his pri- ‘ mogeniture, be deprived of his own share, and pay a fine
‘ to the king.

214 ‘ All those brothers, who are addicted to any vice, ‘ lose their title to the inheritance: the first born shall not ‘ appropriate it to himself, but shall give shares to the young‘ est, if they be not vitious.

215 ‘ If, among undivided brethren living with their fa‘ ther, there be a common exertion for common gain, the fa-

‘ ther shall never make an unequal division among them, ‘ when they divide their families.

216 ‘ A son, born after a division in the lifetime of his fa- ‘ ther, shall alone inherit the patrimony, or shall have a share ‘ of it with the divided brethren, if they return and unite ‘ themselves with him.

217 ‘ Of a son, dying childless and leaving no widow, the ‘ father and mother shall take the estate; and, the mother al‘ so being dead, the paternal grandfather and grandmother shall ‘ take the heritage on failure of brothers and nephews.

218 ‘ When all the debts and wealth have been justly ‘ distributed according to law, any property, that may after‘ wards be discovered, shall be subject to a similar distribution.

219 ‘ Apparel, carriages, or riding horses, and ornaments ‘ of ordinary value, which any of the heirs had used by consent before ‘ partition, dressed rice, water in a well or cistern, female slaves, ‘ family priests, or spiritual counsellors, and pasture ground ‘ for cattle, the wife have declared indivisible, and still to be ‘ used as before.

220 ‘ Thus have the laws of inheritance, and the rule ‘ for the conduct of sons (whether the son of the wife or ‘ others) been expounded to you in order: learn at pre‘ sent the law concerning games of chance.

221 ‘ GAMING, either with inanimate or with animated ‘ things, let the king exclude wholly from his realm: both ‘ those modes of play cause destruction to princes.

222 ‘ Such play with dice and the like, or by matches be- ‘ tween rams and cocks, amounts to open theft; and the king ‘ must ever be vigilant in suppressing both modes of play:

223 ‘ Gaming with lifeless things is known among men by the name of dyúta; but samáhwaya signifies a match between living creatures.

224 ' Let the king punish corporally at discretion both the gamester and the keeper of a gaming house, whether they play with inanimate or animated things; and men of the servile class, who wear the string and other marks of the twiceborn.

225 ' Gamesters, publick dancers and singers, revilers of scripture, open hereticks, men who perform not the duties of their several classes, and sellers of spirituous liquor, let him instantly banish from the town:

226 ' Those wretches, lurking like unseen thieves in the dominion of a prince, continually harass his good subjects with their vitious conduct.

227 ' Even in a former creation was this vice of gaming found a great provoker of enmity: let no sensible man, therefore, addict himself to play even for his amusement:

228 ' On the man addicted to it, either privately or openly, let punishment be inflicted at the discretion of the king.

229 ' A MAN of the military, commercial, or servile class, who cannot pay a fine, shall discharge the debt by his labour: a priest shall discharge it by little and little.

230 ' For women, children, persons of crazy intellect, the old, the poor, and the infirm, the king shall order punishment with a small whip, a twig, or a rope.

231 ' THOSE ministers, who are employed in publick affairs, and, inflamed by the blaze of wealth, mar the business of any person concerned, let the king strip of all their property.

232. ' Such, as forge royal edicts, cause dissensions among the great ministers, or kill women, priests, or children, let the king put to death; and such, as adhere to his enemies.

233. ' Whatever business has at any time been transacted conformably to law, let him consider as finally settled, and refuse to unravel;

234. ' But whatever business has been concluded illegally by his ministers or by a judge, let the king himself re-examine; and let him fine them each a thousand panas.

235. ' The slayer of a priest, a soldier or merchant drinking arak, or a priest drinking arak, mead, or rum, he, who steals the gold of a priest, and he, who violates the bed of his natural or spiritual father, are all to be considered respectively as offenders in the highest degree, except those, whose crimes are not fit to be named:

236. ' On such of those four, as have not actually performed an expiation, let the king legally inflict corporal punishment, together with a fine.

237. ' For violating the paternal bed, let the mark of a female part be impressed on the forehead with hot iron; for drinking spirits, a vintner's flag; for stealing sacred gold, a dog's foot; for murdering a priest, the figure of a headless corpse:

238. ' With none to eat with them, with none to sacrifice with them, with none to read with them, with none to be allied by marriage to them, abject and excluded from all social duties, let them wander over this earth:

239. ' Branded with indelible marks, they shall be deserted by their paternal and maternal relations, treated by ‘ none with affection, received by none with respect : such is ‘ the ordinance of MENU.

240 ‘ Criminals of all the classes, having performed an ‘ expiation, as ordained by law, shall not be marked on the ‘ forehead, but condemned to pay the highest fine:

241 ‘ For crimes by a priest, who had a good character ‘ before his offence, the middle fine shall be set on him ; or, if ‘ his crime was premeditated, he shall be banished from the ‘ realm, taking with him his effects and his family ;

242 ‘ But men of the other classes, who have committed ‘ those crimes, though without premeditation, shall be stripped ‘ of all their possessions ; and, if their offence was premedi‘ tated, shall be corporally, or even capitally, punished, ‘ according to circumstances.

243 ‘ *LET no virtuous prince appropriate the wealth of ‘ a criminal in the highest degree ; for he, who appropriates
‘ it through covetousness, is contaminated with the same ‘ guilt :*

244 ‘ *Having thrown such a fine into the waters, let him
‘ offer it to VARUNA ; or let him bestow it on some priest ‘ of eminent learning in the scriptures :*

245 ‘ VARUNA is the lord of punishment ; he holds a ‘ rod even over kings ; and a priest, who has gone through ‘ the whole Véda, is equal to a sovereign of all the world.

246 ‘ Where the king abstains from receiving to his own ‘ use the wealth of such offenders, there children are born in ‘ due season and enjoy long lives ;

247 ‘ There the grain of husbandmen rises abundantly, as ‘ it was respectively sown ; there no younglings die, nor is ‘ one deformed animal born.

248 ' SHOULD a man of the basest class, with preconceived malice, give pain to Bráhmens, let the prince corporally punish him by various modes, that may raise terror.

249 ' A king is pronounced equally unjust in releasing the man, who deserves punishment, and in punishing the man, who deserves it not : He is just, who always inflicts the punishment ordained by law.

250 ' These established rules for administering justice, between two litigant parties, have been propounded at length under eighteen heads.

251 ' THUS fully performing all duties required by law, let a king seek with justice to possess regions yet unpossessed, and, when they are in his possession, let him govern them well.

252 ' His realm being completely arranged and his fortresses amply provided, let him ever apply the most diligent care to eradicate bad men resembling thorny weeds, as the law directs.

253 ' By protecting such as live virtuously, and by rooting up such as live wickedly, those kings, whose hearts are intent on the security of their people, shall rise to heaven.

254 ' Of that prince, who takes a revenue, without restraining rogues, the dominions are thrown into disorder, and himself shall be precluded from a celestial abode ;

255 ' But of him, whose realm, by the strength of his arm, is defended and free from terror, the dominions continually flourish, like trees duly watered.

256 ' LET the king, whose emissaries are his eyes, discern well the two sorts of rogues, the open and the concealed, who deprive other men of their wealth :

257 ‘ Open rogues are they, who subsist by cheating in ‘ various marketable commodities; and concealed rogues
 ‘ are they, who steal and rob in forests and the like secret ‘ places.

258 ‘ Receivers of bribes, extorters of money by threats, ‘ debasers of metals, gamesters, fortunetellers, impostors, and ‘ professors of palmistry;

259 ‘ Elephantbreakers and quacks, not performing what ‘ they engage to perform, pretended artists, and subtil har-‘ lots;

260 ‘ These and the like thorny weeds, overspreading the ‘ world, let the king discover with a quick sight, and others, ‘ who act ill in secret; worthless men, yet bearing the out‘ ward signs of the worthy.

261 ‘ Having detected them, by the means of trusty per‘ sons disguised, who pretend to have the same occupation ‘ with them, and of spies placed in several stations, let him ‘ bring them by artifice into his power:

262 ‘ Then, having fully proclaimed their respective ‘ criminal acts, let the king inflict punishment legally, ac‘ cording to the crimes proved;

263 ‘ Since, without certain punishment, it is impossible ‘ to restrain the delinquency of scoundrels with depraved ‘ souls, who secretly prowl over this earth.

264 ‘ Muchfrequented places, cisterns of water, bake
 ‘ houses, the lodgings of harlots, taverns and victualling ‘ shops, squares where four ways meet, large well known ‘ trees, assemblies, and publick spectacles;

265 ‘ Old courtyards, thickets, the houses of artists, ‘ empty mansions, groves, and gardens;

266 ‘ These and the like places let the king guard, for ‘ the prevention of robberies, with soldiers, both stationa‘ ry and patrolling, as well as with secret watchmen.

267 ‘ By the means of able spies, once thieves but reform- ‘ ed, who, well knowing the various machinations of rogues, ‘ associate with them and follow them, let the king detect
 ‘ and draw them forth :

268 ‘ On pretexts of dainty food and gratifications, or ‘ of seeing some wise priest, who could ensure their success, or on ‘ pretence of mock battles and the like feats of strength, let the ‘ spies procure an assembly of those men.

269 ‘ Such as refuse to go forth on those occasions, de‘ terred by former punishments, which the king had inflicted, let ‘ him seize by force, and put to death, on proof of their guilt, ‘ with their friends and kinsmen, paternal and maternal, if ‘ proved to be their confederates.

270 ‘ Let not a just prince kill a man convicted of sim‘ ple theft, unless taken with the mainer or with implements ‘ of robbery ; but any thief, taken with the mainer, or with ‘ such implements, let him destroy without hesitation ;

271 ‘ And let him slay all those, who give robbers food ‘ in towns, or supply them with implements, or afford them ‘ shelter.

272 ‘ Should those men, who were appointed to guard ‘ any districts, or those of the vicinity, who were employed ‘ for that purpose, be neutral in attacks by robbers and inac- ‘ tive in seizing them, let him instantly punish them as thieves.

273 ‘ Him, who lives apparently by the rules of his ‘ class, but really departs from those rules, let the king severe‘ ly punish by fine, as a wretch, who violates his duty.

274 ‘ They, who give no assistance on the plundering ‘ of a town, on the forcible breaking of a dike, or on see‘ ing a robbery on the highway, shall be banished with their ‘ cattle and utensils.

275 ‘ Men, who rob the king’s treasure, or obstinately
 ‘ oppose his commands, let him destroy by various modes
 ‘ of just punishment; and those, who encourage his enemies.

276 ‘ Of robbers, who break a wall or partition, and ‘ commit theft in the night, let the prince order the hands to ‘ be lopped off, and themselves to be fixed on a sharp ‘ stake.

277 ‘ Two fingers of a cutpurse, the thumb and the index, ‘ let him cause to be amputated on his first conviction; on ‘ the second, one hand and one foot; on the third, he shall ‘ suffer death.

278 ‘ Such, as give thieves fire, such as give them food, ‘ such as give them arms and apartments, and such as know‘ ingly receive a thing stolen, let the king punish as he would ‘ punish a thief.

279 ‘ The breaker of a dam to secure a pool, let him ‘ punish by long immersion under water, or by keen corpo‘ ral suffering; or the offender shall repair it, but must pay
 ‘ the highest mulct.

280 ‘ Those, who break open the treasury, or the arse‘ nal, or the temple of a deity, and those, who carry off ‘ royal elephants, horses, or cars, let him without hesitation ‘ destroy.

281 ‘ He, who shall take away the water of an ancient ‘ pool, or shall obstruct a watercourse, must be condemned
 ‘ to pay the lowest usual amercement.

282 ‘ HE, who shall drop his ordure on the king’s highway, except in case of necessity, shall pay two panas and immediately remove the filth;

283 ‘ But a person in urgent necessity, a very old man, a pregnant woman, and a child, only deserve reproof, and shall clean the place themselves: this is a settled rule.

284 ‘ ALL physicians and surgeons acting unskilfully in their several professions, must pay for injury to brute animals the lowest, but for injury to human creatures the middle, amercement.

285 ‘ THE breaker of a footbridge, of a publick flag, of a palisade, and of idols made of clay, shall repair what he has broken, and pay a mulct of five hundred panas.

286 ‘ FOR mixing impure with pure commodities, for piercing fine gems, as diamonds or rubies, and for boring pearls or inferiour gems improperly, the fine is the lowest of the three; but damages must always be paid.

287 ‘ THE man, who shall deal unjustly with purchasers at a fair price by delivering goods of less value, or shall sell at a high price goods of ordinary value, shall pay according to circumstances the lowest or the middle amercement.

288 ‘ LET the king place all prisons near a publick road, where offenders may be seen wretched or disfigured.

289 ‘ HIM, who breaks down a publick wall, him, who fills up a publick ditch, him, who throws down a publick gate, the king shall speedily banish.

290 ‘ FOR all sacrifices to destroy innocent men, the punishment is a fine of two hundred panas; and for machinations with poisonous roots, and for the various charms

‘ and witcheries intended to kill, by persons not effecting their purpose.

291 ‘ THE feller of bad grain for good, or of good feed placed at the top of the bag, to conceal the bad below, and the destroyer of known landmarks, must suffer such corporal punishment as will disfigure them ;

292 ‘ But the most pernicious of all deceivers is a goldsmith, who commits frauds : the king shall order him to be cut piecemeal with razors.

293 ‘ FOR stealing implements of husbandry, weapons, and prepared medicines, let the king award punishment according to the time and according to their use.

294 ‘ THE king, and his council, his metropolis, his realm, his treasure, and his army, together with his ally, are the seven members of his kingdom ; whence it is called Septánga :

295 ‘ Among those seven members of a kingdom, let him consider the ruin of the first, and so forth in order, as the greatest calamity ;

296 ‘ Yet, in a sevenparted kingdom here below, there is no supremacy among the several parts, from any preeminence in useful qualities : but all the parts must reciprocally support each other, like the three staves of a holy mendicant :

297 ‘ In these and those acts, indeed, this and that member may be distinguished ; and the member, by which any affair is transacted, has the preeminence in that particular affair.

298 ‘ WHEN the king employs emissaries, when he exerts power, when he regulates publick business, let him in-

‘ variably know both his own strength and that of his ene‘ my,

299 ‘ With all their several distresses and vices : let him ‘ then begin his operations, having maturely considered the ‘ greater and less importance of particular acts :

300 ‘ Let him, though frequently disappointed, renew his ‘ operations, how fatigued soever, again and again ; since for‘ tune always attends the man, who, having begun well, strenu‘ ously renews his efforts.

301 ‘ ALL the ages, called Satya, Trétá, Dwápara, and ‘ Calí, depend on the conduct of the king ; who is declared ‘ in turn to represent each of those ages :

302 ‘ Sleeping, he is the Calí age ; waking, the Dwápara ; ‘ exerting himself in action, the Trétá ; living virtuously, the ‘ Satya.

303 ‘ Of INDRA, of SÚRYA, of PAVANA, of YAMA, of ‘ VARUNA, of CHANDRA, of AGNI, and of PRĪT'HIVÌ, let the ‘ king emulate the power and attributes.

304 ‘ As INDRA sheds plentiful showers during the ‘ four rainy months, thus let him, acting like the regent of ‘ clouds, rain just gratifications over his kingdom :

305 ‘ As SÚRYA with strong rays draws up the water ‘ during eight months, thus let him, performing the func‘ tion of the sun, gradually draw from his realm the legal re‘ venue :

306 ‘ As PAVANA, when he moves, pervades all crea‘ tures, thus let him, imitating the regent of wind, pervade
 ‘ all places by his concealed emissaries :

307 ‘ As YAMA, at the appointed time, punishes friends ‘ and foes, or those who revere, and those who contemn, him,

‘ thus let the king, resembling the judge of departed spirits, ‘ punish offending subjects:

308 ‘ As VARUNA most assuredly binds the guilty in ‘ fatal cords, thus let him, representing the genius of wa‘ ter, keep offenders in close confinement:

309 ‘ When the people are no less delighted on seeing ‘ the king, than on seeing the full moon, he appears in the ‘ character of CHANDRA:

310 ‘ Against criminals let him ever be ardent in wrath, ‘ let him be splendid in glory, let him consume wicked mi‘ nisters, thus emulating the functions of AGNI, regent of fire.

311 ‘ As PRĪTHIVĪ supports all creatures equally, thus ‘ a king, sustaining all subjects, resembles in his office the ‘ goddess of earth.

312 ‘ Engaged in these duties and in others, with con‘ tinual activity, let the king above all things restrain robbers, ‘ both in his own territories and in those of other princes, ‘ from which they come, or in which they seek refuge.

313 ‘ LET him not, although in the greatest distress for ‘ money, provoke Bráhmens to anger by taking their property; ‘ for they, once enraged, could immediately by sacrifices and ‘ imprecations destroy him with his troops, elephants, horses ‘ and cars.

314 ‘ Who, without perishing, could provoke those holy ‘ men, by whom, that is, by whose ancestors, under BRAHMA, ‘ the alldevouring fire was created, the sea with waters not ‘ drinkable, and the moon with its wane and increase?

315 ‘ What prince could gain wealth by oppressing
‘ those, who, if angry, could frame other worlds and regents ‘ of worlds, could give being to new gods and mortals?

316 ' What man, desirous of life, would injure those,
 ' by the aid of whom, that is, by whose oblations, worlds
 ' and gods perpetually subsist; those, who are rich in
 ' the learning of the Véda?

317 ' A Bráhmén, whether learned or ignorant, is a ' powerful divinity; even as fire is a powerful divinity, whe-
 ' ther consecrated or popular.

318 ' Even in places for burning the dead, the bright
 ' fire is undefiled; and, when presented with clarified but' ter at subsequent sacrifices, blazes again with extreme splen-
 ' dour:

319 ' Thus, although Bráhméns employ themselves in
 ' all sorts of mean occupation, they must invariably be ho-
 ' noured; for they are something transcendently divine.

320 ' Of a military man, who raises his arm violently
 ' on all occasions against the priestly class, the priest him-
 ' self shall be the chastiser; since the soldier originally pro-
 ' ceeded from the Bráhmén.

321 ' From the waters arose fire; from the priest, the ' soldier; from stone, iron: their allpenetrating force is in-
 ' effectual in the places, whence they respectively sprang.

322 ' The military class cannot prosper without the sa-
 ' cerdotal, nor can the sacerdotal be raised without the mili' tary: both classes, by cordial union, are exalted in this
 ' world and in the next.

323 ' SHOULD the king be near his end through some
 ' incurable disease, he must bestow on the priests all his
 ' riches accumulated from legal fines; and, having duly
 ' committed his kingdom to his son, let him seek death in
 ' battle, or, if there be no war, by abstaining from food.

324 ‘ Thus conducting himself, and ever firm in dis‘ charging his royal duties, let the king employ all his mi‘ nisters in acts beneficial to his people.

325 ‘ These rules for the conduct of a military man ‘ having been propounded, let mankind next hear the ‘ rules for the commercial and servile classes in due ‘ order.

326 ‘ LET the Vaisya, having been girt with his proper ‘ sacrificial thread, and having married an equal wife, be ‘ always attentive to his business of agriculture and trade, and ‘ to that of keeping cattle;

327 ‘ Since the lord of created beings, having formed ‘ herds and flocks, intrusted them to the care of the Vaisya, ‘ while he intrusted the whole human species to the Bráh-
 ‘ men and the Cshatriya:

328 ‘ Never must a Vaisya be disposed to say, “ I keep ‘ no cattle”; nor, he being willing to keep them, must they ‘ by any means be kept by men of another class.

329 ‘ Of gems, pearls, and coral, of iron, of woven ‘ cloth, of perfumes and of liquids, let him well know the ‘ prices both high and low :

330 ‘ Let him be skilled likewise in the time and manner
 ‘ of sowing seeds, and in the bad or good qualities of land ;
 ‘ let him also perfectly know the correct modes of measur‘ ing and weighing,

331 ‘ The excellence or defects of commodities, the ‘ advantages and disadvantages of different regions, the pro‘ bable gain or loss on vendible goods, and the means of ‘ breeding cattle with large augmentation :

332 ‘ Let him know the just wages of servants, the va‘ rious dialects of men, the best way of keeping goods, and ‘ whatever else belongs to purchase and sale.

333 ‘ Let him apply the most vigilant care to augment ‘ his wealth by performing his duty; and, with great solici‘ tude, let him give nourishment to all sentient creatures..

334 ‘ SERVILE attendance on Bráhmens learned in the ‘ Véda, chiefly on such as keep house and are famed for ‘ virtue, is of itself the highest duty of a Súdra, and leads ‘ him to future beatitude :

335 ‘ Pure in body and mind, humbly serving the three ‘ higher classes, mild in speech, never arrogant, ever seek‘ ing refuge in Bráhmens principally, he may attain the most ‘ eminent class in another transmigration.

336 ‘ THIS clear system of duties has been promulgated ‘ for the four classes, when they are not in distress for sub‘ sistence; now learn in order their several duties in times ‘ of necessity.’

CHAPTER THE TENTH:

ON THE MIXED CLASSES; AND ON TIMES OF DISTRESS.

1 ‘ LET the three twiceborn classes, remaining firm
‘ in their several duties, carefully read the Véda;
‘ but a Bráhmén must explain it to them, not a man of the ‘ other two classes: this is an established rule.

2 ‘ The Bráhmén must know the means of subsistence ‘ ordained by law for all the classes, and must declare them ‘ to the rest: let himself likewise act in conformity to law.

3 ‘ From priority of birth, from superiority of origin, ‘ from a more exact knowledge of scripture, and from a ‘ distinction in the sacrificial thread, the Bráhmén is the lord ‘ of all classes.

4 ‘ The three twiceborn classes are the sacerdotal, the ‘ military, and the commercial; but the fourth, or servile, ‘ is onceborn, that is, has no second birth from the gáyatrí,
‘ and wears no thread: nor is there a fifth pure class.

5 ‘ IN all classes they, and they only, who are born, in

A a a a

‘ a direct order, of wives equal in class and virgins at the ‘ time of marriage, are to be considered as the same in class
 ‘ with their fathers :

6 ‘ Sons, begotten by twiceborn men, on women of ‘ the class next immediately below them, wife legislators ‘ call similar, not the same, in class with their parents, because ‘ they are degraded, to a middle rank between both, by the ‘ lowness of their mothers: they are named in order, Múr-‘ dhábhishikṭa, Máhishya, and Carana, or Cayast’ha; and ‘ their several employments are teaching military exercises ; ‘ music, astronomy, and keeping herds ; and attendance on ‘ princes.

7 ‘ Such is the primeval rule for the sons of women ‘ one degree lower than their husbands : for the sons of wo‘ men two or three degrees lower, let this rule of law be ‘ known.

8 ‘ From a Bráhmen, on a wife of the Vaisya class, is ‘ born a son called Ambasht’ha, or Vaidya, on a Súdra wife
 ‘ a Nisháda, named also Párasava :

9 ‘ From a Cshatriya, on a wife of the Súdra class, springs ‘ a creature, called Ugra, with a nature partly warlike and ‘ partly servile, ferocious in his manners, cruel in his acts.

10 ‘ The sons of a Bráhmen by women of three lower classes,
 ‘ of a Cshatriya by women of two, and of a Vaisya by one lower ‘ class, are called apasadáh, or degraded below their fathers.

11 ‘ From a Cshatriya, by a Bráhmení wife, springs a ‘ Súta by birth; from a Vaisya, by a military or sacerdotal wife, ‘ spring a Mágadha and a Vaidéha.

12 ‘ From a Súdra, on women of the commercial, mi‘ litary, and priestly classes, are born sons of a mixed breed,

‘ called ‘Ayógava, Cshattri, and Chandála, the lowest of mortals.

13 ‘ As the Ambasht’ha and Ugra, born in a direct order with one class between those of their parents, are considered in law, so are the Cshattri and the Vaidéha, born in an inverse order with one intermediate class; and all four may be touched without impurity.

14 ‘ Those sons of the twiceborn, who are begotten on women without an interval (Antara) between the classes mentioned in order, the wife call Anantaras, giving them a distinct name from the lower degree of their mothers.

15 ‘ From a Bráhmen, by a girl of the Ugra tribe, is born an ‘Avrīta; by one of the Ambasht’ha tribe, an ‘Abhīra; by one of the ‘Ayógava tribe, a Dhigvana.

16 ‘ The ‘Ayógava, the Cshattri, and the Chandála, the lowest of men, spring from a Súdra in an inverse order of the classes, and are, therefore, all three excluded from the performance of obsequies to their ancestors:

17 ‘ From a Vaisya the Mágadha and Vaidéha, from a Cshatriya the Súta only, are born in an inverse order; and they are three other sons excluded from funeral rites to their fathers.

18 ‘ The son of a Nisháda, by a woman of the Súdra class, is by tribe a Puccasa; but the son of a Súdra by a Nishádi woman, is named Cuccutaca.

19 ‘ One, born of a Cshattri by an Ugrá, is called Swapáca; and one, begotten by a Vaidéha on an Ambasht’hi wife, is called Véna.

20 ‘ Those, whom the twiceborn beget on women of equal classes, but who perform not the proper ceremonies

‘ of assuming the thread, and the like, people denominate Vrát-
 ‘ yas, or excluded from the gáyatrí.

21 ‘ From such an outcast Bráhmen springs a son of ‘ a sinful nature, who in different countries is named a Bhúrja- ‘ cantaca, an Avantya, a Vátadhána, a Pushpadha, and a Saic’ha:

22 ‘ From such an outcast Cshatriya comes a son called ‘ a J’halla, a Malla, a Nich’hivi, a Nata, a Carana, a C’hasa, ‘ and a Dravira:

23 ‘ From such an outcast Vaifya is born a son called ‘ Sudhanwan, Chárya, Cáruska, Vijanman, Maitra, and Sat- ‘ wata.

24 ‘ By intermixtures of the classes, by their marriages ‘ with women who ought not to be married, and by their ‘ omission of prescribed duties, impure classes have been ‘ formed.

25 ‘ THOSE men of mingled births, who were born ‘ in the inverse order of classes, and who intermarry among ‘ themselves, I will now compendiously describe.

26 ‘ The Súta, the Vaidéha, and the Chandála, that low‘ est of mortals, the Mágadha, the Cshattri by tribe, and the ‘ Ayógava,

27 ‘ These fix beget similar sons on women of their ‘ own classes, or on women of the same class with their ‘ mothers; and they produce the like from women of the ‘ two highest classes, and of the lowest:

28 ‘ As a twiceborn son may spring from a Bráhmen ‘ by women of two classes out of three, a similar son, when ‘ there is no interval, and an equal son from a woman of ‘ his own class, it is thus in the case of the low tribes in order.

29 ‘ Those fix beget, on women of their own tribes,

‘ reciprocally, very many despicable and abject races even ‘ more foul than their begetters.

30 ‘ Even as a Súdra begets, on a Bráhmenì woman, a ‘ son more vile than himself, thus any other low man begets, ‘ on women of the four classes, a son yet lower.

31 ‘ The six low classes, marrying inversely, beget fif‘ teen yet lower tribes, the base producing still baser; and ‘ in a direct order they produce fifteen more.

32 ‘ A Dasyu, or outcast of any pure class, begets on an ‘ Ayógavi woman a Sairindhra, who should know how to at‘ tend and to dress his master; though not a slave, he must ‘ live by slavish work, and may also gain subsistence by ‘ catching wild beasts in toils:

33 ‘ A Vaidéha begets on her a sweetvoiced Maitréyaca, ‘ who, ringing a bell at the appearance of dawn, continually ‘ praises great men:

34 ‘ A Nisháda begets on her a Márgava, or Dása, who ‘ subsists by his labour in boats, and is named Caiverta by ‘ those, who dwell in Aryáverta, or the land of the venerable.

35 ‘ Those three of a base tribe are severally begotten
‘ on Ayógavi women, who wear the clothes of the deceased ‘ and eat reprehensible food.

36 ‘ From a Nisháda springs by a woman of the Vaidéha
‘ tribe, a Carávara, who cuts leather, and from a Vaidéha ‘ spring by women of the Carávara and Nisháda casts, an ‘ Andhra and a Méda, who must live without the town.

37 ‘ From a Chandála, by a Vaidéhi woman, comes a ‘ Pándusópaca, who works with cane and reeds; and from a ‘ Nisháda, an Ahindica, who acts as a jailor.

38 ‘ From a Chandála, by a Puccasi woman, is born a

B b b b

‘ Sópáca, who lives by punishing criminals condemned by ‘ the king, a sinful wretch ever despised by the virtuous.

39 ‘ A Nishádi woman, by a Chandála, produces a son ‘ called Antyavafáyin, employed in places for burning the ‘ dead, contemned even by the contemptible.

40 ‘ These, among various mixed classes, have been de‘ scribed by their several fathers and mothers; and, whe‘ ther concealed or open, they may be known by their oc‘ cupations.

41 ‘ Six sons, three begotten on women of the same ‘ class, and three on women of lower classes, must perform ‘ the duties of twiceborn men; but those, who are born in ‘ an inverse order, and called lowborn, are equal, in respect ‘ of duty, to mere Súdras.

42 ‘ By the force of extreme devotion and of exalted ‘ fathers, all of them may rise in time to high birth, as by ‘ the reverse they may sink to a lower state, in every age a‘ mong mortals in this inferiour world.

43 ‘ THE following races of Cshatriyas, by their omission
 ‘ of holy rites and by seeing no Bráhmens, have gradually sunk ‘ among men to the lowest of the four classes:

44 ‘ Paund’racas, Odras, and Draviras; Cámbójas, Yava- ‘ nas, and Sacas; Páradas, Pahlavas, Chínas, Cirátas, Dera- ‘ das, and C’hasas.

45 ‘ All those tribes of men, who sprang from the ‘ mouth, the arm, the thigh, and the foot of BRAHMA, but ‘ who became outcasts by having neglected their duties, are cal‘ led Dasyus, or plunderers, whether they speak the language ‘ of Mléchch’has, or that of Aryas.

46 ‘ THOSE sons of the twiceborn, who are said to be ‘ degraded, and who are considered as lowborn, shall ‘ subsist only by such employments, as the twiceborn de-‘ pise.

47 ‘ Sútas must live by managing horses and by driving ‘ cars; Ambasht’has, by curing disorders; Vaidéhas, by wai‘ ting on women; Mágadhas, by travelling with merchandize;

48 ‘ Nishádas, by catching fish; an Ayógava, by the ‘ work of a carpenter; a Méda, an Andhra, and (the ‘ sons of a Bráhmen by wives of the Vaidéha and Ugra classes, ‘ respectively called) a Chunchu and a Madgu, by slaying ‘ beasts of the forest;

49 ‘ A Cshattri, an Ugra, and a Puccasa, by killing or ‘ confining such animals as live in holes: Dhigvanas, by sel‘ ling leather; Vénas, by striking musical instruments:

50 ‘ Near large publick trees, in places for burning the ‘ dead, on mountains, and in groves, let those tribes dwell, ‘ generally known, and engaged in their several works.

51 ‘ THE abode of a Chandála and a Swapáca must be ‘ out of the town; they must not have the use of entire ‘ vessels; their sole wealth must be dogs and asses:

52 ‘ Their clothes must be the mantles of the deceased;
 ‘ their dishes for food, broken pots; their ornaments, rusty ‘ iron; continually must they roam from place to place:

53 ‘ Let no man, who regards his duty religious and ci‘ vil, hold any intercourse with them; let their transactions ‘ be confined to themselves, and their marriages only be‘ tween equals:

54 ‘ Let food be given to them in pottsherds, but not ‘ by the hands of the giver; and let them not walk by ‘ night in cities or towns:

55 ‘ By day they may walk about for the purpose of ‘ work, distinguished by the king’s badges; and they shall ‘ carry out the corpse of every one, who dies without kin‘ dred: such is the fixed rule.

56 ‘ They shall always kill those, who are to be slain by ‘ the sentence of the law, and by the royal warrant; and ‘ let them take the clothes of the slain, their beds, and their ‘ ornaments.

57 ‘ HIM, who was born of a sinful mother, and conse- ‘ quently in a low class, but is not openly known, who, ‘ though worthless in truth, bears the semblance of a wor‘ thy man, let people discover by his acts:

58 ‘ Want of virtuous dignity, harshness of speech, cru‘ elty, and habitual neglect of prescribed duties, betray in ‘ this world the son of a criminal mother.

59 ‘ Whether a man of debased birth assume the charac‘ ter of his father or of his mother, he can at no time con‘ ceal his origin:

60 ‘ He, whose family had been exalted, but whose pa‘ rents were criminal in marrying, has a base nature, accord‘ ing as the offence of his mother was great or small.

61 ‘ In whatever country such men are born, as destroy ‘ the purity of the four classes, that country soon perishes ‘ together with the natives of it.

62 ‘ Desertion of life, without reward, for the sake of ‘ preserving a priest or a cow, a woman or a child, may ‘ cause the beatitude of those baseborn tribes.

63 ‘ Avoiding all injury to animated beings, veracity, ab‘ stinence from theft, and from unjust seizure of property, clean‘ liness, and command over the bodily organs, form the com-

‘ pendious system of duty, which MENU has ordained for ‘ the four classes.

64 ‘ SHOULD the tribe sprung from a Bráhmén, by a Súdra
 ‘ woman, produce a succession of children by the marriages
 ‘ of its women with other Bráhméns, the low tribe shall be ‘ raised to the highest in the seventh generation.

65 ‘ As the son of a Súdra may thus attain the rank of ‘ a Bráhmén, and as the son of a Bráhmén may sink to a le‘ vel with Súdras, even so must it be with him, who springs
 ‘ from a Cshatriya; even so with him, who was born of a ‘ Vaisya.

66 ‘ IF there be a doubt, as to the preference between ‘ him, who was begotten by a Bráhmén for his pleasure, but ‘ not in wedlock, on a Súdra woman, and him, who was be‘ gotten by a Súdra on a Bráhméní,

67 ‘ Thus is it removed: he, who was begotten by an ‘ exalted man on a base woman, may by his good acts become ‘ respectable; but he, who was begotten on an exalted wo‘ man by a base man, must himself continue base:

68 ‘ Neither of the two (as the law is fixed) shall be ‘ girt with a sacred string; not the former, because his mo‘ ther was low; nor the second, because the order of the ‘ classes was inverted.

69 ‘ As good grain, springing from good soil, is in all ‘ respects excellent, thus a man, springing from a respectable ‘ father by a respectable mother, has a claim to the whole ‘ institution of the twiceborn.

70 ‘ Some sages give a preference to the grain; others ‘ to the field; and others consider both field and grain; on ‘ this point the decision follows:

C c c c

71 ‘ Grain, cast into bad ground, wholly perishes, and ‘ a good field with no grain sown in it, is a mere heap of clods ;

72 ‘ But since, by the virtue of eminent fathers, even ‘ the sons of wild animals, as Rīshyaśringa, and others, have ‘ been transformed into holy men revered and extolled,
 ‘ the paternal fide, therefore, prevails.

73 ‘ BRAHMA himself, having compared a Súdra, who ‘ performs the duties of the twiceborn, with a twiceborn ‘ man, who does the acts of a Súdra, said : “ Those two “ are neither equal nor unequal,” that is, they are neither ‘ equal in rank, nor unequal in bad conduct.

74 ‘ LET such Bráhmens as are intent on the means of ‘ attaining the supreme godhead, and firm in their own ‘ duties, completely perform in order the six following acts :

75 ‘ Reading the Védas, and teaching others to read ‘ them, sacrificing, and assisting others to sacrifice, giving to ‘ the poor, if themselves have enough, and accepting gifts from ‘ the virtuous, if themselves are poor, are the six prescribed acts ‘ of the firstborn class ;

76 ‘ But, among those six acts of a Bráhmen, three are ‘ his means of subsistence ; assisting to sacrifice, teaching the ‘ Védas, and receiving gifts from a purehanded giver.

77 ‘ Three acts of duty cease with the Bráhmen, and ‘ belong not to the Cshatriya ; teaching the Védas, offici‘ ating at a sacrifice , and, thirdly, receiving presents :

78 ‘ Those three are also (by the fixed rule of law) for-‘ bidden to the Vaisya ; since MENU, the lord of all men, ‘ prescribed not those acts to the two classes, military and ‘ commercial.

79 ‘ The means of subsistence, peculiar to the Cshatriya,

‘ are bearing arms, either held for striking or missile; to ‘ the Vaisya, merchandize, attending on cattle, and agricul‘ ture: but with a view to the next life the duties of both ‘ are almsgiving, reading, sacrificing.

80 ‘ Among the several occupations for gaining a liveli‘ hood the most commendable respectively for the sacerdotal, ‘ military, and mercantile classes, are teaching the Véda, de‘ fending the people, and commerce or keeping herds and ‘ flocks.

81 ‘ Yet a Bráhmen, unable to subsist by his duties just ‘ mentioned, may live by the duty of a foldier; for that is ‘ the next in rank.

82 ‘ If it be asked, how he must live, should he be ‘ unable to get a subsistence by either of those employments;
 ‘ the answer is, he may subsist as a mercantile man, applying ‘ himself in person to tillage and attendance on cattle:

83 ‘ But a Bráhmen and a Cshatriya, obliged to subsist
 ‘ by the acts of a Vaisya, must avoid with care, if they can live ‘ by keeping herds, the business of tillage, which gives great ‘ pain to sentient creatures, and is dependent on the labour of ‘ others, as bulls and so forth.

84 ‘ Some are of opinion, that agriculture is excellent; ‘ but it is a mode of subsistence, which the benevolent ‘ greatly blame; for the ironmouthed pieces of wood not ‘ only wound the earth, but the creatures dwelling in it.

85 ‘ If, through want of a virtuous livelihood, they ‘ cannot follow laudable occupations, they may then gain ‘ a competence of wealth by selling commodities usually ‘ sold by merchants, avoiding what ought to be avoided:

86 ‘ They must avoid selling liquids of all sorts, dressed

‘ grain, seeds of tila, stones, salt, cattle, and human creatures ;

87 ‘ All woven cloth dyed red, cloth made of śana, of śhumā bark, and of wool, even though not red ; fruit, roots, and medicinal plants ;

88 ‘ Water, iron, poison, fleshmeat, the moonplant, and perfumes of any sort ; milk, honey, buttermilk, clarified butter, oil of tila, wax, sugar, and blades of cusa grass ;

89 ‘ All beasts of the forest, as deer and the like ; venous beasts, birds, and fish ; spirituous liquors, nīli, or indigo, and lācshā, or lac ; and all beasts with uncloven hoofs.

90 ‘ But the Brāhmen husbandman may at pleasure sell pure tila seeds for the purpose of holy rites, if he keep them not long with a hope of more gain, and shall have produced them by his own culture :

91 ‘ If he apply seeds of tila to any purpose but food, anointing, and sacred oblations, he shall be plunged, in the shape of a worm, together with his parents, into the ordure of dogs.

92 ‘ By selling fleshmeat, lācshā, or salt, a Brāhmen immediately sinks low ; by selling milk three days, he falls to a level with a Sūdra ;

93 ‘ And by selling the other forbidden commodities with his own free will, he assumes in this world, after seven nights, the nature of a mere Vaiśya.

94 ‘ Fluid things may, however, be bartered for other fluids, but not salt for any thing liquid ; so may dressed grain for grain undressed, and tila seeds for grain in ‘ the hulk, equal weights or measures being given and ‘ taken.

95 ‘ A MILITARY man, in distress, may subsist by all ‘ these means, but at no time must he have recourse to the ‘ highest, or sacerdotal, function.

96 ‘ A man of the lowest class, who, through covetous‘ ness, lives by the acts of the highest, let the king strip of ‘ all his wealth and instantly banish:.

97 ‘ His own office, though defectively performed, is ‘ preferable to that of another, though performed com‘ pletely; for he, who without necessity discharges the duties ‘ of another class, immediately forfeits his own.

98 ‘ A MERCANTILE man, unable to subsist by his own ‘ duties, may descend even to the servile acts of a Súdra, ‘ taking care never to do what ought never to be done; but,
‘ when he has gained a competence, let him depart from ‘ service.

99 ‘ A MAN of the fourth class, not finding employment ‘ by waiting on the twiceborn, while his wife and son are ‘ tormented with hunger, may subsist by handicrafts:

100 ‘ Let him principally follow those mechanical oc‘ cupations, as joinery and masonry, or those various practi‘ cal arts, as painting and writing, by following which, he may ‘ serve the twiceborn.

101 ‘ SHOULD a Bráhmen, afflicted and pining through ‘ want of food, choose rather to remain fixed in the path of ‘ his own duty, than to adopt the practice of Vaishyas, let him ‘ act in this manner:

102 ‘ The Bráhmen, having fallen into distress, may re‘ ceive gifts from any person whatever; for by no sacred

‘ rule can it be shown, that absolute purity can be fulli-‘ ed.

103 ‘ From interpreting the Véda, from officiating at sa‘ crifices, or from taking presents, though in modes generally ‘ disapproved, no sin is committed by priests in distress; for ‘ they are as pure as fire or water.

104 ‘ He, who receives food, when his life could not ‘ otherwise be sustained, from any man whatever, is no more ‘ tainted by sin, than the subtil ether by mud:

105 ‘ AJÍGARTA, dying with hunger, was going to de‘ stroy his own son (named S’UNAH-S’ÉP’HA) by selling him for ‘ some cattle; yet he was guilty of no crime, since he only ‘ sought a remedy against famishing:

106 ‘ VÁMADE’VA, who well knew right and wrong, was ‘ by no means rendered impure, though desirous, when op‘ pressed with hunger, of eating the flesh of dogs for the ‘ preservation of his life:

107 ‘ BHARADWÁJA, eminent in devotion, when he ‘ and his son were almost starved in a dreary forest, accept‘ ed several cows from the carpenter VRÍDHU:

108 ‘ VISWÁMITRA too, than whom none better knew ‘ the distinctions between virtue and vice, resolved, when he ‘ was perishing with hunger, to eat the haunch of a dog,
‘ which he had received from a Chandála.

109 ‘ Among the acts generally disapproved, namely, ac- ‘ cepting presents from low men, assisting them to sacrifice, and ‘ explaining the scripture to them, the receipt of presents is the ‘ meanest in this world, and the most blamed in a Bráhmen
‘ after his present life;

110 ‘ Because assisting to sacrifice and explaining the

• scripture are two acts always performed for those, whose
 • minds have been improved by the sacred initiation; but gifts
 • are also received from a servile man of the lowest class.

111    • The guilt, incurred by assisting low men to sacrifice
 • and by teaching them the scripture, is removed by repeti-
 • tions of the gáyatrí and oblations to fire; but that, incur-
 • red by accepting gifts from them, is expiated only by aban-
 • doning the gifts and by rigorous devotion.

112    • It were better for a Bráhmén, who could not • maintain himself, to glean ears and grains after harvest
 • from the field of any person whatever: gleaning whole
 • ears would be better than accepting a present, and pick-
 • ing up single grains would be still more laudable.

113    • Bráhméns, who keep house, and are in want of • any metals except gold and silver, or of other articles for good
 • uses, may ask the king for them, if he be of the military • class; but a king, known to be avaricious and unwilling to • give, must not be solicited.

114    • The foremost, in order, of these things may be • received more innocently than that, which follows it: a
 • field untilled, a tilled field, cows, goats, sheep, precious me-
 • tals or gems, new grain, dressed grain.

115    • THERE are seven virtuous means of acquiring pro• perty; succession, occupancy or donation, and purchase
 • or exchange, which are allowed to all classes; conquest,
 • which is peculiar to the military class; lending at interest,
 • husbandry or commerce, which belong to the mercantile class;
 • and acceptance of presents, by the sacerdotal class, from res• pectable men.

116    • Learning, except that contained in the scriptures,

‘ art, as mixing perfumes and the like, work for wages, menial ‘ service, attendance on cattle, traffick, agriculture, content ‘ with little, alms, and receiving high interest on money, ‘ are ten modes of subsistence in times of distress.

117 ‘ Neither a priest nor a military man, though dis- ‘ treffed, must receive interest on loans; but each of them, if ‘ he please, may pay the small interest permitted by law, on ‘ borrowing for some pious use, to the sinful man, who de- ‘ mands it.

118 ‘ A MILITARY king, who takes even a fourth part ‘ of the crops of his realm at a time of urgent necessity, as of ‘ war or invasion, and protects his people to the utmost of his ‘ power, commits no sin:

119 ‘ His peculiar duty is conquest, and he must not ‘ recede from battle; so that, while he defends by his arms
 ‘ the merchant and husbandman, he may levy the legal tax
 ‘ as the price of protection.

120 ‘ The tax on the mercantile class, which in times of ‘ prosperity must be only a twelfth part of their crops, and a fiftieth ‘ of their personal profits, may be an eighth of their crops in a ‘ time of distress, or a sixth, which is the medium, or even a fourth ‘ in great publick adversity; but a twentieth of their gains on ‘ money, and other moveables, is the highest tax: serving ‘ men, artisans, and mechanicks must assist by their labour, ‘ but at no time pay taxes.

121 ‘ If a Súdra want a subsistence and cannot attend
 ‘ a priest, he may serve a Cshatriya; or, if he cannot wait on ‘ a soldier by birth, he may gain his livelihood by serving an ‘ opulent Vaisya.

122 ‘ To him, who serves Bráhmens with a view to a

‘ heavenly reward, or even with a view to both this life and the next, the union of the word Bráhmén with his name of servant will assuredly bring success.

123 ‘ Attendance on Bráhméns is pronounced the best work of a Súdra: whatever else he may perform will comparatively avail him nothing.

124 ‘ They must allot him a fit maintenance according to their own circumstances, after considering his ability, his exertions, and the number of those, whom he must provide with nourishment:

125 ‘ What remains of their dressed rice must be given to him; and apparel which they have worn, and the refuse of their grain, and their old household furniture.

126 ‘ THERE is no guilt in a man of the servile class, who eats leeks and other forbidden vegetables: he must not have the sacred investiture: he has no business with the duty of making oblations to fire and the like; but there is no prohibition against his offering dressed grain as a sacrifice, by way of discharging his own duty.

127 ‘ Even Súdras, who are anxious to perform their entire duty, and, knowing what they should perform, imitate the practice of good men in the household sacraments, but without any holy text, except those containing praise and salutation, are so far from sinning, that they acquire just applause:

128 ‘ As a Súdra, without injuring another man, performs the lawful acts of the twiceborn, even thus, without being censured, he gains exaltation in this world and in the next.

129 ‘ No superfluous collection of wealth must be made by a Súdra, even though he has power to make it, since a

‘ servile man, who has amassed riches, becomes proud, and, by ‘ his insolence or neglect, gives pain even to Bráhmens.

130 ‘ SUCH, as have been fully declared, are the several ‘ duties of the four classes in distress for subsistence; and, if ‘ they perform them exactly, they shall attain the highest ‘ beatitude.

131 ‘ Thus has been propounded the system of duties, ‘ religious and civil, ordained for all classes: I next will de‘ clare the pure law of expiation for sin.’

CHAPTER THE ELEVENTH:

ON PENANCE AND EXPIATION.

1 ‘ HIM, who intends to marry for the sake of having ‘ issue; him, who wishes to make a sacrifice; ‘ him, who travels; him, who has given all his wealth at ‘ a sacred rite; him, who desires to maintain his preceptor, ‘ his father, or his mother; him, who needs a maintenance ‘ for himself, when he first reads the Védas, and him, who ‘ is afflicted with illness;

2 ‘ These nine Bráhmens let mankind consider as virtu‘ ous mendicants, called snátacas; and, to relieve their wants, ‘ let gifts of cattle or gold be presented to them in proportion ‘ to their learning:

3 ‘ To these most excellent Bráhmens must rice also be ‘ given with holy presents at oblations to fire and within the ‘ consecrated circle; but the dressed rice, which others are to ‘ receive, must be delivered on the outside of the sacred ‘ hearth: gold and the like may be given any where.

4 ‘ On such Bráhmens, as well know the Véda, let the ‘ king bestow, as it becomes him, jewels of all sorts, and ‘ the solemn reward for officiating at the sacrifice.

5 ‘ HE, who has a wife, and, having begged money to ‘ defray his nuptial expenses, marries another woman, shall ‘ have no advantage but sensual enjoyment: the offspring ‘ belongs to the bestower of the gift.

6 ‘ LET every man, according to his ability, give wealth
 ‘ to Bráhmens detached from the world and learned in scrip‘ ture: such a giver shall attain heaven after this life.

7 ‘ HE alone is worthy to drink the juice of the moon-‘ plant, who keeps a provision of grain sufficient to supply ‘ those, whom the law commands him to nourish, for the ‘ term of three years or more;

8 ‘ But a twiceborn man, who keeps a less provision of ‘ grain, yet presumes to taste the juice of the moonplant, ‘ shall gather no fruit from that sacrament, even though he ‘ taste it at the first, or solemn, much less at any occasional, cere- ‘ mony.

9 ‘ HE, who bestows gifts on strangers with a view to ‘ worldly fame, while he suffers his family to live in distress, ‘ though he has power to support them, touches his lips
 ‘ with honey, but swallows poison; such virtue is coun‘ terfeit:

10 ‘ Even what he does for the sake of his future spiri‘ tual body, to the injury of those, whom he is bound to ‘ maintain, shall bring him ultimate misery both in this life
 ‘ and in the next.

11 ‘ SHOULD a sacrifice, performed by any twiceborn sa-‘ crificer, and by a Bráhmen especially, be imperfect from ‘ the want of some ingredient, during the reign of a prince, ‘ who knows the law,

12 ‘ Let him take that article, for the completion of ‘ the sacrifice, from the house of any Vaisya, who possesses ‘ considerable herds, but neither sacrifices, nor drinks the ‘ juice of the moonplant :

13 ‘ If such a Vaisya be not near, he may take two or ‘ three such necessary articles at pleasure from the house
 ‘ of a Súdra; since a Súdra has no business with solemn ‘ rites.

14 ‘ Even from the house of a Bráhmen or a Cshatriya, ‘ who possesses a hundred cows, but has no consecrated fire,
 ‘ or a thousand cows, but performs no sacrifice with the moon-
 ‘ plant, let a priest without scruple take the articles wanted.

15 ‘ From another Bráhmen, who continually receives ‘ presents but never gives, let him take such ingredients of ‘ the sacrifice, if not bestowed on request: so shall his fame
 ‘ be spread abroad, and his habits of virtue increase.

16 ‘ Thus, likewise, may a Bráhmen, who has not eaten ‘ at the time of six meals, or has fasted three whole days, take ‘ at the time of the seventh meal, or on the fourth morning, ‘ from the man, who behaves basely by not offering him food,
 ‘ enough to supply him till the morrow :

17 ‘ He may take it from the floor, where the grain is ‘ trodden out of the husk, or from the field, or from the ‘ house, or from any place whatever; but, if the owner ask ‘ why he takes it, the cause of the taking must be declared.

18 ‘ The wealth of a virtuous Bráhmen must at no time
 ‘ be seized by a Cshatriya; but, having no other means to com- ‘ plete a sacrifice, he may take the goods of any man, who acts ‘ wickedly, and of any, who performs not his religious duties :

19 ‘ He, who takes property from the bad for the purpose
 ‘ beforementioned, and bestows it on the good, transforms him-

‘ self into a boat, and carries both the good and the bad over ‘ a sea of calamities.

20 ‘ Wealth, possessed by men for the performance of ‘ sacrifices, the wise call the property of the gods; but the ‘ wealth of men, who perform no sacrifice, they consider as ‘ the property of demons.

21 ‘ Let no pious king fine the man, who takes by stealth
‘ or by force what he wants to make a sacrifice perfect; since ‘ it is the king’s folly, that causes the hunger or wants of a ‘ Bráhmén :

22 ‘ Having reckoned up the persons, whom the Bráh-
‘ men is obliged to support, having ascertained his divine ‘ knowledge and moral conduct, let the king allow him a ‘ suitable maintenance from his own household;

23 ‘ And, having appointed him a maintenance, let the ‘ king protect him on all sides; for he gains from the Bráh- ‘ men, whom he protects, a sixth part of the reward for his ‘ virtue.

24 ‘ LET no Bráhmén ever beg a gift from a Súdra; for,
‘ if he perform a sacrifice after such begging, he shall, in the ‘ next life, be born a Chandála.

25 ‘ The Bráhmén, who begs any articles for a sacrifice, ‘ and disposes not of them all for that purpose, shall become ‘ a kite or a crow for a hundred years.

26 ‘ Any evilhearted wretch, who, through covetous-
‘ ness, shall seize the property of the gods or of *Bráhmén*s, ‘ shall feed in another world on the orts of vultures.

27 ‘ THE sacrifice Vaiswánarí must be constantly per‘ formed on the first day of the new year, or on the new ‘ moon of Chaitra, as an expiation for having omitted

‘ through mere forgetfulness the appointed sacrifices of cattle
 ‘ and the rites of the moonplant:

28 ‘ But a twiceborn man, who, without necessity, does ‘ an act allowed only in a case of necessity, reaps no fruit ‘ from it hereafter: thus has it been decided.

29 ‘ By the Viśwédévas, by the Sádhyas, and by eminent ‘ Rishis of the sacerdotal class, the substitute was adopted for ‘ the principal act, when they were apprehensive of dying
 ‘ in times of imminent peril;

30 ‘ But no reward is prepared in a future state for that ‘ illminded man, who, when able to perform the principal ‘ sacrifice, has recourse to the substitute.

31 ‘ A PRIEST, who well knows the law, needs not com‘ plain to the king of any grievous injury; since, even by ‘ his own power, he may chastise those, who injure him:

32 ‘ His own power, which depends on himself alone, is ‘ mightier than the royal power, which depends on other men:
 ‘ by his own might, therefore, may a Bráhmen coerce his ‘ foes.

33 ‘ He may use, without hesitation, the powerful ‘ charms revealed to AT’HARVAN, and by him to ANGIRAS; for ‘ speech is the weapon of a Bráhmen: with that he may ‘ destroy his oppressors.

34 ‘ A soldier may avert danger from himself by the ‘ strength of his arm; a merchant and a mechanick, by their ‘ property; but the chief of the twiceborn, by holy texts ‘ and oblations to fire.

35 ‘ A priest, who performs his duties, who justly corrects ‘ his children and pupils, who advises expiations for sin, and ‘ who loves all animated creatures, is truly called a Bráhmen:

‘ to him let no man say any thing unpropitious, nor use ‘ any offensive language.

36 ‘ Let not a girl, nor a young woman married or un- ‘ married, nor a man with little learning, nor a dunce, per‘ form an oblation to fire; nor a man diseased, nor one ‘ uninvested with the sacrificial string;

37 ‘ Since any of those persons, who make such an ob‘ lation, shall fall into a region of torture, together with him, ‘ who suffers his hearth to be used: he alone, who perfectly ‘ knows the sacred ordinances, and has read all the Védas, ‘ must officiate at an oblation to holy fire.

38 ‘ A Bráhmen with abundant wealth, who presents ‘ not the priest, that hallows his fire, with a horse conse‘ crated to PRAJÁPATI, becomes equal to one who has no ‘ fire hallowed.

39 ‘ Let him, who believes the scripture, and keeps ‘ his organs in subjection, perform all other pious acts; but ‘ never in this world let him offer a sacrifice with trifling ‘ gifts to the officiating priest:

40 ‘ The organs of sense and action, reputation in this ‘ life, a heavenly mansion in the next, life itself, a great name ‘ after death, children, and cattle, are all destroyed by a sa‘ crifice offered with trifling presents: let no man, therefore, ‘ sacrifice without liberal gifts.

41 ‘ THE priest, who keeps a sacred hearth, but volun‘ tarily neglects the morning and evening oblations to his fires, ‘ must perform, in the manner to be described, the penance ‘ chándráyana for one month; since that neglect is equally ‘ sinful with the slaughter of a son.

42 ‘ They, who receive property from a Súdra for the • performance of rites to consecrated fire, are contemned, as • ministers of the base, by all such as pronounce texts of the • Vēda :

43 • Of those ignorant priests, who serve the holy fire
 • for the wealth of a Sūdra, the giver shall always tread on the • foreheads, and thus pass over miseries in the gloom of death.

44 • EVERY man, who does not an act prescribed, or • does an act forbidden, or is guilty of excess even in legal • gratifications of the senses, must perform an expiatory pe-
 • nance.

45 • Some of the learned consider an expiation as con• fined to involuntary sin ; but others, from the evidence of
 • the Vēda, hold it effectual even in the case of a voluntary
 • offence :

46 • A sin, involuntarily committed, is removed by re-
 • peating certain texts of the scripture ; but a sin committed
 • intentionally, through strange infatuation, by harsh penances
 • of different sorts.

47 • If a twiceborn man, by the will of GOD in this • world, or from his natural birth, have any corporeal mark
 • of an expiable sin committed in this or a former state, he • must hold no intercourse with the virtuous, while his pe-
 • nance remains unperformed.

48 • Some evilminded persons, for sins committed in this • life, and some for bad actions in a preceding state, suffer a
 • morbid change in their bodies :

49 • A stealer of gold from a Bráhmén has whitlows on • his nails ; a drinker of spirits, black teeth ; the slayer of
 • a Bráhmén, a marasmus ; the violator of his guru's bed, a
 • deformity in the generative organs ;

G g g g

50 ' A malignant informer, fetid ulcers in his nostrils;
 ' a false detractor, stinking breath; a stealer of grain, the ' defect of some limb; a mixer of bad wares with good, some
 ' redundant member;

51 ' A stealer of dressed grain, dyspepsia; a stealer of ' holy words, or an unauthorized reader of the scriptures, dumb-
 ' ness; a stealer of clothes, leprosy; a horsestealer, lameness;

52 ' The stealer of a lamp, total blindness; the mis-
 ' chievous extinguisher of it, blindness in one eye; a de-
 ' lighter in hurting sentient creatures, perpetual illness; an
 ' adulterer, windy swellings in his limbs:

53 ' Thus, according to the diversity of actions, are ' born men despised by the good, stupid, dumb, blind, deaf,
 ' and deformed.

54 ' Penance, therefore, must invariably be performed
 ' for the sake of expiation; since they, who have not ex-
 ' piated their sins, will again spring to birth with disgrace-
 ' ful marks.

55 ' KILLING a Bráhmén, drinking forbidden liquor,
 ' stealing gold from a priest, adultery with the wife of a
 ' father, natural or spiritual, and associating with such as
 ' commit those offences, wise legislators must declare to be
 ' crimes in the highest degree in respect of those after mention-
 ' ed, but less than incest in a direct line, and some others.

56 ' FALSE boasting of a high tribe, malignant in' formation, before the king, of a criminal who must suffer
 ' death, and falsely accusing a spiritual preceptor, are crimes
 ' in the second degree, and nearly equal to killing a Bráhmén.

57 ' Forgetting the texts of scripture, showing contempt
 ' of the Véda, giving false evidence without a bad motive, kil-

‘ ling a friend without malice, eating things prohibited, or, from ‘ their manifest impurity, unfit to be tasted, are six crimes near‘ ly equal to drinking spirits; but perjury and homicide require ‘ in atrocious cases the harshest expiation.

58 ‘ To appropriate a thing deposited or lent for a time,
 ‘ a human creature, a horse, precious metals, a field, a dia‘ mond, or any other gem, is nearly equal to stealing the ‘ gold of a Bráhmén.

59 ‘ Carnal commerce with sisters by the same mother, ‘ with little girls, with women of the lowest mixed class, or ‘ with the wives of a friend or of a son, the wife must con‘ sider as nearly equal to a violation of the paternal bed.

60 ‘ SLAYING a bull or cow, sacrificing what ought ‘ not to be sacrificed, adultery, felling oneself, deserting a ‘ preceptor, a mother, a father, or a son, omitting to read
 ‘ the scripture, and neglect of the fires prescribed by the Dher- ‘ masástra only,

61 ‘ The marriage of a younger brother before the el‘ der, and that elder’s omission to marry before the younger, ‘ giving a daughter to either of them, and officiating at their ‘ nuptial sacrifice,

62 ‘ Defiling a damsel, usury, want of perfect chastity ‘ in a student, felling a holy pool or garden, a wife, or a child,

63 ‘ Omitting the sacred investiture, abandoning a kins‘ man, teaching the Véda for hire, learning it from a hired ‘ teacher, felling commodities, that ought not to be sold,

64 ‘ Working in mines of any sort, engaging in dykes, ‘ bridges, or other great mechanical works, spoiling medicinal ‘ plants repeatedly, subsisting by the harlotry of a wife, offering ‘ sacrifices and preparing charms to destroy the innocent,

65 ' Cutting down green trees for firewood, performing
 ' holy rites with a selfish view merely, and eating prohibited
 ' food once without a previous design,

66 ' Neglecting to keep up the consecrated fire, stealing
 ' any valuable thing besides gold, nonpayment of the three debts,
 ' application to the books of a false religion, and excessive
 ' attention to musick or dancing,

67 ' Stealing grain, base metals, or cattle, familiarity by
 ' the twiceborn with women, who have drunk inebriating li' quor, killing without malice a woman, a Súdra, a Vaisya, or a
 ' Cshatriya, and denying a future state of rewards and punish-
 ' ments, are all crimes in the third degree, but higher or lower
 ' according to circumstances.

68 ' GIVING pain to a Bráhmén, smelling at any spirituous
 ' liquor or any thing extremely fetid and unfit to be smelt,
 ' cheating, and unnatural practices with a male, are consider-
 ' ed as causing a loss of class.

69 ' To kill an ass, a horse, a camel, a deer, an ele-
 ' phant, a goat, a sheep, a fish, a snake, or a buffalo, is de' clared an offence, which degrades the killer to a mixed
 ' tribe.

70 ' ACCEPTING presents from despicable men, illegal
 ' traffick, attendance on a Súdra master, and speaking false-
 ' hood, must be considered as causes of exclusion from so' cial repasts.

71 ' KILLING, an insect, small or large, a worm, or a
 ' bird, eating what has been brought in the same basket with
 ' spirituous liquor, stealing fruit, wood, or flowers, and great
 ' perturbation of mind on trifling occasions, are offences
 ' which cause defilement.

72 ‘ You shall now be completely instructed in those ‘ penances, by which all the sins just mentioned are expia-‘ ble.

73 ‘ If a Bráhmén have killed a man of the sacerdotal ‘ class, without malice prepense, the slayer being far superior to the ‘ slain in good qualities, he must himself make a hut in a fo‘ rest and dwell in it twelve whole years, subsisting on alms ‘ for the purification of his soul, placing near him, as a to‘ ken of his crime, the skull of the slain, if he can procure it, or, ‘ if not, any human skull. The time of penance for the three lower ‘ classes must be twenty four, thirty six, and forty eight, years.

74 ‘ Or, if the slayer be of the military class, he may vo‘ luntarily expose himself as a mark to archers, who know ‘ his intention; or, according to circumstances, may cast him‘ self headlong thrice, or even till he die, into blazing fire.

75 ‘ Or, if he be a king, and slew a priest without malice or ‘ knowledge of his class, he may perform, with presents of great ‘ wealth, one of the following sacrifices; an Afwamédha, or ‘ a Swerjit, or a Gósava, or an Abhijit, or a Víswajit, or a ‘ Trivrit, or an Agnishtut.

76 ‘ Or, to expiate the guilt of killing a priest without ‘ knowing him and without design, the killer may walk on a pil‘ grimage a hundred yójanas, repeating any one of the Védas, ‘ eating barely enough to sustain life, and keeping his or‘ gans in perfect subjection;

77 ‘ Or, if in that case the slayer be unlearned but rich, he ‘ may give all his property to some Bráhmén learned in ‘ the Véda, or a sufficiency of wealth for his life, or a house
‘ and furniture to hold while he lives:

78 Or, eating only such wild grains as are offered to

H h h h

‘ the gods, he may walk to the head of the river Saraswatî
 ‘ against the course of the stream; or, subsisting on very lit‘ tle food, he may thrice repeat the whole collection of ‘ Védas, or the Rîch, Yajush, and Sáman.

79 ‘ Or, his hair being shorn, he may dwell near a ‘ town, or on pastureground for cows, or in some holy ‘ place, or at the root of a sacred tree, taking pleasure in ‘ doing good to cows and to Bráhmens;

80 ‘ There, for the preservation of a cow or a Bráh-
 ‘ men, let him instantly abandon life; since the preserver
 ‘ of a cow or a Bráhmén atones for the crime of killing a ‘ priest:

81 ‘ Or, by attempting at least three times forcibly to ‘ recover from robbers the property of a Bráhmén, or by re‘ covering it in one of his attacks, or even by losing his ‘ life in the attempt, he atones for his crime.

82 ‘ Thus, continually firm in religious austerity, chaste ‘ as a student in the first order, with his mind intent on ‘ virtue, he may expiate the guilt of undesignedly killing ‘ a Bráhmén, after the twelfth year has expired.

83 ‘ Or, if a virtuous Bráhmén unintentionally kill another, ‘ who had no good quality, he may atone for his guilt by pro‘ claiming it in an assembly of priests and military men, at ‘ the sacrifice of a horse, and by bathing with other Bráh-
 ‘ mens at the close of the sacrifice:

84 ‘ Bráhmens are declared to be the basis, and Cshatriyas
 ‘ the summit, of the legal system: he, therefore, expiates ‘ his offence by fully proclaiming it in such an assembly.

85 ‘ From his high birth alone, a Bráhmén is an object ‘ of veneration even to deities: his declarations to mankind

are decisive evidence; and the Véda itself confers on him that character.

86 ‘ Three at least, who are learned in the Véda, should be assembled to declare the proper expiation for the sin of a priest, but, for the three other classes, the number must be doubled, tripled, and quadrupled: what they declare shall be an atonement for sinners; since the words of the learned give purity.

87 ‘ Thus a Bráhmén, who has performed one of the preceding expiations, according to the circumstances of the homicide and the characters of the persons killed and killing, with his whole mind fixed on GOD, purifies his soul and removes the guilt of slaying a man of his own class:

88 ‘ He must perform the same penance for killing an embryo, the sex of which was unknown, but whose parents were sacerdotal, or a military or a commercial man employed in a sacrifice, or a Bráhmén woman, who has bathed after temporary uncleanness;

89 ‘ And the same for giving false evidence in a cause concerning land or gold or precious commodities, and for accusing his preceptor unjustly, and for appropriating a deposit, and for killing the wife of a priest, who keeps a consecrated fire, or for slaying a friend.

90 ‘ Such is the atonement ordained for killing a priest without malice; but for killing a Bráhmén with malice pre-pense, this is no expiation: the term of twelve years must be doubled, or, if the case was atrocious, the murderer must actually die in flames or in battle.

91 ‘ ANY twiceborn man, who has intentionally drunk spirit of rice, through perverse delusion of mind, may

‘ drink more spirit in flame, and atone for his offence by ‘ severely burning his body ;

92 ‘ Or he may drink boiling hot, until he die, the ‘ urine of a cow, or pure water, or milk, or clarified butter,
 ‘ or juice expressed from cowdung :

93 ‘ Or, if he tasted it unknowingly, he may expiate the ‘ sin of drinking spirituous liquor, by eating only some bro‘ ken rice or grains of tila, from which oil has been extract‘ ed, once every night for a whole year, wrapped in coarse ‘ vesture of hairs from a cow’s tail, or sitting unclothed in his ‘ house, wearing his locks and beard uncut, and putting out ‘ the flag of a tavern-keeper.

94 ‘ Since the spirit of rice is distilled from the Mala, or ‘ filthy refuse, of the grain, and since Mala is also a name for ‘ sin, let no Bráhmén, Cshatriya, or Vaisya drink that spirit.

95 ‘ Inebriating liquor may be considered as of three ‘ principal sorts ; that extracted from dregs of sugar, that ‘ extracted from bruised rice, and that extracted from the ‘ flowers of the Madhúca : as one, so are all ; they shall not be ‘ tasted by the chief of the twiceborn.

96 ‘ Those liquors, and eight other sorts, with the flesh
 ‘ of animals, and Asava, the most pernicious beverage, pre- ‘ pared with narcotick drugs, are swallowed at the junctures of ‘ Yacshas, Racshasas, and Pisáchas : they shall not, therefore, ‘ be tasted by a Bráhmén, who feeds on clarified butter of‘ fered to gods.

97 ‘ A Bráhmén, stupefied by drunkenness, might fall on ‘ something very impure, or might even, when intoxicated, ‘ pronounce a secret phrase of the Véda, or might do some ‘ other act, which ought not to be done.

98 ‘ When the divine spirit, or the light of holy knowledge, ‘ which has been infused into his body, has once been ‘ sprinkled with any intoxicating liquor, even his priestly ‘ character leaves him, and he sinks to the low degree of a ‘ Súdra.

99 ‘ Thus have been promulgated the various modes of ‘ expiation for drinking spirits: I will next propound the ‘ atonement for stealing the gold of a priest to the amount of ‘ a suverna.

100 ‘ HE, who has purloined the gold of a Bráhmén, ‘ must hasten to the king, and proclaim his offence; adding,
 ‘ “Inflict on me the punishment due to my crime.”

101 ‘ Then shall the king himself, taking from him ‘ an iron mace, which the criminal must bear on his shoulder, ‘ strike him with it once; and by that stroke, whether he die
 ‘ or be only left as dead, the thief is released from sin: a ‘ Bráhmén by rigid penance alone can expiate that offence; ‘ another twiceborn man may also perform such a penance at his ‘ election.

102 ‘ The twiceborn man, who desires to remove by ‘ austere devotion the taint caused by stealing gold, must ‘ perform in a forest, covered with a mantle of rough ‘ bark, the penance before ordained for him, who without ‘ malice prepenſe has killed a Bráhmén.

103 ‘ By these expiations may the twiceborn atone for ‘ the guilt of stealing gold from a priest; but the sin of ‘ adultery with the wife of a father, natural or spiritual, ‘ they must expiate by the following penances.

104 ‘ HE, who knowingly and actually has defiled the ‘ wife of his father, ſhe being of the ſame claſs, must extend ‘ himself on a heated iron bed, loudly proclaiming his ‘ guilt; and, there embracing the red-hot iron image of a ‘ woman, he shall atone for his crime by death;

105 ‘ Or, having himself amputated his penis and ‘ scrotum, and holding them in his fingers, he may walk ‘ in a direct path toward the southwest, or the region of ‘ NIRRIṬI, until he fall dead on the ground:

106 ‘ Or, if he had mistaken her for another woman, he ‘ may perform for a whole year, with intense application of ‘ mind, the penance prájápatya, with part of a bed, or a hu‘ man bone, in his hand, wrapped in vesture of coarse bark, ‘ letting his hair and beard grow, and living in a desert‘ ed forest:

107 ‘ Or, if she was of a lower class and a corrupt woman,
 ‘ he may expiate the sin of violating the bed of his father,
 ‘ by continuing the penance chándráyana for three months, ‘ always mortifying his body by eating only forest herbs, or ‘ wild grains boiled in water.

108 ‘ By the preceding penances may sinners of the ‘ two higher degrees atone for their guilt; and the less ‘ offenders may expiate theirs by the following austeri-‘ ties.

109 ‘ HE, who has committed the smaller offence of ‘ killing a cow without malice, must drink for the first month
 ‘ barleycorns boiled soft in water; his head must be shav‘ ed entirely; and, covered with the hide of the slain cow, ‘ he must fix his abode on her late pasture ground:

110 ‘ He may eat a moderate quantity of wild grains,
 ‘ but without any factitious salt, for the next two months ‘ at the time of each fourth repast, on the evening of every ‘ second day ; regularly bathing in the urine of cows, and ‘ keeping his members under control :

111 ‘ All day he must wait on the herd, and stand ‘ quaffing the dust raised by their hoofs ; at night, having fer-‘ vily attended and stroked and saluted them, he must sur‘ round them with a fence, and sit near to guard them :

112 ‘ Pure and free from passion, he must stand, while ‘ they stand ; follow them, when they move together ; and ‘ lie down by them, when they lie down :

113 ‘ Should a cow be sick or terrified by tigers or ‘ thieves, or fall, or stick in mud, he must relieve her by ‘ all possible means :

114 ‘ In heat, in rain, or in cold, or while the blast ‘ furiously rages, let him not seek his own shelter, without ‘ first sheltering the cows to the utmost of his power :

115 ‘ Neither in his own house, or field, or floor for ‘ treading out grain, nor in those of any other person, let ‘ him say a word of a cow, who eats corn or grass, or of a ‘ calf, who drinks milk :

116 ‘ By waiting on a herd, according to these rules for ‘ three months, the slayer of a cow atones for his guilt ;

117 ‘ But, his penance being performed, he must give ‘ ten cows and a bull, or, his stock not being so large, ‘ must deliver all he possesses, to such as best know the ‘ Véda.

118 ‘ THE preceding penances, or that called chándrá-
 ‘ yana, must be performed for the absolution of all twice-‘ born men, who have committed sins of the lower or third ‘ degree ; except those, who have incurred the guilt of an ‘ avacírna ;

119 ‘ But he, who has become Avacírni, must sacrifice
 ‘ a black or a oneeyed afs, by way of a meatoffering
 ‘ to NIRRITI, patronefs of the fouthweft, by night in a place ‘ where four ways meet :

120 ‘ Let him daily offer to her in fire the fat of that ‘ afs, and, at the clofe of the ceremony, let him offer clari‘ fied butter, with the holy text Sem and fo forth, to PAVANA, ‘ to INDRA, to VRĪHASPATI, and to AGNI, regents of wind, ‘ clouds, a planet, and fire.

121 ‘ A voluntary effufion, naturally or otherwife, of that ‘ which may produce a man, by a twiceborn youth during ‘ the time of his ftudentfhip, or before marriage, has been ‘ pronounced avacírna, or a violation of the rule prefcribed ‘ for the first order, by fages, who knew the whole fystem of ‘ duty and uttered the words of the Véda.

122 ‘ To the four deities of purification, MARUTA, ‘ INDRA, VRĪHASPATI, AGNI, goes all the divine light, ‘ which the Véda had imparted, from the ftudent, who ‘ commits the foul fin avacírna ;

123 ‘ But, this crime having actually been committed,
 ‘ he must go begging to feven houfes, clothed only with the ‘ hide of the sacrificed afs, and openly proclaiming his act :

124 ‘ Eating a fingle meal begged from them, at the ‘ regular time of the day, that is, in the morning or evening,
 ‘ and bathing each day at the three favanas, he fhall be ab-‘ folved from his guilt at the end of one year.

125 ‘ HE, who has voluntarily committed any fin, ‘ which caufes a lofs of clafs, must perform the tormenting ‘ penance, thence called śántapana ; or the prájápatya, if ‘ he offended involuntarily.

126 ' For sins, which degrade to a mixed class, or exclude from society, the sinner must have recourse to the lunar expiation chándráyana for one month: to atone for acts, which occasion defilement, he must swallow nothing for three days but hot barleygruel.

127 ' For killing intentionally a virtuous man of the military class, the penance must be a fourth part of that ordained for killing a priest; for killing a Vaisya, only an eighth; for killing a Súdra, who had been constant in discharging his duties, a sixteenth part:

128 ' But, if a Bráhmen kill a Cshatriya without malice, he must, after a full performance of his religious rites, give the priests one bull together with a thousand cows;

129 ' Or he may perform for three years the penance for slaying a Bráhmen, mortifying his organs of sensation and action, letting his hair grow long, and living remote from the town, with the root of a tree for his mansion.

130 ' If he kill without malice a Vaisya, who had a good moral character, he may perform the same penance for one year, or give the priests a hundred cows and a bull:

131 ' For six months must he perform this whole penance, if without intention he kill a Súdra; or he may give ten white cows and a bull to the priests.

132 ' If he kill by design a cat, or an ichneumon, the bird Chásha, or a frog, a dog, a lizard, an owl, or a crow, he must perform the ordinary penance required for the death of a Súdra, that is, the chándráyana:

133 ' Or, if he kill one of them undesignedly, he may drink nothing but milk for three days and nights, or each night

‘ walk a yógan, or thrice bathe in a river, or silently repeat the text on the divinity of water; that is, if he be disabled by real infirmity from performing the first mentioned penances, he may have recourse to the next in order.

134 ‘ A Bráhmén, if he kill a snake, must give to some priest a hoe, or ironheaded stick; if an eunuch, a load of ricestraw, and a másha of lead;

135 ‘ If a boar, a pot of clarified butter; if the bird tittiri, a dróna of tila seeds; if a parrot, a steer two years old; if the waterbird crauncha, a steer aged three years:

136 ‘ If he kill a goose, or a phenicopteros, a heron, or cormorant, a bittern, a peacock, an ape, a hawk, or a kite, he must give a cow to some Bráhmén:

137 ‘ If he kill a horse, he must give a mantle; if an elephant, five black bulls; if a goat or a sheep, one bull; if an ass, a calf one year old:

138 ‘ If he kill a carnivorous wild beast, he must give a cow with abundance of milk; if a wild beast not carnivorous, a fine heifer; and a racticá of gold, if he slay a camel:

139 ‘ If he kill a woman of any class caught in adultery, he must give as an expiation, in the direct order of the four classes, a leathern pouch, a bow, a goat, and a sheep.

140 ‘ Should a Bráhmén be unable to expiate by gifts the sin of killing a snake and the rest, he must atone for his guilt by performing, on each occasion, the penance prájápatya.

141 ‘ For the slaughter of a thousand small animals which have bones, or for that of boneless animals enow to fill a cart, he must perform the chándráyana, or common penance for killing a Súdra;

142 ‘ But, for killing boned animals, he must also give some trifle, as a pana of copper, to a Bráhmen: for killing those without bones, he may be absolved by holding his breath, at the close of his penance, while he thrice repeats the gáyatrì with its head, the pranava, and the vyáhr̥tis.

143 ‘ For cutting once without malice trees yielding fruit, shrubs with many crowded stems, creeping or climbing plants, or such as grow again when cut, if they were in blossom when he hurt them, he must repeat a hundred texts of the Véda.

144 ‘ For killing insects of any sort bred in rice or other grains, or those bred in honey or other fluids, or those bred in fruit or flowers, eating clarified butter is a full expiation.

145 ‘ If a man cut, wantonly and for no good purpose, such grasses as are cultivated, or such as rise in the forest spontaneously, he must wait on a cow for one day, nourished by milk alone.

146 ‘ By these penances may mankind atone for the sin of injuring sentient creatures, whether committed by design or through inadvertence: hear now what penances are ordained for eating or drinking what ought not to be tasted.

147 ‘ He, who drinks undesignedly any spirit but that of rice, may be absolved by a new investiture with the sacerdotal string: even for drinking intentionally the weaker sorts of spirit, a penance extending to death must not (as the law is now fixed) be prescribed.

148 ‘ For drinking water which has stood in a vessel, ‘ where spirit of rice or any other spirituous liquor had been ‘ kept, he must swallow nothing, for five days and nights, but ‘ the plant śanc’hapuṣhpī boiled in milk :

149 ‘ If he touch any spirituous liquor, or give any ‘ away, or accept any in due form, or with thanks, or drink ‘ water left by a Sūdra, he must swallow nothing, for three ‘ days and nights, but cusa grafs boiled in water.

150 ‘ Should a Brāhmen, who has once tasted the holy ‘ juice of the moonplant, even smell the breath of a man ‘ who has been drinking spirits, he must remove the taint
 ‘ by thrice repeating the gāyatrī, while he suppresses his breath ‘ in water, and by eating clarified butter after that ceremony.

151 ‘ If any of the three twiceborn classes have tasted ‘ unknowingly human ordure or urine, or any thing that has ‘ touched spirituous liquor, they must, after a penance, be ‘ girt anew with the sacrificial thread ;

152 ‘ But, in such new investiture of the twiceborn, the ‘ partial tonsure, the zone, the staff, the petition of alms,
 ‘ and the strict rules of abstinence, need not be renewed.

153 ‘ SHOULD one of them eat the food of those per‘ sons, with whom he ought never to eat, or food left by a ‘ woman or a Sūdra, or any prohibited flesh, he must drink ‘ barleygruel only for seven days and nights.

154 ‘ If a Brāhmen drink sweet liquors turned acid, or ‘ astringent juices from impure fruits, he becomes unclean, ‘ as long as those fluids remain undigested.

155 ‘ Any twiceborn man, who by accident has tasted the ‘ dung or urine of a tame boar, an ass, a camel, a shakal, an ‘ ape, or a crow, must perform the penance chāndráyana :

156 ‘ If he taste dried fleshmeat, or mushrooms rising ‘ from the ground, or any thing brought from a slaughter‘ house, though he knew not whence it came, he must per‘ form the same penance.

157 ‘ For knowingly eating the flesh of carnivorous ‘ beasts, of townboars, of camels, of gallinaceous birds,
 ‘ of human creatures, of crows, or of asses, the penance ‘ taptacrīch’hra, or burning and severe, is the only atone‘ ment.

158 ‘ A Bráhmén, who, before he has completed his ‘ theological studies, eats food at monthly obsequies to one
 ‘ ancestor, must fast three days and nights, and sit in water
 ‘ a day :

159 ‘ But a student in theology, who at any time un-
 ‘ knowingly tastes honey or flesh, must perform the lowest ‘ penance, or the prájápatya, and proceed to finish his stu‘ dentship.

160 ‘ Having eaten what has been left by a cat, a crow, ‘ a mouse, a dog, or an ichneumon, or what has even been ‘ touched by a louse, he must drink, boiled in water, the ‘ plant brahmasuverchalá.

161 ‘ By the man, who seeks purity of soul, no for-‘ bidden food must be tasted: what he has undesignedly
 ‘ swallowed he must instantly vomit up, or must purify him‘ self with speed by legal expiations.

162 ‘ Such, as have been declared, are the various pe‘ nances for eating prohibited food: hear now the law of ‘ penance for an expiation of theft.

163 ‘ THE chief of the twiceborn, having voluntarily ‘ stolen such property, as grain, raw or dressed, from the ‘ house of another Bráhmén, shall be absolved on performing the penance prájápatya for a whole year;

164 ‘ But the penance chándráyana must be performed for stealing a man, woman, or child, for seizing a field, or a house, or for taking the waters of an enclosed pool or well.

165 ‘ Having taken goods of little value from the house of another man, he must procure absolution by performing the penance śantapana; having first restored, as the penitent thief always must, the goods that he stole.

166 ‘ For taking what may be eaten, or what may be sipped, a carriage, a bed, or a seat, roots, flowers, or fruit, an atonement may be made by swallowing the five pure things produced from a cow, or milk, curds, butter, urine, dung:

167 ‘ For stealing grafs, wood, or trees, rice in the husk, molasses, cloth or leather, fish, or other animal food, a strict fast must be kept three days and three nights.

168 ‘ For stealing gems, pearls, coral, copper, silver, iron, brafs, or stone, nothing but broken rice must be swallowed for twelve days;

169 ‘ And nothing but milk for three days, if cotton, or filk, or wool had been stolen, or a beast either with cloven or uncloven hoofs, or a bird, or perfumes, or medicinal herbs, or cordage.

170 ‘ By these penances may a twiceborn man atone for the guilt of theft; but the following austerities only can remove the sin of carnally approaching those, who must not be carnally approached.

171 ‘ HE, who has wasted his manly strength with fif-

ters by the same womb, with the wives of his friend or of his son, with girls under the age of puberty, or with women of the lowest classes, must perform the penance ordained for defiling the bed of a preceptor :

172 ‘ He, who has carnally known the daughter of his paternal aunt, who is almost equal to a sister, or the daughter of his maternal aunt, or the daughter of his maternal uncle, who is a near kinsman, must perform the chándrá-yana, or lunar penance;

173 ‘ No man of sense would take one of those three as his wife: they shall not be taken in marriage by reason of their consanguinity; and he, who marries any one of them, falls deep into sin.

174 ‘ He, who has wasted, what might have produced a man, with female brute animals, with a woman during her courses, or in any but the natural part, or in water, must perform the penance sántapana: for a bestial act with a cow the penance must be far more severe.

175 ‘ A twiceborn man, dallying lasciviously with a male in any place or at any time, or with a female in a carriage drawn by bullocks, or in water, or by day, shall be degraded, and must bathe himself publicly with his apparel.

176 ‘ Should a Bráhmen carnally know a woman of the Chandála or Mléch’ha tribes, or taste their food, or accept a gift from them, he loses his own class, if he acted unknowingly, or, if knowingly, sinks to a level with them.

177 ‘ A wife, excessively corrupt, let her husband confine to one apartment, and compel her to perform the penance ordained for a man, who has committed adultery:

178 ‘ If, having been solicited by a man of her own class, she again be defiled, her expiation must be the penance prájápatya added to the chándráyana.

179 ‘ The guilt of a Bráhmen, who has dallied a whole night with a Chandáli woman, he may remove in three years by subsisting on alms, and incessantly repeating the gáyatrí with other mysterious texts.

180 ‘ These penances have been declared for sinners of four sorts, those who hurt sentient creatures, those who eat prohibited food, those who commit theft, and those who are guilty of lasciviousness: hear now the prescribed expiations for such, as hold any intercourse with degraded offenders.

181 ‘ HE, who associates himself for one year with a fallen sinner, falls like him; not by sacrificing, reading the Véda, or contracting affinity with him, since by those acts he loses his class immediately, but even by using the same carriage or seat, or by taking his food at the same board:

182 ‘ That man, who holds an intercourse with any one of those degraded offenders, must perform, as an atonement for such intercourse, the penance ordained for that sinner himself.

183 ‘ The sapindas and samánódacas of a man degraded, for a crime in the first degree, must offer a libation of water to his manes, as if he were naturally dead, out of the town, in the evening of some inauspicious day, as the ninth of the moon, his paternal kinsmen, his officiating priest, and his spiritual guide being present.

184 ‘ A female slave must kick down with her foot an old pot filled with water, which had for that purpose been placed toward the south, as if it were an oblation for the ‘ dead; and all the kinsmen, in the nearer and remoter degrees, must remain impure for a day and a night:

185 ‘ They must thenceforth desist from speaking to him, from sitting in his company, from delivering to him any inherited or other property, and from every civil or usual attention, as inviting him on the first day of the year, and the like.

186 ‘ His right of primogeniture, if he was an elder brother, must be withholden from him, and whatever perquisites arise from priority of birth: a younger brother, excelling him in virtue, must appropriate the share of the firstborn.

187 ‘ But, when he has performed his due penance, his kinsmen and he must throw down a new vessel full of water, after having bathed together in a pure pool:

188 ‘ Then must he cast that vessel into the water; and, having entered his house, he may perform, as before, all the acts incident to his relation by blood.

189 ‘ The same ceremony must be performed by the kindred even of women degraded, for whom clothes, dressed rice, and water must be provided; and they must dwell in huts near the family house.

190 ‘ With sinners, whose expiations are unperformed, let not a man transact business of any kind; but those, who have performed their expiations, let him at no time reproach:

191 ‘ Let him not, however, live with those, who have slain children, or injured their benefactors, or killed suppliants for protection, or put women to death, even though such offenders have been legally purified.

192 ‘ THOSE men of the twiceborn classes, to whom

M m m m

‘ the gáyatrî has not been repeated and explained, according to law, the assembly must cause to perform three prájápatya penances, and afterwards to be girt with the sacred string;

193 ‘ And the same penance they must prescribe to such twiceborn men, as are anxious to atone for some illegal act, or a neglect of the Véda.

194 ‘ If priests have accepted any property from base hands, they may be absolved by relinquishing the presents, by repeating mysterious texts, and by acts of devotion:

195 ‘ By three thousand repetitions of the gáyatrî with intense application of mind, and by subsisting on milk only for a whole month in the pasture of cows, a Bráhmén, who has received any gift from a bad man, or a bad gift from any man, may be cleared from sin.

196 ‘ When he has been mortified by abstinence, and has returned from the pasturage, let him bend low to the other Bráhméns, who must thus interrogate him: “Art thou really desirous, good man, of readmission to an equality with us?”

197 ‘ If he answer in the affirmative, let him give some grass to the cows, and in the place, made pure by their having eaten on it, let the men of his class give their assent to his readmission.

198 ‘ He, who has officiated at a sacrifice for outcasts, or burned the corpse of a stranger, or performed rites to destroy the innocent, or made the impure sacrifice, called Ahína, may expiate his guilt by three prájápatya penances.

199 ‘ A TWICEBORN man, who has rejected a suppliant for his protection, or taught the Véda on a forbidden

‘ day, may atone for his offence by subsisting a whole year ‘ on barley alone.

200 ‘ HE, who has been bitten by a dog, a shakal, or an ‘ ass, by any carnivorous animal frequenting a town, by a ‘ man, a horse, a camel, or a boar, may be purified by stop‘ ping his breath during one repetition of the gáyatrî.

201 ‘ TO eat only at the time of the sixth meal, or on the ‘ evening of every third day, for a month, to repeat a Sanhitâ
‘ of the Védas, and to make eight oblations to fire, accompa‘ nied with eight holy texts, are always an expiation for those, ‘ who are excluded from society at repasts.

202 ‘ SHOULD a Bráhmén voluntarily ascend a car‘ riage borne by camels or drawn by asses, or designedly bathe ‘ quite naked, he may be absolved by one suppression of ‘ breath, while he repeats in his mind the most holy ‘ text.

203 ‘ HE, who has made any excretion, being greatly ‘ pressed, either without water near him, or in water, may ‘ be purified by bathing in his clothes out of town, and by ‘ touching a cow.

204 ‘ FOR an omission of the acts, which the Véda com‘ mands to be constantly performed, and for a violation of ‘ the duties prescribed to a housekeeper, the atonement is ‘ fasting one day.

205 ‘ HE, who says hush or pish to a Bráhmén, or thou ‘ to a superior, must immediately bathe, eat nothing for the ‘ rest of the day, and appease him by clasping his feet with ‘ respectful salutation.

206 ‘ For striking a Bráhmén even with a blade of grass, ‘ or tying him by the neck with a cloth, or overpowering

‘ him in argument, and adding contemptuous words, the offender must sooth him by falling prostrate.

207 ‘ An assaulter of a Bráhmén, with intent to kill, shall remain in hell a hundred years; for actually striking him with the like intent, a thousand:

208 ‘ As many small pellets of dust as the blood of a Bráhmén collects on the ground, for so many thousand years must the shedder of that blood be tormented in hell.

209 ‘ For a simple assault, the first or common penance must be performed; for a battery, the third or very severe penance; but for shedding blood, without killing, both of those penances.

210 ‘ To remove the sins, for which no particular penance has been ordained, the assembly must award a fit expiation, considering the ability of the sinner to perform it, and the nature of the sin.

211 ‘ THOSE penances, by which a man may atone for his crimes, I now will describe to you; penances, which have been performed by deities, by holy sages, and by forefathers of the human race.

212 ‘ WHEN a twiceborn man performs the common penance, or that of PRAJÁPATI, he must for three days eat only in the morning; for three days, only in the evening; for three days, food unasked but presented to him; and for three more days, nothing.

213 ‘ Eating for a whole day the dung and urine of cows mixed with curds, milk, clarified butter, and water boiled with cusa grass, and then fasting entirely for a day and a night, is the penance called Sántapana, either from the devout man SANTAPANA, or from tormenting.

214 ‘ A twiceborn man performing the penance, called ‘ very severe, in respect of the common, must eat, as be‘ fore, a single mouthful, or a ball of rice as large as a hen’s egg, ‘ for three times three days; and for the last three days, ‘ must wholly abstain from food.

215 ‘ A Bráhmén, performing the ardent penance, must ‘ swallow nothing but hot water, hot milk, hot clarified ‘ butter, and hot steam, each of them for three days succe‘ ssively, performing an ablution and mortifying all his mem‘ bers.

216 ‘ A total fast for twelve days and nights, by a pe‘ nitent with his organs controlled and his mind attentive, is ‘ the penance named paráca, which expiates all degrees of ‘ guilt.

217 ‘ If he diminish his food by one mouthful each ‘ day during the dark fortnight, eating fifteen mouthfuls on the ‘ day of the opposition, and increase it in the same proportion, du‘ ring the bright fortnight, fasting entirely on the day of the ‘ conjunction, and perform an ablution regularly at sunrise, ‘ noon, and sunset, this is the chándráyana, or the lunar pe‘ nance:

218 ‘ Such is the penance called ant-shaped or narrow in ‘ the middle; but, if he perform the barley-shaped or broad in ‘ the middle, he must observe the same rule, beginning with ‘ the bright halfmonth, and keeping under command his ‘ organs of action and sense.

219 ‘ To perform the lunar penance of an anchorite, he ‘ must eat only eight mouthfuls of forest grains at noon for ‘ a whole month, taking care to subdue his mind.

220 ‘ If a Bráhmén eat only four mouthfuls at sunrise,

‘ and four at sunset, for a month, keeping his organs controlled, he performs the lunar penance of children.

221 ‘ He, who, for a whole month, eats no more than thrice eighty mouthfuls of wild grains, as he happens by any means to meet with them, keeping his organs in subjection, shall attain the same abode with the regent of the moon:

222 ‘ The eleven Rudras, the twelve Ādityas, the eight Vasus, the Maruts, or genii of the winds, and the seven great Rishis, have performed this lunar penance as a security from all evil.

223 ‘ The oblation of clarified butter to fire must every day be made by the penitent himself, accompanied with the mighty words earth, sky, heaven; he must perfectly abstain from injury to sentient creatures, from falsehood, from wrath, and from all crooked ways.

224 ‘ Or, thrice each day and thrice each night for a month, the penitent may plunge into water clothed in his mantle, and at no time conversing with a woman, a Sūdra, or an outcast.

225 ‘ LET him be always in motion, sitting and rising alternately; or, if unable to be thus restless, let him sleep low on the bare ground; chaste as a student of the Vēda, bearing the sacred zone and staff, showing reverence to his preceptor, to the gods, and to priests;

226 ‘ Perpetually must he repeat the gāyatrī, and other pure texts to the best of his knowledge: thus in all penances for absolution from sin, must he vigilantly employ himself.

227 ‘ By these expiations are twiceborn men absolved, whose offences are publicly known, and are mischievous by their example; but for sins not publick, the assembly of priests must award them penances, with holy texts and oblations to fire.

228 ‘ By open confession, by repentance, by devotion; and by reading the scripture, a sinner may be released from his guilt; or by almsgiving, in case of his inability to perform the other acts of religion.

229 ‘ In proportion as a man, who has committed a sin, shall truly and voluntarily confess it, so far he is disengaged from that offence, like a snake from his slough;

230 ‘ And, in proportion as his heart sincerely loathes his evil deed, so far shall his vital spirit be freed from the taint of it.

231 ‘ If he commit sin, and actually repent, that sin shall be removed from him; but if he merely say, “ I will sin thus no more,” he can only be released by an actual abstinence from guilt.

232 ‘ Thus revolving in his mind the certainty of retribution in a future state, let him be constantly good in thoughts, words, and action.

233 ‘ If he desire complete remission of any foul act which he has committed, either ignorantly or knowingly, let him beware of committing it again: for the second fault his penance must be doubled.

234 ‘ If, having performed any expiation, he feel not a perfect satisfaction of conscience, let him repeat the same devout act, until his conscience be perfectly satisfied.

235 ‘ All the bliss of deities and of men is declared by sages, who discern the sense of the Véda, to have in devo‘ tion its cause, in devotion its continuance, in devotion its ‘ fullness.

236 ‘ Devotion is equal to the performance of all duties ; ‘ it is divine knowledge in a Bráhma ; it is defence of the ‘ people in a Cshatriya ; devotion is the business of trade and ‘ agriculture in a Vaisya ; devotion is dutiful service in a Súdra.

237 ‘ Holy sages, with subdued passions, feeding only ‘ on fruit, roots, and air, by devotion alone are enabled to ‘ survey the three worlds, terrestrial, ethereal, and celestial, ‘ peopled with animal creatures, locomotive and fixed.

238 ‘ Perfect health, or unfailing medicines, divine ‘ learning, and the various mansions of deities, are acquired ‘ by devotion alone : their efficient cause is devotion.

239 ‘ Whatever is hard to be traversed, whatever is hard ‘ to be acquired, whatever is hard to be visited, whatever is hard ‘ to be performed, all this may be accomplished by true de‘ votion ; for the difficulty of devotion is the greatest of all.

240 ‘ Even sinners in the highest degree, and of course
‘ the other offenders, are absolved from guilt by austere de‘ votion well-practised.

241 ‘ Souls, that animate worms, and insects, serpents, ‘ moths, beasts, birds, and vegetables, attain heaven by the ‘ power of devotion.

242 ‘ Whatever sin has been conceived in the hearts ‘ of men, uttered in their speech, or committed in their ‘ bodily acts, they speedily burn it all away by devotion, ‘ if they preserve devotion as their best wealth.

243 ‘ Of a priest, whom devotion has purified, the di‘ vine spirits accept the sacrifices, and grant the desires with ‘ ample increase.

244 ‘ Even BRAHMA, lord of creatures, by devotion enacted this code of laws; and the sages by devotion acquired a knowledge of the Védas.

245 ‘ Thus the gods themselves, observing in this universe the incomparable power of devotion, have proclaimed aloud the transcendent excellence of pious austerity.

246 ‘ By reading each day as much as possible of the Véda, by performing the five great sacraments, and by forgiving all injuries, even sins of the highest degree shall be soon effaced :

247 ‘ As fire consumes in an instant with his bright flame the wood, that has been placed on it, thus, with the flame of knowledge, a Bráhmen, who understands the Véda, consumes all sin.

248 ‘ Thus has been declared, according to law, the mode of atoning for open sins: now learn the mode of obtaining absolution for secret offences.

249 ‘ SIXTEEN suppressions of the breath, while the holiest of texts is repeated with the three mighty words, and the triliteral syllable, continued each day for a month, absolve even the slayer of a Bráhmen from his hidden faults.

250 ‘ Even a drinker of spirituous liquor is absolved by repeating each day the text apa used by the sage CAUTSA, or that beginning with preti used by VASISHT’HA, or that called máhitra, or that, of which the first word is juddhavatyah.

251 ‘ By repeating each day for a month the text ásyavámíya, or the hymn Sivasancalpa, the stealer of gold from a priest becomes instantly pure.

252 ‘ He, who has violated the bed of his preceptor, is cleared from secret faults by repeating sixteen times a day the

O o o o

‘ text havishyantiya, or that beginning with na tamanhah, or ‘ by revolving in his mind the sixteen holy verses, called ‘ Paurusha.

253 ‘ The man, who desires to expiate his hidden sins ‘ great and small, must repeat once a day for a year the text ‘ ava, or the text yatcinchida.

254 ‘ He, who has accepted an illegal present, or eaten ‘ prohibited food, may be cleansed in three days by repeat‘ ing the text taratsamandiya.

255 ‘ Though he have committed many secret sins, he ‘ shall be purified by repeating for a month the text sómá- ‘ raudra or the three texts áryamna, while he bathes in a sacred ‘ stream.

256 ‘ A grievous offender must repeat the seven verses, ‘ beginning with INDRA, for half a year; and he, who has ‘ defiled water with any impurity, must sit a whole year sub‘ sisting by alms.

257 ‘ A twiceborn man, who shall offer clarified butter ‘ for a year, with eight texts appropriated to eight several ‘ oblations, or with the text na mé, shall efface a sin even of ‘ an extremely high degree.

258 ‘ He, who had committed a crime of the first de‘ gree, shall be absolved, if he attend a herd of kine for a ‘ year, mortify his organs, and continually repeat the texts be‘ ginning with pávamáni, living solely on food given in charity:

259 ‘ Or, if he thrice repeat a Sanhitá of the Védas, or a ‘ large portion of them with all the mantras and bráhmanas, ‘ dwelling in a forest with subdued organs, and purified by ‘ three parácas, he shall be set free from all sins how hei‘ nous soever.

260 ‘ Or he shall be released from all deadly sins, if he ‘ fast three days, with his members mortified, and twice a ‘ day plunge into water, thrice repeating the text aghamarshana:

261 ‘ As the sacrifice of a horse, the king of sacrifices, ‘ removes all sins, thus the text aghamarshana destroys all ‘ offences.

262 ‘ A priest, who should retain in his memory the ‘ whole Rigvéda, would be absolved from guilt, even if he ‘ had slain the inhabitants of the three worlds, and had ea‘ ten food from the foulest hands.

263 ‘ By thrice repeating the mantras and bráhmanas of ‘ the Rîch, or those of the Yajush, or those of the Sáman, with ‘ the upanishads, he shall perfectly be cleansed from every ‘ possible taint:

264 ‘ As a clod of earth, cast into a great lake, sinks in ‘ it, thus is every sinful act submerged in the triple Véda.

265 ‘ The divisions of the Rîch, the several branches of ‘ the Yajush, and the manifold strains of the Sáman must be ‘ considered as forming the triple Véda: he knows the Véda, ‘ who knows them collectively.

266 ‘ The primary triliteral syllable, in which the three ‘ Védas themselves are comprised, must be kept secret, as ‘ another triple Véda: he knows the Véda, who distinctly ‘ knows the mystick sense of that word.’

CHAPTER THE TWELFTH:

ON TRANSMIGRATION AND FINAL BEATITUDE.

1 ‘ O THOU, who art free from sin, said the devout ‘ sages, thou hast declared the whole system of ‘ duties ordained for the four classes of men : explain to us ‘ now, from the first principles, the ultimate retribution for ‘ their deeds.

2 BHRĪGU, whose heart was the pure essence of virtue, who proceeded from MENU himself, thus addressed the great sages : ‘ Hear the infallible rules for the fruit of deeds ‘ in this universe.

3 ‘ ACTION, either mental, verbal, or corporeal, bears ‘ good or evil fruit, as itself is good or evil ; and from the ac‘ tions of men proceed their various transmigrations in the ‘ highest, the mean, and the lowest degree :

4 ‘ Of that threefold action, connected with bodily ‘ functions, disposed in three classes, and consisting of ten ‘ orders, be it known in this world, that the heart is the in‘ stigator.

5 ‘ Devising means to appropriate the wealth of other ‘ men, resolving on any forbidden deed, and conceiving no-

‘ tions of atheism or materialism, are the three bad acts of ‘ the mind :

6 ‘ Scurrilous language, falsehood, indiscriminate back-‘ biting, and useless tattle, are the four bad acts of the ‘ tongue:

7 ‘ Taking effects not given, hurting sentient creatures ‘ without the sanction of law, and criminal intercourse with ‘ the wife of another, are the three bad acts of the body;
‘ and all the ten have their opposites, which are good in an equal ‘ degree.

8 ‘ A rational creature has a reward or a punishment ‘ for mental acts, in his mind ; for verbal acts, in his organs
‘ of speech ; for corporeal acts, in his bodily frame.

9 ‘ For sinful acts mostly corporeal, a man shall assume ‘ after death a vegetable or mineral form ; for such acts most‘ ly verbal, the form of a bird or a beast ; for acts mostly ‘ mental, the lowest of human conditions :

10 ‘ He, whose firm understanding obtains a command ‘ over his words, a command over his thoughts, and a ‘ command over his whole body, may justly be called a tri- ‘ dandî, or triple commander; not a mere anchorite, who bears ‘ three visible slaves.

11 ‘ The man, who exerts this triple selfcommand with ‘ respect to all animated creatures, wholly subduing both lust
‘ and wrath, shall by those means attain beatitude.

12 ‘ THAT substance, which gives a power of motion to ‘ the body, the wise call śhétrajnya, or jívâtman, the vital ‘ spirit ; and that body, which thence derives active func‘ tions, they name bhútâtman, or composed of elements :

13 ‘ Another internal spirit, called mahat, or the great

‘ soul, attends the birth of all creatures imbodyed, and ‘ thence in all mortal forms is conveyed a perception ‘ either pleasing or painful.

14 ‘ Those two, the vital spirit and reasonable soul, are ‘ closely united with five elements, but connected with the ‘ supreme spirit, or divine essence, which pervades all beings
‘ high and low :

15 ‘ From the substance of that supreme spirit are diffu‘ sed, like sparks from fire, innumerable vital spirits, which ‘ perpetually give motion to creatures exalted and base.

16 ‘ By the vital souls of those men, who have com‘ mitted sins in the body reduced to ashes, another body, com‘ posed of nerves with five sensations, in order to be suf-‘ ceptible of torment, shall certainly be assumed after ‘ death ;

17 ‘ And, being intimately united with those minute ‘ nervous particles, according to their distribution, they ‘ shall feel, in that new body, the pangs inflicted in each ‘ case by the sentence of YAMA.

18 When the vital soul has gathered the fruit of sins,
‘ which arise from a love of sensual pleasure, but must pro‘ duce misery, and, when its taint has thus been removed, ‘ it approaches again those two most effulgent essences the ‘ intellectual soul and the divine spirit :

19 ‘ They two, closely conjoined, examine without ‘ remission the virtues and vices of that sensitive soul, ac‘ cording to its union with which it acquires pleasure or pain ‘ in the present and future worlds.

20 ‘ If the vital spirit had practised virtue for the most ‘ part and vice in a small degree, it enjoys delight in celest-

‘ tial abodes, clothed with a body formed of pure elementary particles ;

21 ‘ But, if it had generally been addicted to vice, and seldom attended to virtue, then shall it be deserted by those pure elements, and, having a coarser body of sensible nerves, it feels the pains to which YAMA shall doom it :

22 ‘ Having endured those torments according to the sentence of YAMA, and its taint being almost removed, it again reaches those five pure elements in the order of their natural distribution.

23 ‘ Let each man, considering with his intellectual powers these migrations of the soul according to its virtue or vice, into a region of bliss or pain, continually fix his heart on virtue.

24 ‘ BE it known, that the three qualities of the rational soul are a tendency to goodness, to passion, and to darkness; and, endued with one or more of them, it remains incessantly attached to all these created substances :

25 ‘ When any one of the three qualities predominates in a mortal frame, it renders the embodied spirit eminently distinguished for that quality.

26 ‘ Goodness is declared to be true knowledge; darkness, gross ignorance; passion, an emotion of desire or aversion: such is the compendious description of those qualities, which attend all souls.

27 ‘ When a man perceives in the reasonable soul a disposition tending to virtuous love, unclouded with any malignant passion, clear as the purest light, let him recognise it as the quality of goodness :

28 ‘ A temper of mind, which gives uneasiness and

‘ produces disaffection, let him consider as the adverse quality of passion, ever agitating imbodied spirits:

29 ‘ That indistinct, inconceivable, unaccountable disposition of a mind naturally sensual, and clouded with infatuation, let him know to be the quality of darkness.

30 ‘ Now will I declare at large the various acts, in the highest, middle, and lowest degrees, which proceed from those three dispositions of mind.

31 ‘ Study of scripture, austere devotion, sacred knowledge, corporeal purity, command over the organs, performance of duties, and meditation on the divine spirit, accompany the good quality of the soul:

32 ‘ Interested motives for acts of religion or morality, perturbation of mind on slight occasions, commission of acts forbidden by law, and habitual indulgence in selfish gratifications, are attendant on the quality of passion:

33 ‘ Covetousness, indolence, avarice, detraction, atheism, omission of prescribed acts, a habit of soliciting favours, and inattention to necessary business, belong to the dark quality.

34 ‘ Of those three qualities, as they appear in the three times, past, present, and future, the following in order from the lowest may be considered as a short but certain criterion.

35 ‘ Let the wise consider, as belonging to the quality of darkness, every act, which a man is ashamed of having done, of doing, or of going to do:

36 ‘ Let them consider, as proceeding from the quality of passion, every act, by which a man seeks exaltation and celebrity in this world, though he may not be much afflicted, if he fail of attaining his object:

Q q q q

37 ‘ To the quality of goodness belongs every act, by ‘ which he hopes to acquire divine knowledge, which he is ‘ never ashamed of doing and which brings placid joy to ‘ his conscience.

38 ‘ Of the dark quality, as described, the principal ob‘ ject is pleasure; of the passionate, worldly prosperity; but ‘ of the good quality, the chief object is virtue: the last ‘ mentioned objects are superiour in dignity.

39 ‘ SUCH transmigrations, as the soul procures in this ‘ universe by each of those qualities, I now will declare in ‘ order succinctly.

40 ‘ Souls, endued with goodness, attain always the ‘ state of deities; those filled with ambitious passions, the ‘ condition of men; and those immersed in darkness, the ‘ nature of beasts: this is the triple order of transmigration.

41 ‘ Each of those three transmigrations, caused by the ‘ several qualities, must also be considered as threefold, the ‘ lowest, the mean, and the highest, according to as many ‘ distinctions of acts and of knowledge.

42 ‘ Vegetable and mineral substances, worms, insects,
 ‘ and reptiles, some very minute, some rather larger, fish, ‘ snakes, tortoises, cattle, shakals, are the lowest forms, to ‘ which the dark quality leads:

43 ‘ Elephants, horses, men of the servile class, and con‘ temptible Mléch’has, or barbarians, lions, tigers, and boars, ‘ are the mean states procured by the quality of darkness:

44 ‘ Dancers and singers, birds, and deceitful men, gi‘ ants and bloodthirsty savages, are the highest conditions, ‘ to which the dark quality can ascend.

45 ‘ F’hallas, or cudgelplayers, Mallas, or boxers and ‘ wrestlers, Natas, or actors, those who teach the use of ‘ weapons, and those who are addicted to gaming or drink‘ ing, are the lowest forms occasioned by the passionate qua‘ lity :

46 ‘ Kings, men of the fighting class, domestick priests ‘ of kings, and men skilled in the war of controversy, are ‘ the middle states caused by the quality of passion :

47 ‘ Gandharvas, or aerial musicians, Guhyacas and ‘ Yacshas, or servants and companions of CUVE´RA, genii at‘ tending superiour gods, as the Vidyádharas and others, to‘ gether with various companies of Apsarases or nymphs, are ‘ the highest of those forms, which the quality of passion at‘ tains.

48 ‘ Hermits, religious mendicants, other Bráhmens,
 ‘ such orders of demigods as are wafted in airy cars, genii
 ‘ of the signs and lunar mansions, and Daityas, or the off‘ spring of DITI, are the lowest of states procured by the ‘ quality of goodness :

49 ‘ Sacrificers, holy sages, deities of the lower heaven, ‘ genii of the Védas, regents of stars not in the paths of the sun
 ‘ and moon, divinities of years, Pitrīs or progenitors of man‘ kind, and the demigods named Sádhyas, are the middle ‘ forms, to which the good quality conveys all spirits moder- ‘ ately endued with it :

50 ‘ BRAHMA´ with four faces, creators of worlds under ‘ him, as MARI´CHI and others, the genius of virtue, the divi‘ nities presiding over (two principles of nature in the philosophy ‘ of CAPILA) mahat, or the mighty, and avyaḥta, or unperceiv‘ ed, are the highest conditions, to which, by the good qua‘ lity, souls are exalted.

51 ‘ This triple system of transmigrations, in which ‘ each class has three orders, according to actions of three ‘ kinds, and which comprises all animated beings, has been ‘ revealed in its full extent :

52 ‘ Thus, by indulging the sensual appetites, and by ‘ neglecting the performance of duties, the basest of men, ‘ ignorant of sacred expiations, assume the basest forms.

53 ‘ WHAT particular bodies the vital spirit enters in ‘ this world, and in consequence of what sins here commit‘ ted, now hear at large and in order.

54 ‘ Sinners in the first degree, having passed through ‘ terrible regions of torture for a great number of years, are ‘ condemned to the following births at the close of that pe‘ riod to efface all remains of their sin.

55 ‘ The slayer of a Bráhmén must enter according to the ‘ circumstances of his crime the body of a dog, a boar, an ass, a ‘ camel, a bull, a goat, a sheep, a stag, a bird, a Chandála, ‘ or a Puccasa.

56 ‘ A priest, who has drunk spirituous liquor, shall mi‘ grate into the form of a smaller or larger worm or insect,
 ‘ of a moth, of a fly feeding on ordure, or of some rave‘ nous animal.

57 ‘ He, who steals the gold of a priest, shall pass a thou‘ sand times into the bodies of spiders, of snakes and came-‘ leons, of crocodiles and other aquatick monsters, or of mis‘ chievous bloodsucking demons.

58 ‘ He, who violates the bed of his natural or spiritual ‘ father, migrates a hundred times into the forms of grasses,
 ‘ of shrubs with crowded stems, or of creeping and twining ‘ plants, of vultures and other carnivorous animals, of lions

‘ and other beasts with sharp teeth, or of tigers and other cruel ‘ brutes.

59 ‘ They, who hurt any sentient beings, are born cats
 ‘ and other eaters of raw flesh; they, who taste what ought ‘ not to be tasted, maggots or small flies; they, who steal ‘ ordinary things, devourers of each other: they, who embrace ‘ very low women, become restless ghosts.

60 ‘ He, who has held intercourse with degraded men, ‘ or been criminally connected with the wife of another, or ‘ stolen common things from a priest, shall be changed into a ‘ spirit, called Brahmarácskasa.

61 ‘ The wretch, who through covetousness has stolen ‘ rubies or other gems, pearls, or coral, or precious things of ‘ which there are many sorts, shall be born in the tribe of ‘ goldsmiths, or among birds called hémacáras, or goldmakers.

62 ‘ If a man steal grain in the husk, he shall be born a ‘ rat; if a yellow mixed metal, a gander; if water, a plava,
 ‘ or diver; if honey, a great stinging gnat; if milk, a ‘ crow; if expressed juice, a dog; if clarified butter, an ich-‘ neumon weasel;

63 ‘ If he steal fleshmeat, a vulture; if any sort of fat,
 ‘ the waterbird madgu; if oil, a blatta, or oil-drinking bee‘ tle; if salt, a cicada or cricket; if curds, the bird ‘ valáca;

64 ‘ If silken clothes, the bird tittiri; if woven flax,
 ‘ a frog; if cotton cloth, the water bird crauncha; if a cow,
 ‘ the lizard gódhá; if molasses, the bird vágguda;

65 ‘ If exquisite perfumes, a muskrat; if potherbs, a ‘ peacock; if dressed grain in any of its various forms, a por‘ cupine; if raw grain, a hedgehog;

66 ' If he steal fire, the bird vaca; if a household
' utensil, an ichneumon-fly; if dyed cloth, the bird chacóra;

67 ' If a deer or an elephant, he shall be born a wolf;
' if a horse, a tiger; if roots or fruit, an ape; if a woman, a
' bear; if water from a jar, the bird chátaca; if carriages, a
' camel; if small cattle, a goat.

68 ' That man, who designedly takes away the proper' ty of another, or eats any holy cakes not first presented to
' the deity at a solemn rite, shall inevitably sink to the con-
' dition of a brute.

69 ' Women, who have committed similar thefts, incur
' a similar taint, and shall be paired with those male beasts -
' in the form of their females.

70 ' If any of the four classes omit, without urgent ne' cessity, the performance of their several duties, they shall
' migrate into sinful bodies, and become slaves to their
' foes.

71 ' Should a Bráhmen omit his peculiar duty, he shall
' be changed into a demon called Ulcámuc'ha, or with a mouth
' like a firebrand, who devours what has been vomited; a
' Cshatriya, into a demon called Catapútana, who feeds on
' ordure and carrion;

72 ' A Vaisya, into an evil being called Maitrácshajyótica,
' who eats purulent carcases; and a Súdra, who neglects his
' occupations, becomes a foul embodied spirit called Chailásá-
' ca, who feeds on lice.

73 ' As far as vital souls, addicted to sensuality, indulge
' themselves in forbidden pleasures, even to the same degree
' shall the acuteness of their senses be raised in their future
' bodies, that they may endure analogous pains;

74 ‘ And, in consequence of their folly, they shall be ‘ doomed as often as they repeat their criminal acts, to pains ‘ more and more intense in despicable forms on this ‘ earth.

75 ‘ They shall first have a sensation of agony in Támis-
‘ ra or utter darkness, and in other seats of horror; in Asipa- ‘ travana, or the swordleaved forest, and in different places of ‘ binding fast and of rending:

76 ‘ Multifarious tortures await them: they shall be ‘ mangled by ravens and owls, shall swallow cakes boiling ‘ hot; shall walk over inflamed sands; and shall feel the ‘ pangs of being baked like the vessels of a potter:

77 ‘ They shall assume the forms of beasts continually ‘ miserable, and suffer alternate afflictions from extremities of ‘ cold and of heat, surrounded with terrors of various kinds:

78 ‘ More than once shall they lie in different wombs;
‘ and, after agonizing births, be condemned to severe capti‘ vity, and to servile attendance on creatures like them‘ selves:

79 Then shall follow separations from kindred and ‘ friends, forced residence with the wicked, painful gains and ‘ ruinous losses of wealth; friendships hardly acquired and ‘ at length changed into enmities,

80 ‘ Old age without resource, diseases attended with ‘ anguish, pangs of innumerable sorts, and, lastly, unconque‘ rable death.

81 ‘ With whatever disposition of mind a man shall ‘ perform in this life any act religious or moral, in a future ‘ body endued with the same quality, shall he receive his ‘ retribution.

82 ‘ THUS has been revealed to you the system of punishments for evil deeds: next learn those acts of a Bráhmén, which lead to eternal bliss.

83 ‘ Studying and comprehending the Véda, practising pious austerities, acquiring divine knowledge of law and philosophy, command over the organs of sense and action, avoiding all injury to sentient creatures, and showing reverence to a natural and spiritual father, are the chief branches of duty which ensure final happiness.’

84 ‘ Among all those good acts performed in this world, said the sages, is no single act held more powerful than the rest in leading men to beatitude?’

85 ‘ OF all those duties, answered BHRĪGU, the principal is to acquire from the Upanishads a true knowledge of one supreme GOD; that is the most exalted of all sciences, because it ensures immortality:

86 ‘ In this life, indeed, as well as the next, the study of the Véda, to acquire a knowledge of GOD, is held the most efficacious of those six duties in procuring felicity to man;

87 ‘ For in the knowledge and adoration of one GOD, which the Véda teaches, all the rules of good conduct, beforementioned in order, are fully comprised.

88 ‘ THE ceremonial duty, prescribed by the Véda, is of two kinds; one connected with this world, and causing prosperity on earth; the other abstracted from it, and procuring bliss in heaven.

89 ‘ A religious act proceeding from selfish views in this world, as a sacrifice for rain, or in the next, as a pious oblation in hope of a future reward, is declared to be concrete

‘ and interested ; but an act performed with a knowledge of ‘ GOD, and without self love, is called abstract and disinterested.

90 ‘ He, who frequently performs interested rites, attains
 ‘ an equal station with the regents of the lower heaven ; ‘ but he, who frequently performs disinterested acts of religion, ‘ becomes for ever exempt from a body composed of the five ‘ elements :

91 ‘ Equally perceiving the supreme soul in all beings
 ‘ and all beings in the supreme soul, he sacrifices his own ‘ spirit by fixing it on the spirit of GOD, and approaches the ‘ nature of that sole divinity, who shines by his own effulgence.

92 ‘ Thus must the chief of the twiceborn, though he ‘ neglect the ceremonial rites mentioned in the Sástras, be ‘ diligent alike in attaining a knowledge of GOD and in ‘ repeating the Véda :

93 ‘ Such is the advantageous privilege of those, who ‘ have a double birth from their natural mothers and from the ‘ gáyatrì their spiritual mother, especially of a Bráhmen ; since ‘ the twiceborn man, by performing this duty but not other‘ wise, may soon acquire endless felicity.

94 ‘ To patriarchs, to deities, and to mankind, the ‘ scripture is an eye giving constant light ; nor could the ‘ Véda Sástra have been made by human faculties ; nor can ‘ it be measured by human reason unassisted by revealed glosses
 ‘ and comments : this is a sure proposition.

95 ‘ Such codes of law as are not grounded on the Véda,
 ‘ and the various heterodox theories of men, produce no ‘ good fruit after death ; for they all are declared to have ‘ their basis on darkness.

96 ‘ All systems, which are repugnant to the Véda, must ‘ have been composed by mortals, and shall soon perish :

 ‘ their modern date proves them vain and false.

97 ‘ The three worlds, the four classes of men, and their ‘ four distinct orders, with all that has been, all that is, and ‘ all that will be, are made known by the Véda :

98 ‘ The nature of sound, of tangible and visible shape,
 ‘ of taste, and of odour, the fifth object of sense, is clearly ex‘ plained in the Véda alone, together with the three qualities of ‘ mind, the births attended with them, and the acts which ‘ they occasion.

99 ‘ All creatures are sustained by the primeval Véda ‘ Sástra, which the wise therefore hold supreme, because it is ‘ the supreme source of prosperity to this creature, man.

100 ‘ Command of armies, royal authority, power of ‘ inflicting punishment, and sovereign dominion over all ‘ nations, he only well-deserves, who perfectly understands ‘ the Véda Sástra.

101 ‘ As fire with augmented force burns up even ‘ humid trees, thus he, who well knows the Véda, burns ‘ out the taint of sin, which has infected his soul.

102 ‘ He, who completely knows the sense of the Véda
 ‘ Sástra, while he remains in any one of the four orders, ‘ approaches the divine nature, even though he sojourn in ‘ this low world.

103 ‘ They, who have read many books, are more ‘ exalted than such, as have seldom studied; they, who re‘ tain what they have read, than forgetful readers; they, who ‘ fully understand, than such as only remember; and they,
 ‘ who perform their known duty, than such men, as barely ‘ know it.

104 ‘ Devotion and sacred knowledge are the best means;
 ‘ by which a Bráhmén can arrive at beatitude : by devotion
 ‘ he may destroy guilt ; by sacred knowledge he may acquire ‘ immortal glory.

105 ‘ Three modes of proof, ocular demonstration, lo‘ gical inference, and the authority of those various books,
 ‘ which are deduced from the Véda, must be well understood ‘ by that man, who seeks a distinct knowledge of all his ‘ duties :

106 ‘ He alone comprehends the system of duties reli‘ gious and civil, who can reason, by rules of logick agree‘ able to the Véda, on the general heads of that system as ‘ revealed by the holy sages.

107 ‘ These rules of conduct, which lead to supreme ‘ bliss, have been exactly and comprehensively declared : the ‘ more secret learning of this Mánava Sástra shall now be ‘ disclosed.

108 ‘ If it be asked, how the law shall be ascertained, ‘ when particular cases are not comprised under any of the ‘ general rules, the answer is this : “ That, which well instructed ‘ Bráhmens propound, shall be held incontestable law.”

109 ‘ Well instructed Bráhmens are they, who can ad‘ duce ocular proof from the scripture itself, having studied,
 ‘ as the law ordains, the Védas and their extended branches,
 ‘ or Védángas, Mímánsà, Nyáya, Dhermasástra, Puránas :

110 ‘ A point of law, before not expressly revealed, which ‘ shall be decided by an assembly of ten such virtuous ‘ Bráhmens under one chief, or, if ten be not procurable, of ‘ three such under one president, let no man controvert.

111 ‘ The assembly of ten under a chief either the king

‘ himself or a judge appointed by him, must consist of three,
 ‘ each of them peculiarly conversant with one of the three ‘ Védas, of a fourth skilled in the Nyáya, and a fifth in the ‘ Mímáṃsá philosophy; of a sixth, who has particularly stu‘ died the Niručta; a seventh, who has applied himself most ‘ assiduously to the Dharmasāstra; and of three universal scho- ‘ lars, who are in the three first orders.

112 ‘ One, who has chiefly studied the Rīgvéda, a se‘ cond, who principally knows the Yajush, and a third best ‘ acquainted with the Sáman, are the assembly of three under ‘ a head, who may remove all doubts both in law and ‘ casuistry.

113 ‘ Even the decision of one priest, if more cannot be ‘ assembled, who perfectly knows the principles of the Védas, ‘ must be considered as law of the highest authority; not ‘ the opinion of myriads, who have no sacred knowledge.

114 ‘ Many thousands of Bráhmens cannot form a le‘ gal assembly for the decision of contests, if they have ‘ not performed the duties of a regular studentship, are ‘ unacquainted with scriptural texts, and subsist only by ‘ the name of their sacerdotal class.

115 ‘ The sin of that man, to whom dunces, pervaded ‘ by the quality of darkness, propound the law, of which ‘ they are themselves ignorant, shall pass, increased a hun‘ dredfold, to the wretches who propound it.

116 ‘ This comprehensive system of duties, the chief ‘ cause of ultimate felicity, has been declared to you; and ‘ the Bráhmen, who never departs from it, shall attain a ‘ superiour state above.

117 ‘ THUS did the allwise MENU, who possesses ex-

‘ tenfive dominion, and blazes with heavenly splendour, ‘ difclofe to me, from his benevolence to mankind, this ‘ tranfcendent fyftem of law, which muft be kept devoutly ‘ concealed from persons unfit to receive it.

118 ‘ LET every Bráhmén with fixed attention confider ‘ all nature, both vifible and invifible, as exifting in the ‘ divine fpirit; for, when he contemplates the boundlefs ‘ univerfe exifting in the divine fpirit, he cannot give his ‘ heart to iniquity :

119 ‘ The divine fpirit alone is the whole affemblage ‘ of gods; all worlds are feated in the divine fpirit, and the ‘ divine fpirit no doubt produces, by a chain of caufes and ‘ effects confiftent with free will, the connected ferief of acts ‘ performed by imbodied fouls.

120 ‘ He may contemplate the fubtil ether in the ca‘ vities of his body; the air in his mufcular motion and ‘ fenfitive nerves; the fupreme solar and igneous light, in his ‘ digeftive heat and his vifual organs; in his corporeal fluids, ‘ water; in the terrene parts of his fabrick, earth;

121 ‘ In his heart, the moon; in his auditory nerves,
 ‘ the guardians of eight regions; in his progreflive motion, ‘ VISHNU; in his mufcular force, HARA; in his organs of ‘ fpeech, AGNI; in excretion, MITRA; in procreation, BRAH-‘ MA:

122 ‘ But he muft confider the fupreme omniprefent in‘ telligence as the fovereign lord of them all, by whose energy ‘ alone they exift; a fpirit, by no means the object of any fenfe,
 ‘ which can only be conceived by a mind wholly abftracted ‘ from matter, and as it were flumbering; but which for the ‘ purpose of affifting his meditation he may imagine more fub-

‘ til than the finest conceivable essence, and more bright ‘ than the purest gold.

123 ‘ Him some adore as transcendently present in ele‘ mentary fire ; others, in MENU, lord of creatures, or an ‘ immediate agent in the creation ; some, as more distinctly ‘ present in INDRA, regent of the clouds and the atmosphere ; ‘ others, in pure air ; others, as the most High Eternal Spi‘ rit.

124 ‘ It is He, who, pervading all beings in five ele-
 ‘ mental forms, causes them by the gradations of birth, ‘ growth, and dissolution, to revolve in this world, until ‘ they deserve beatitude, like the wheels of a car.

125 ‘ Thus the man, who perceives in his own soul
 ‘ the supreme soul present in all creatures, acquires equani-‘ mity toward them all, and shall be absorbed at last in the ‘ highest essence, even that of the Almighty himself.’

126 HERE ended the sacred instructor ; and every twice-born man, who, attentively reading this Mánava Sástra promulgated by BHRÍGU, shall become habitually virtuous, will attain the beatitude which he seeks.

THE END

GENERAL NOTE.

THE learned Hindus are unanimously of opinion, that many laws enacted by MENU, their oldest reputed legislator, were confined to the three first ages of the world, and have no force in the present age, in which a few of them are certainly obsolete; and they ground their opinion on the following texts, which are collected in a work entitled Madana ratna pradīpa:

I. CRATU: In the Cali age a son must not be begotten on a widow by the brother of the deceased husband; nor must a damsel, once given away in marriage, be given a second time; nor must a bull be offered in a sacrifice; nor must a water-pot be carried by a student in theology.

II. VRIHASPATI: 1 Appointments of kinsmen to beget children on widows, or married women, when the husbands are deceased or impotent, are mentioned by the sage MENU, but forbidden by himself with a view to the order of the four ages: no such act can be legally done in this age by any others than the husband.

2 In the first and second ages men were endued with true piety and sound knowledge; so they were in the third age; but in the fourth, a diminution of their moral and intellectual powers was ordained by their Creator:

3 Thus were sons of many different sorts made by ancient sages, but such cannot now be adopted by men destitute of those eminent powers.

III. PARASARA: 1 A man, who has held intercourse with a deadly sinner, must abandon his country in the first age; he must leave his town, in the second; his family, in the third age; but in the fourth he needs only desert the offender.

2 In the first age, he is degraded by mere conversation with a degraded man; in the second, by touching him; in the third, by receiving food from him; but in the fourth, the sinner alone bears his guilt.

IV. NĀRADA: The procreation of a son by a brother of the deceased, the slaughter of cattle in the entertainment of a guest, the repast on fleshmeat at funeral obsequies, and the order of a hermit are forbidden or obsolete in the fourth age.

V. Aditya purāna: 1 What was a duty in the first age must not in all cases be done in the fourth; since, in the Calī yuga, both men and women are addicted to sin:

2 Such are a studentship continued for a very long time, and the necessity of carrying a waterpot, marriage with a paternal kinswoman, or with a near maternal relation, and the sacrifice of a bull,

3 Or of a man, or of a horse: and all spirituous liquor must in the Calī age be avoided by twiceborn men; so must a second gift of a married young woman, whose husband has died before consummation, and the larger portion of an eldest brother, and procreation on a brother's widow or wife.

VI. Smṛiti: 1 The appointment of a man to beget a son on the widow of his brother; the gift of a young married woman to another bridegroom, if her husband should die while she remains a virgin;

2 The marriage of twiceborn men with damsels not of the same class; the slaughter, in a religious war, of Brāhmins, who are assailants with intent to kill;

3 ' Any intercourse with a twiceborn man, who has passed the sea in a ship, even though he have performed an expiation; performances of sacrifices for all sorts of men; and the necessity of carrying a waterpot ;

4 Walking on a pilgrimage till the pilgrim die; and the slaughter of a bull at a sacrifice ; the acceptance of spirituous liquor even at the ceremony called Sautrámani;

5 Receiving what has been licked off, at an oblation to fire, from the pot of clarified butter ; entrance into the third order, or that of a hermit, though ordained for the first ages;

6 The diminution of crimes in proportion to the religious acts and sacred knowledge of the offenders ; the rule of expiation for a Bráhmen extending to death ;

7 The sin of holding any intercourse with sinners ; the secret expiation of any great crimes except theft ; the slaughter of cattle in honour of eminent guests or of ancestors ;

8 The filiation of any but a son legally begotten or given in adoption by his parents ; the desertion of a lawful wife for any offence less than actual adultery :

9 These parts of ancient law were abrogated by wise legislators, as the cases arose at the beginning of the Cali age, with an intent of securing mankind from evil.

ON the preceding texts it must be remarked, that none of them, except that of VRIHASPATI, are cited by CULLÚCA, who never seems to have considered any other laws of MENU as restrained to the three first ages ; that the Smṛiti, or sacred code, is quoted without the name of the legislator ; and that the prohibition, in any age, of self-defence, even against Bráhmens, is repugnant to a text of SUMANTU, to the precept and example of CRISHNA himself, according to the Mahábhárat, and even to a sentence in the Véda, by which every man is commanded to defend his own life from all violent aggressors.

U u u u
